Aguinaldo Stakes His Hopes on the cratic Party and "Auntie" Allies-More Returning

WASHINGTON, Oct. 7.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] War Department officials expect a big battle to be fought in the Philippines before many days have passed. The Americans are massing their forces south of Manila, where a large body of insurgents is located. Probably the main army of the rebels Probably the main army of the rebel is in that vicinity. If there is to be a big battle Aguinaldo undoubtedly does not know about it; and if he learns of the plans there will be no But the department has advices from Gen. Otis which lead it to believe that the Americans can strike an unexpected blow at the rebel forces in that section, and possibly break the backbone of the rebellion in that engagement. The American froops are in splendid condition to enter a serious engagement, if the rebels will fight. AMERICANS CONCENTRATING.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.] NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] A cablegram to the Sun from Manila says the Americans are concentrating in the country south of Manila. Gen. Schwan, with an inde-pendent brigade, joined Gen. Lawton at Bacoor this morning, and Lowe's scouts were brought down from San Fernando in the northern part of the Island, and also sent to Baccor. The Insurgents are numerous in the neigh-borhood of Imus on the south.

MANILLA, Oct. 7, 11 p.m.—[By Manila Cable.] Aguinaldo, in a proclamation announcing the release of American prisoners and authorizing Filipino soldiers in the northern province to return to their homes, says:

"In America there is a great party that insists upon the government rec-ognizing Filipino independence. That party will compel the United States to fulfill the promises made to us in all solemnity and good faith, though not put into writing.

"Therefore, we must show our gratitude and maintain our position, more resolutely than ever. We should pray to God that the great Democratic party may win the next Presidential election, and imperialism fail in its mad attempt to subjugate us by force of arms. There are some Amerin the Philippines who have war of what Mr. Atkinson calls criminal aggression. When offered a chance to return to their own camp, they de-

Throughout the proclamation, Aguinaldo denounces the "imperialists" in-stead of the "Americans" as in former documents. He calls the world to wit-ness that the Filipinos have not broken "the alliance made with the Americans through Admiral Dewey and the United States Consuls at Hongkons and Singapore. The people on seeing the American prisoners cried out, "We to not wants war against the United of that mighty nation are our friends.

VAN ORDENS SENTENCE.

He Escaped Dismissal Through Admiral Watson's Legal Error.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.] WASHINGTON, Oct. 7.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Through a legal error of Rear-Admiral John C. Watson, com-mander-in-chief of the Asiatic station, George Van Orden, a naval cadet, who was attached to the United States gunboat Helena, has escaped dismissal from the service of the United States.

Young Van Orden is now a first lieutenant in the Marine Corps, and had recently been transferred to that branch of the naval force. He was tried by general court-martial on board the Helena, off Cavite, August 25, on the charge of "leaving tion before being regularly relieved." He pleaded guilty to the charge, and was sentenced to be dismissed from the naval service. Six of the seven members of the court, however, recom-mended clemency on account of the youth and inexperience of the accused. When this sentence was delivered, Van Orden had been transferred to the Marine Corps, and Admiral Watson commuted his sentence to the loss of fifteen numbers in the grade of first lieutenants of that corps.

In a letter mailed to Admiral Watson, Acting Secretary Allen disap-proved of the action of the Admiral. In his letter Allen said: "Article 52 of the articles governing the navy, confers upon every officer authorized to convene a general court-martial the ower of revision of its proceedings, to remit or mitigate, but not to commute the sentence of any such court, which he is authorized to approve and affirm. Your action in changing the punishment awarded by the court in the case of Van Orden, from dismissal to a loss of numbers, amounts to a commutation of sentence, which is ex-pressly forbidden by the statutory provisions just quoted. This being the case, sentence is accordingly set aside and you are instructed to take such action as may be decided, in accordance with this decision of the depart-ment."

LONDON, Oct. 7.—[By Atlantic Cable.] Most important news comes from the Transvaal tonight, which, if frue, probably indicates that the Souta African republic is about to yield, or, in any case, that the Boers have abandoned all idea of invading Natal.

The news is comprised in a cablegram from Newcastle, Natal, which says that the farmers who have arived there to-the farmers who have arived there to-day from the Buffalo River state that the Boers are returning to their homes, leaving patrols along the river. The commanders still remain on the Free

State border The dispatch also says that the feeling at Newcastle now is that the Boers do not intend to attack that place, and that the evacuation of the town was

A dispatch from Durban also states that the excitement there has abated, owing to the Boers holding back from the frontier.

This retirement of the Boers is what the British war authorities have ex-pected, as their defective commissariat would prevent them from longer re-maining massed along the border. Telegrams received here lately have made frequent reference to the scarcity of forage and supplies in the Bo hagers, and have stated many of those in the camps were inclined to strike out for their homes unless active operations were undertaken immedi-

The dispatch from Newcastle looks as though they had done as they threatened, and had abandoned the idea of fighting. Meanwhile, further transports from India, with two field hospitals and husars, have arrived at Durban, and the men and material Durban, and the men and material were forwarded to Ladysmith instantly. Gen. Sir George Stewart White. V.C., who will command the British forces in Natal, has also arrived and landed. He was greeted by a large crowd. Gen. Sir William Symonds, his second in command, came from Glencoe to meet him, showing that he does not fear a Boer incursion into North Natal. A number of other officers were present, and the whole party left by the train for Pietermaritzburg, amid great excitement and cries of "Remember Majuba Hill."

LONDON, Oct. 7.—Judging from the reports from South Africa, a state of war practically exists between Britain and the Transvaal. This s t that the British diplomatic Conyngham Greene, still reagent. Conyngham Greene, still re-mains at Pretoria, and the further fact

A solution of this apparent paradox probably lies in an understanding of the curious relations between the two governments. Great Britain is not likely to make a formal declaration of war against what she considers a dependent nation, the process being a mere issue of orders to the military mere issue of orders to the sover-forces to restore the state of sover-eignty which she alleges originally ex-isted. Were England similarly at isted. Were England similarly at loggerheads with a power recognized by her as equal, pride and precedent would some time ago have compelled her to break off diplomatic relations. It is this legend of suzerainty that enables her to palaver without loss of self-respect, and, at the same time, to run a good chance of placing the onus of beginning hostilities upon the pages or failing in that, to delay ac-Boers, or, failing in that, to delay action until she has in the field a suncient force to overrun the Transvaal.

ENGLAND'S PREPARATIONS. venty Ships Required to Trans

[A. P. EARLY MORNING REPORT.]

LONDON, Oct. 7.—[Special Cable letter. Copyright, 1899.] The scope of Ireat Britain's military preparations an scarcely be grasped by the mere reading of individual items as these uppear from day to day. A fair notion if their immensity can be gained from he semi-official statement that for the ransport of the army corps about eventy ships of from 2000 to 4000 tons burden are required, not including a score or more of transports already on he way to the Cape. If these vessels. peventy ships of from 2000 to develocity urden are required, not including a core or more of transports already on the way to the Cape. If these vessels, effectively disembark their cargoes of nen, horses and equipment within five weks from their date of saining, the programme will have fulfilled the forecasts of the most optimistic British nilitary experts. If all the troops are able to take their places as component parts of the army corps by the ned of November they will have done, remarkably well.

The disembarkation of Gen. Shafter's trmy from its thirty-seven transports in the troops are of considerably arger average tonnage than those which carried the Americans to Sanlago de Cuba, the admiralty, in accordance with the existing regulations, is supplying them all and taking complete charge from the water's edge to vater's edge. This means a trementous outlay of capital.

lous outlay of capital.

Nor do the arrangements escape riticism. Letters begin to appear in he newspapers alleging favoritism and leclaring that some of the transports are "rotten hulks." The recent break-lown of two vessels with troops on board is cited as substantiating the harge, but there does not seem to be any serious ground for supposing that he admiralty is actuated by wrong notives.

Although the impending army corps s a matter of preëminent military inerest, the troops already on the scene of probable action constitute no insignificant body. The original cape garison was 9000 men, and this has been acreased by 4500. There are 12,000 men, at sea on the way to the Cape, and heir arrival will make the approximate total of British troops in South Africa, prior to the arrival of the army sorps, 25,500. These troops do not include the irregular forces, the Cape nounted rifles, the Port Elizabeth and 3rahamstown volunteers, the Natal solice, the Durban Light Infantry, the Australian force and the regular naval origade.

The Cape squadron now includes ten warships, all heavily manned, and the aginst this array are opposed the Cransvaal and its ally, the Orange Free State, with perhaps a sprinkling of natives. This is about all that can be aid regarding the Boer forces. They are virtually non-regulars, and attempts to estimate their fighting itrength are hopeless, although valous calculations appear daily in the Boglish newspapers, ranging from 20,00 to 125,000, the latter figure being below the state of th byiously extravagant.

The whole question was summed up oday for the Associated Press by an afluential member of the House of Dommons, who said: "Before this is inded Great Britain will have to face ivery Boer-man or boy-strong mough to fire a gun for the sake of his sountry."

sountry."

The part which the foreigners who are volunteering under the Boer standard, especially Americans, will take at the expected conflict, provokes much upposition and comment. The corre-pondent of the St. James Gazette at letermaritzburg says:

The Boer ranks will certainly include number of Irishmen and former officers of the German army.

It is said the Boers will adopt the bolicy they adopted in 1881, when ten harpshooters were detailed out of each sompany to pick off the British officers. The weekly papers comment with he greatest satisfaction on the kinship of the empire as revealed in the consial offers of assistance in the Transmal campaign. In deference to the wish the Secretary of State for the Colonies, Joseph Chamberlain, only a portion of the contingent offered by Ausralia will be accepted. The fact that daj. The panic stage of the stock market uppears to have passed. The tone of nost departments is much improved. I is believed that an outbreak of hostilities would send Kaffir prices up, the dea being that war would end in the equisition of the gold fields.

It is curious that Transvaal stocks have declined much lower than African solonial stocks. This is due to a belief hat Great Britain will assume the Transvaal debt after the war is over.

NEW ELEMENT OF DANGER. glishmen Aroused Over Alleged Brutality of the Boers.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.] LONDON, Oct. 7.—(By Atlantic Ca-le.) So far as the facts go, the com-encement of hostilities betwen Great britain and the Transvaal seems no arer, although it must be admitted at a new element of danger has in the exasperation caused hout the British colonies in uth Africa by the stories of brutal atment of refugees, by the Boers, hether correct or not, the reports of trages upon women and children are ng accepted in many quarters hithto incredulous as confirming the an-

There are several reports at the Boers are increasingly rest-ss under restraint and because of the aperfect provisions made for their ss under restraint and because of the mperfect provisions made for their relfare. It is said they have threat- and either to raid or return to their omes. President Kruger, however, ppears to have reiterated his orders ommanding the exercise of restraint. The British and Boers are so close ogether along the western frontier of he Transvaal that their patrols meetightly. From Cape Town comes the urious statement that many officials the Transvaal and the Orange Precitate have sent their families into ritish territory for protection. F. V. Reitz, the Transvaal Secretary of tate, has sent his family to Natal and the family of President Steyn of he Orange Free State, has gone to ape Colony.

Other Cape Town dispatches describe he indignation caused by insults eaped upon refusees travarsing the seem to be smuggling arms across the frontier.

The report of Harry Escombe's mission of peace to Pretoria is apparently incorrect. The Natal statesman went, instead, to Newcastle, with a view of quieting the alarm of his friends. Rumors are current there that Commandant-General Joubert's return to Pretoria was occasioned by a petition from the Boers to have Commandant Vitjoen made commander-in-chief.

Pretoria, the dispatches say, presents a most deserted appearance. The government has ordered all the saloons closed throughout the republic.

Gen. Kromjes's forces, near Mateking, moved closer to the border yesterday.

Uitlanders Erred in Petitioning the Queen for Reforms.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

LONDON, Oct. 7.—[By Atlantic Cable.) A green book issued yesterday contains President Kruger's reply to Mr. Chamberlain's dispatch referring to the petition of the Uitlanders to the Queen. The Transvaul objects to Great Britain's interference in its in-ternal affairs, and explains that if the Uitlanders had first addressed the Transvaal, instead of the British gov-Transvaal, instead of the British government, their complaints would have been immediately heeded. It also alleges that those complaints emanated wholly from a small body of British who are breeding race hatred and a revolutionary movement, and whose membership and newspapers openly boast of the influence exercised by them upon the policy of the imperial government.

The reply adds: "The Transvaal is boast of the innuence exertises be them upon the policy of the imperial government.

The reply adds: "The Transvaal is bound to credit these boasts when it sees blue books issued consisting of documents drawn up by these revolutionary members of the South African League and of lying articles and reports from newspapers which are organs of the league. If the real character of the league could be known, it would soon lose its influence and the tension between the two governments would speedily disappear."

The reply concludes as follows: "The Afrikanders would then no longer fear that the interests of the British empire necessarily implied the destruction of the two republics and the enslavement of the Afrikander population, and the white races in South-Africa would return to the brotherly harmony that has been in existence until a treacherous comploit at the end of 1895 revived passion on both sides."

This dispatch was handed to Conyngham Green on September 28.

Petition to the President Signed by Many Representative Men.

IA. P. FARLY MORNING REPORT.1 NEW YORK, Oct. 7 .- The petition to President McKinley, urging the friendly services of the United States in mediation between Great Britain and the Republic of the Transvaal and the Orange Free State, has received the signatures of more than 400 representative men, including eighty odd presidents of colleges, fifty church dignitaries, Governors of States, Mayors of cities, Justices of the United States and State courts, Senators, Congressmen, editors and others conspicuous in public matters, the pro-conspicuous in public matters, the professions and commerce.

Regarding the petition, the Earl of Aberdeen cabled to the World: "If even now a way could be opened for friendly intervention, the good offices of none would be more acceptable to the people of Great Britain, and presumably also to the Dutch in South Africa, than those of the President of the United States."

The Duke of Westminster also cabled to the World: "Judging from past

The Duke of Westminster also cabled to the World: "Judging from past history and the prolonged negotiations with our government, whose proposals are most moderate, I am of the opinion that the Boers will not listen to any reform affecting their political status, and that therefore arbitration is out of the question."

Among the editors who have signed the petition are John R. McLean, Cincinnati Enquirer; Edward Rosewater, Omaha Bee; M. H. de Young, San Francisco Chronicle.

OCEAN FREIGHTS GO UP. earcity of Bottoms Owing to Ens land's Demand for Transports.
[A. P. EARLY MORNING REPORT.]

NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—The pre-dicted increase in freight rates, owing to the chartering of so many trans-Atlantic liners and tramp steamships by the British government, has, it is said, already begun to manifest itself. Ocean freight agents say that there is a general upward tendency in rates, and that the offerings of freight for shipment are becoming comparatively small, as shippers are waiting for the smail, as snippers are waiting for the outcome of affairs. One item cited as showing an advance in rates is flour, the tonnage price to South Africa increasing 5 shillings yesterday. Reports of further chartering of steamers by the British government continue.

LONDON, Oct. 7 .- [By Atlantic Cable.] The Evening News published the following dispatch from Cap

"The reports of barbaric excesses committed by the Boers on refugee have caused a thrill of horror here In one instance seventy women and children were packed in a cattle truck so tightly that they were unable to sit and were thus kept side-tracked sit and were thus kept side-tracked for thirty hours without food or water. When they attempted to leave the truck they were driven back with blows. Every trainload of refugees brings harrowing accounts of the baraities of the Beers of the Orange Free State. A train arrived today that had been ninety-six hours enroute. The sufferings of the women were dreadful. Several births occurred on the way-one in an open cattle truck, containing twenty men."

Coming Struggle of the Boers Called Heroic.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.] BERLIN, Oct. 7.-[By Atlantic Ca-le.] The Cologne Gazette calls the ming struggle of the Boers "heroic, with the same heroic thought as in-pired their struggle in ISSI." The influential Hanover Courier con-iders that Germany's chances will be ery poor if England vanquishes the very poor if England vanquishes the Boers, as then German Southwest Africa will be lost.

The papers are also considering the military probabilities, the general opinion being that England will not be ready to take the offensive until November. In the mean time, it is believed the Boers will do England real damage.

Some of the papers discuss the economic consequences of war. The Berliner Tageblatt believes that a diminution of the gold output would seriously affect business. The government press remains mute with the exception of the North German Gasette, which re-calls the fact that the Transvaal has no right to expect the German out-lander to render military service.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]
WASHINGTON, October 7.—Col.
O'Beirne called at the State Department today to secure recognition as the representative of the Transvaal republic. Acting Secretary Hill was too busy at the time to give the colonel a hearing, and an appointment was made for a later hour. The colonel was made for a later hour. The colonel was surprised at the statement coming from the State Department that he could not be recognized in the capacity of a diplomatic representative of a foreign country on account of being an American citizen. He is by no means content to accept this decision, and will make a determined effort to secure recognition.

SETTLEMENT LOOKED FOR WITHIN A FORTNIGHT.

It Depends Upon Canada Being Sat isfied-Another American Hostes for London Society-Sir Henry Irving and Nat Goodwin Coming

LONDON, Oct. 7.—[By Atlantic Ca-ble.] The Alaska negotiations proceed, although Sir Louis H. Davies, the Canadian Minister of Marine and Fisher-les, is taking a short vacation in Scot-land with Lord Strathcona and Count Royal, the Canadian High Commissioner. The Associated Press learns that there is a good prospect of a tentative settlement within a fortnight, although a definite arrangement apparently cannot be reached antil the joint High Commission ratifies the pending modus vivendi. It is understood that if Sir Louis Davies expresses satisfaction on behalf of Canada, regarding the present propositions, the whole question will be practically settled. All reports alleging to give details of the settlement are pronounced by the authorities here premature and without adequate basis.

IT HAPPENED IN A DRUG STORE AT ONTARIO, N. Y.

"One day last winter a lady came to my drug store and asked for a brand of cough medicine that I did not have in stock," says Mr. C. R. Grandin, the popular druggist of Ontario, N. Y. "She was disappointed and wanted to know what cough preparation I could recommend. I said to her that I could freely recommend Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and that she could take a 25-cent bottle of the remedy and after giving it a fair trial if she did not find it worth the money to bring back the bottle and I would refund the price paid. In the course of a day or two the lady came back to my store in company with a friend in need of a cough medicine and advised her to buy a 50-cent bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. I consider that a very good recommendation for the remedy." It is not so much what newspapers say as what friend says to friend that has made this remedy so popular, not only throughout the United States, but in many foreign countries.—[Adv.

they Embark Passengers for the Yacht Race and Then Spring Gambling Layouts—A Terrific Fight Ensues on the Excursion

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—With the national colors "Union down" and the Union Jack half-mast, the iron steamboat Georgenna, hailing from Phila-delphia, this afternoon, sailed slowly delpha, this atternoon, sailed slowly up to the Battery from the Narrows with a story of piratical robbery, riot and violence. The boat was practically in the hands of a gang of rufflans and card sharps when it sailed away from the Battery, ostensibly for the yacht races at 11:30 o'clock. There were 800 passengers on the Georgenna when she left the Battery this morning when she left the Battery this morning to see the sailing match between the Columbia and Shamrock. No sooner were the buccaneers out of reach of possible police interference, than they began to show what they were there began to show what they were there for.

From down below came mysterious men with even more mysterious tables. There were faro layouts, two or three roulette wheels, several "red-and-black" plants, and a number of "skin" games of all descriptions. In fact, the boat carried as tough a lot of blacklegs, grafters and confidence men as ever went down the narrows. They came swaggering onto the lower deckfrom the bar-room and began to whoop it up for their associates in charge of the gambling layouts.

Suddenly the Georgenna slowed down and her prow turned sharply around toward Sandy Hook, and in five minutes' time she was gently circling about.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.] NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—Old Boreas again today played battledore and shuttlecock with the great single-stickers and the third attempt to sail the first race of the Columbia-Shamnock series for the international trophy ended in failure. The race was declared off fifteen minutes before the time limit evaluations. time limit expired, with the yachts still five miles from the finish. But the vast throngs who went down to sea to witness the battle royal were in a measure compensated by seeing a magnificent light-weather duel. In the end the disappointment of the patriots was sharpened, perhaps, by the fact that sharpened, perhaps, by the fact that when the race was abandoned the Columbia was in the lead and improv-ing her position, and had it been fin-ished today the American champion might have had one race to her credit After three trials the experts are about as much mystified as they were at the beginning concerning the merits of the two boats. Nothing but a spank-ing whole-sail breeze will furnish a

Today, as on the two previous days, the course was laid fifteen miles dead before the wind and return. So evenly matched were the beautiful, clean-limbed racers that they rounded the limbed racers that they rounded the outer mark like thoroughbreds, almost neck and neck, and finished after a three-hour thresh to windward with the Columbia's white, sharp-like nose half a length in front and in the weather position, but so close was her green rival that the black shadow of the Shamrock's looming sail was silhouetted against the Yankee's snowy canvas.

As a result of today's struggle and those of Tuesday and Thursday, the talent are a good deal confounded. Some of them differ as to the merits of the two boats, but they seem unanimous upon two things—that the Shamrock is the ablest boat that ever crossed the ocean to lift the mug, and, what is still more important, she is crossed the ocean to lift the mug, and, what is still more important, she is more ably handled than the defender. The superior seamanship of Capt, Hogarth and his crew was demonstrated at several critical points in the race today. Though to Capt. Barr and the nervy managing owner of the Yankee sloop belong the credit of executing as brilliant and daring a piece of seamanship as was ever witnessed in a yacht race; its recklessness caused a great deal of nervousness and anxlety; its accomplishment therefore made the pulses of the Americans beat higher with pride. It was the spectacular feature of the day, and fortune favored the brave.

rock had passed him well to windward. Capt. Hogarth then set his spinnaker to port and increased the lead.

Capt. Barr seemed unwilling at first to follow the lead of the Englishman, and waited almost fifteen minutes, while the Shamrock overhauled and passed him, before he followed suit. The Shamrock was a hundred yards ahead before he got his sails trimmed to the new conditions. The patriots did not mince words in their criticism of Barr's obstinacy. Soon afterward the wind hauled around still farther, making it a broad reach to the mark. Both took in their spinnakers and eased their sheets. Then the white flyer gained steadily. The yachts were now about a mile and a half from the outer mark. The Shamrock was to windward. They were coming like horses down the stretch. A hundred feet away and the Columbia had closed the gap. Her slender prow just lapped the stern of the green hull. Under the rules they must pass the float with the red ball on the starboard end. As the balloon jibs rattled down in both boats, preparatory to gybe, the watching thousands held their breath.

It did not seem possible that the white ghost could squeeze in between the Shamrock and the mark. To the onlookers it seemed inevitable that unless the Yankee boat kept away under the stern of the Shamrock there would foul the float. But Iselin had desperate courage in a tight place. He played the limit. The man who set a club topsall in a driving gale in the deciding race between the Vigilant and Valkyrie III, would stop at nothing. On he came, forcing the Shamrock to go wide around, while the Columbia seemed to scrape the float as she swung about with her helm hard down. Though the Shamrock rounded first by nine seconds, she swept around so far on the outside that as both boats came up and their sails filled away on the starboard tack, the Columbia so much as touched the float, she would have been disqualified, then and there. Close-hauled the two yachts lashed straight out to sea through the long, heavy swell, heeling to the breeze in statel swell, heeling to the breeze in stately fashion.

As the wind began to die out, and the hope of finishing the race began to vanish, the two boats split tacks and did not come together again for a long time, keeping every one guessing which one was ahead. During this fluky period, everybody agreed that the Shamrock was the better handled. She never failed to take advantage of every new slant of the wind. They salled the last twenty minutes neck and neck, but with the Columbia to windward and perhaps a length ahead. Disappointed, but overjoyed, that when the race was declared off, the cup defender was in the lead, the excursion fleet headed back for Sandy Hook as fast as steam and sail could carry them.

WIND PETERED OUT.

Race at the Start Developed into a Drifting Match.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.] NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—There was a spanking breeze from the northwest and a heavy swell from the eastward when the yacht Columbia, under main sail and jib filled, sailed away from a point off the southwest spit at 9:25 o'clock today, and with sheets eased a trifle, headed for the Sandy Hook which he felt was sure to come. It came with a vengeance, for the Columbia, in order to prevent the Shamrock from blanketing her, was obliged to luffully half a dozen points out of her course. As it was, in five minutes, her mainsail was blanketed by the Shamrock's, the only sail drawing on the Columbia being the balloon jib topsail, for a few minutes. So far out of their courses were they luffing that all the excursion fleet on the west side of the course had to get out of the way at full speed.

Ten minutes after the start, the Shamrock had the weather berth, the Columbia a couple of lengths under her lee bow. Five minutes later the Shamrock took in her small staysail, and set a baloon staysail. In spite of all she could do the Shamrock was promising of a fine race between the Columbia and Shamrock.

The disappointments of Tuesday and Thursday, however, had affected the spirits of the yachtsmen and yachtswomen, for the number of people hurrying to the excursion fleet did not appear to be nearly as large as on the previous days. Off the Battery only five tugs were waiting for the passengers. These boats included the tug Volunteer, flying the Shamrocks' flag, which was taking on board the guests of Sir Thomas Lipton, who were subsequently transferred to Sir Thomas's yacht Erin, in the Horseshoe. Among these guests were Rear-Admiral Schley, the Earl of Minto, Governor-General of Canada; the Hon. Cecil Baring, R. H. Little, Q.C.; Barclay Warburton. W. H. Kendall and Mrs. Kendall; C. G. Carey, Prince Leopold de Croy, Prince Reginald de Croy, Prince Ranjitsinhji, Rear-Admiral Lord Charles Beresford and Lady Beresford, Frank Titford, Capt. and Mrs. Chadwick, the Hon. Arnold Morley, the Hon. Charles Russell, Mr. and Mrs. Potter Palmer, William Gibson and his party; Michael Cudahy and Bourke Cockran.

Capt. R. D. Evans, who has charge of the course, left Governor's Island ferry on the revenue cutter Hudson shortly before 8 o'clock.

The first weather bulletin of the day came from Galllee, from which point the Associated Press correspondent reported that a north wind was whisting down the coast at the rate of twenty miles an hour. He added, however, that the breeze showed signs of moderating. A heavy sea was running, and the observation limit was twelve miles.

At the Highlands, about 8 o'clock the conditions were almost exactly similar to those prevailing at the same time on Tuesday. The wind was in the north, northeast, blowing almost directly down the Jersey shore, at a velocity of almost fifteen knots an hour. The sea was covered with white caps and the waves, the relics of yesterday's storm, had their tops and crests torn off by the breeze as they broke on the shore.

A number of coasters came out during the morning and ran away from the Highlands the range of vision the Highlands the range of vision south and east extended over fifteen miles. A haze hung over New York Harbor, and very little in that direction could be seen beyond the point of the Hook, a distance of about five miles.

The Shamrock was inside the Horse.

tion could be seen beyond the point of the Hook, a distance of about five miles.

The Shamrock was inside the Horseshoe, as usual, and had her two head sails in position by 8 o'clock, and by 8:30 her tender, the James Lawrence, was making preparations to tow her out. The Columbia was being towed down from Bay Ridge. The breeze was so fine and true off the Hook that the Shamrock dispensed with the aid of the tug, and started out for the lightship under sail. She had up her mainsail and jib, and headed for the channel on the starboard. Just as she got under way the Calumbia came down the channel and rounded the southwest spit in tow of her tug. The Columbia stopped before reaching the Hook, about a mile to the west of the point, and began hoisting her mainsail. The Shamrock ran out past the Hook at a lively gait.

The wind then still held from the northnortheast, blowing about fifteen knots an hour. The weather off shore from the Highlands was very clear, and twenty miles out could be seen.

The Shamrock made the run out from her anchorage to Sandy Hook lightship, a distance of over eleven nautical miles, in fifty-six minutes, with only mainsail and jib.

miles, in fifty-six minutes, with only mainsail and jib.

The Columbia made as good time, passing Scotland lightship before 10 o'clock. The wind at that time was still northnortheast, a little over fifteen knots, and holding true and strong, with every indication that it would continue throughout the day and enable the boats to have a good race.

After reaching the lightship the Shamrock eased off her sheets and stood to the south, and the crew began to make ready the club topsail for holsting.

stood to the south, and the crew began to make ready the club topsail for hoisting.

The old cup defender, the Vigilant, had a little brush with the latest challenger on the run out. The Shamrock went by her as if she were anchored. Behind the Columbia were a half-dozen revenue cutters, and a number of steam yachts, and as the two yachts reached the lightship, the first of the excursion fleet appeared, heading down the swash channel.

The Columbia arrived at the lightship and in practically the same time. When she arrived at the lightship she also eased off her sheets and stood a little to the southward, but soon came about and ran over toward the challenger, which was then sailing along on the port tack, about a mile southeast of the lightship. Both boats were evidently trying the breeze to decide as to their light sails. The wind at the time still came out of the north-northeast, but had fallen off a trife and did not seem to be blowing to decide as to their light sails. The wind at the time still came out of the north-northeast, but had fallen off a trifle and did not seem to be blowing at the lightship much over ten knots. The judges' boat signalled that the course would lie south of southwest, bringing the boats along the Jersey coast, down to Long Branch. The yachts spent half an hour after their arrival at the starting place trying the wind, running about on one tack or the other and up and down, off and on the wind. As the time for the start approached, the wind seemed to decrease, and at 10:30 o'clock was not blowing over twelve knots. The Shamrock was the first to decide as to the topsails, and at 10:40 o'clock her big club topsails were set, indicating that those on board did not fear an increase of the breeze. At the time she set the sail aloft she was half a mile from the lightship, heading toward Long Beach, on the port tack. The Columbia ran along behind her on the starboard tack, and at 10:42 her club topsail was run up.

Both boats were then to leeward of the starting and about on even terms. The Columbia went to windward of the judges' boat and tacked starboard. The Shamrock was already on that tack and the Columbia crossed her bows. Both boats at 11:13 had club topsails, mainsails and jibs set and when at 11:15 o'clock the warning gun was fired, the Shamrock went to port about the stakeboat and the Columbia to starboard, both rounding to, and at 11:26 o'clock they were heading for the line. After getting the Shamrock's topsail in place, Sailmaker Ratsey discovered that it was not fitted properly, so it was lowered to the deck. This movement caused the people on the Columbia some wonder, and easing off a bit, the American boat ran down past the challenger to see what the trouble was. Hardly had the Columbia got alongside when the Shamrock's crew commenced hoisting the same club toosail, and this BETTER THAN THE KNIFE.

The Columbia was about northeast from the lightship, heading for it, with sheets amidships. This was to allow the Columbia people to have a good look at the Shamrock as the latter's crew fiddled with the latter's topsail. When the sail on the green boat was properly in place, she was trimmed. crew fiddled with the latter's topsall. When the sail on the green boat was properly in place, she was trimmed, and when the vessel had sufficient headway she bore off to starboard to the eastward end of the line. The Columbia, after running down by the lightship, trimmed sheets and started along the port tack on the Ves side of the line, coming around under the stern of the tug. The Columbia had the weather position, and try as he would, Hogarth could not oust her from her better berth.

As the boats tore along toward the lightship, in almost a parallel direction, to the starting line, they made a beautiful picture. Both yachts had their boom to port, with the wind over their counter and they heeled down to the pressure of their sails, throwing out a big wave from the port quarter. Just before going to the lightship the Columbia eased off and crossed the line at 11:21:02, breaking out a huge ballooner.

quarter at 11:21:19. The Shamrock's position almost enabled her to take the Columbia's wind.

The Columbia, up to the start, seemed to be having the best of it. So indeed she was the first over the line. She was seeking to hold the weather berth. This was the challenge that set Barr off his course and down on the fleet of steamers. The torpedo boats shrieked wildly. They did not need a seçond look to know that Barr, and Hogarth as well, could sail through walls of iron rather than give in. So they kited back and forth along the edges of the fleet.

The Shamrock was carrynig her biggest club topsail and her staysail and jib. When the Columbia broke out her big ballooner, which filled in a hearty, wholesome way, she took a spurt.

The windward maneuver, beginning with the preparatory gun, was called off within fifteen minutes after the start. Both boats set back into the course, the Columbia in the lead. Both squared off on the course. For a mile the wind, ten miles an hour, held true. Then a soft spot at least two miles in diameter, developed. The wind was up and down in the big balloon jibs for fifteen minutes. Then a five-mile breeze came up and off they went. The water between the Columbia and the Shamrock was not more than three lengths.

At 12:10 o'clock the Shamrock passed the Columbia. About eight miles from the turn the Columbia was about 200

At 12:10 o'clock the Shamrock passed the Columbia. About eight miles from the turn the Columbia was about 300 yards in the lead. Each racer was carrying club topsall, mainsail, spinnaker and balloon jib. The breeze had dropped to about six miles an hour, and was, as in the two previous trials, variable. It looked as if another drifting match was on. For about ten minutes the relative positions of the yachts was practically unchanged, when suddenly the Shamrock stirred up a little enthusiasm. She had been holding more to the windward of the course, the Columbia was steering, evidently looking for windward of the course, the Columbia was steering, evidently looking for wind, and soon she found it. A freshening breeze from off the Jersey shore filled the emerald sails, and slowly, but surely, she pulled out ahead. The Shamrock seemed to do less rolling than her rival, and consequently did not spill the wind out of her sails as did the Columbia.

By 12:30 o'clock the Shamrock had a lead of more than an eighth of a mile, but the race was decided a lacking in interest. For over an hour neither yacht had touched a sheet or altered a sail.

At 12:40 o'clock the Shamrock had increased her lead to about a fifth of a mile by standing to windward, thus catching the breeze nrst, as it came off shore.

At 12:53 o'clock the Shamrock took a mile by standing to windward, thus catching the breeze nrst, as it came off shore.

At 12:53 o'clock the Shamrock took in her spinnaker and jibed over. Having sooed so much to windward, hunting for wind, that to head for the mark she had to get on the port tack. A few minutes later she sent her spinnaker to port. The Columbia followed suit, and both yachts, with spinnaker to port, were speeding for the mark, which was five miles away, and the Shamrock about one-fifth of a mile in the lead.

The Shamrock was still holding her own at a distance of three miles from the outer mark. At the time the wind seemed to be freshening a bit and hauling slightly to the eastward. Each boat was then undermainsail, club topsail and balloon jib. About 1:15 o'clock the Columbia hauled aft her sheets and stood for the weather with the Shamrock. It was all to no avail, for the green racer was hundreds of yards ahead and commanded the situation.

At 1:20 p.m. the wind showed still more increase, and the Shamrock opened the gap still wider. Not satisfied with this good showing, which was the best of the day, the challenger set another jib and staysail, her big ballooner flying above. Her mainsail

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.] CHICAGO, Oct. 7.-Thirty-five hun-dred men gathered around the tables in the great banquet hall of the Auditorium tonight at the annual banquet at the Marquette Club. The guest of honor was President McKinley, who sat at a raised table on the east side of the hall. On the right of the President sat Archbishop Ireland of St. Paul. FAIRBANK'S SPEECH

The Marquette Club is a Republican prganization and from the vociferous applause which had greeted every mention of President McKinley's name and every allusion to the policy of his inistration, it was foreshadowed of Indianapolis to the sentiment "The Present Administration" would be greeted with wild applause. The re-marks of Senator Fairbanks, which were received with great demonstrations of approval, were as follows:

"The present administration needs neither an apologist nor a eulogist. Its mperishable record is written, and is before the world. It is an administrabefore the world. It is an administra-tion of arduous deeds done, which lift it above the dead-level of history. It has been confronted with great ques-tions of domestic policy; it has solved them. It also has encountered grave foreign problems, and well it has met them. No emergency has been so great, or exigency so severe that it has not been met on the high plane of mational duty and national honor. mational duty and national honor.

"Few administrations ever succeeded to power with more weighty responsibilities or of which there were more exalted expectations. There were rears of distress, years of hopelessness and crippled enterprise back of tis. There was a Macedonian cry from all sections of the land for relief—for deliverance. "The administration was essentially pledged to the maintenance of the public credit, the public faith. Public credit is preserved; yes, it was never so high at home and abroad as it is in this historic hour.

"The first duty which was laid upon the administration was to secure the readjustment of the uniff; and the en-readjustment of the variff; and the enactment of a genuine protective measure. To this end Congress was covoked in extraordinary session at the earliest practicable moment, and a tariff law was enacted. It has served well its purpose. It instantly gave confidence to enterprise, quickened depressed industries, and the signs and evidences of commercial activity were soon witnessed on every hand. Domestic commerce took on new energy and life, and our foreign trade soon reached and passed the high-water mark of the successful and splendid administration of Benjamin Harrison. "The determination of the administration to preserve inviolate the public The determination of the administration to preserve inviolate the public faith and inflexibly uphold the gold standard, gave an assurance and confidence to commerce that had all of the potency of the most solemn Contressional enactment. Commerce knew that no chimerical monetary schemes would be allowed to corrupt or tarnish the circulating medium while the present administration was in power. It knew that free silver colnage was, for the time being at least, as dead as the Rameses; and that in the light of practical experience, the American people could not soon be led to adopt any of the current financial sophistries and heresies.

"Prosperity came. It came to the any of the current financial so, histries and heresies.

"Prosperity came. It came to the seventy-five millions of American citisms: and in exceptional abundance. It came by the assurance of wise and conservative administration, by the subtle touch of the magic wand of confidence—confidence, which in the final analysis is the source of all progress, all success, and without which there is stagnation and death. It came contrary to many fervent and unwise predictions. It came through the harmonic of the three agencies—a protective tariff, the gold mandation.

"There were, indeed, domestic quesions numerous and grave enough to of international problems of more than isual gravity.

"The national conscience was stirred by Spanish atrocities; the people could endure them no longer. The Cuban spectre would not down.
"All of the powers of diplomacy were invoked to bring peace and order to the blood-stained island of Cuba. There was no thought of war; no desire for war. No one knew better than the President the dreadful consequence of an appeal to the sword; no one knew better than he that nothing so becomes power as its sparing use.
"While the administration was employing all possible agencies to secure

"While the administration was employing all possible agencies to secure peace and honorably avert war, there were many of our countrymen who were impatient to recognize the belligerency of the Cubans; the independence of the so-called Cuban republic; and were insistent that the conflict should begin. They challenged the patriotism of the administration and questioned its courage, although the President had gathered harvets of enduring fame upon the battlefields of his country.

"For humanity's sake, the administration had appealed to the Spanish Cabinet in hebalf of Cuba, but medieval government would not harken to the voice of nineteenth century civil ization. All efforts to mediate a peach having failed, the dread alternative of the country of t naving failed, the divar alone remained war alone remained.

"A crisis was at hand, as sharp and severe as could possibly confront the government; a crisis which comes but seldom in the life of a nation, and yet too oft. The administration with one hand delayed the oncoming storm, while with the other, it pushed with all possible dispatch the coast defenses, the purchase of munitions of war, and the enlargement of the navy, which was to give such splendid report of itself. The crisis was supreme, and it was superbly met. When the order for action came, the Congress of the United States, interpreting the heart and conscience, and the inexorable determination of the American people, declared for war. Spain's fatal hour had come. The administration was prepared to execute the decree of Congress; it was ready to strike. The thunderbolt of war fell first in the obscure harbor of Manila, today the best known harbor on the earth.

"The supreme demand of the American people was voiced in the order which flashed to Hongkons: 'Find the Spanish fleet and destroy it.' How well this order was interpreted and executed the world knows, and history will not forget. The intrepid Dewey, in one short hour, stood with the foremost admirals of all the ages. All honor to him; all honor to his brave men. A nation's gratitude to them each and all.

"An army of a quarter of a million men was called from the myriad vocations of peace; organized, equipped and put in the field with almost incredible dispatch. No better soldiers ever answered the call to arms. They were American soldiers, ready and eager to serve at the post of duty, counting no sacrifice too great in their country's cause.

"They came from the four quarters of the republic. Federal and Confederate, and their descendants stood together in a common cause, inspired by one hope, actuated by one high purpose, and that was to preserve a common inheritance, the glory of a common flag. The Grants and the Lues, the Shafters and the Wheelers, the Lawtons and the Butlers, bore commissions from the same President. The admi "A crisis was at hand, as sharp and

"The Congress with due deliberation and with exceptional unanimity, declared war, and the Senate of the United States, after protracted debate, ratified the treaty of peace.

"With the treaty came new and remote lands, new peoples, new and unexpected responsibilities; but they came as the logical sequence of war, and not as the fruit of its supreme purpose.

"By the articles of peace Porto Rico is ours, to be administered as an ex-alted sense of justice shall require. "Cuba is committed to us in trust, and it is to be given stable and suitable and it is to be given stable and suitable government according to our pledge.

"The Philippines are ours, by title absolute, unassallable. They have come to us and are ours by right universally recognized among the nations of the earth. They passed to the jurisdiction of the United States by the cession of the treaty of peace duly ratified and exchanged by the two powers engaged in war. With the extension of our sovereignty there came duties which American sovereignty implies; the enforcement of law and order; the preservation of the peace. A portion of the inhabitants of the islands denied the supremacy of the United States in the archipelago. They challenged the exalted purpose of the challenged the exalted purpose of the chairenged the exaited purpose of the government; they wantonly fired upon the American troops pending the ratification of the treaty of peace. Without the pretense of provocation or the shadow of justification, they have assalled the flag whose mission is mercical snalow of justification, they have assailed the flag whose mission is merciful.

"The administration resisted the attack and did what the people of the United States desired it should do; it did its duty by asserting the supremacy of the national authority by force of arms.

"Our forces in the Philippines formed no league with Aguinaldo; made no compact with him for subordinating the authority of the United States to his self-constituted dictatorship. Our peerless captain of the seas added imperishable glory to the American flag. He could not have surrendered the field of his incomparable victory to the insurgent chieftain.

"When the administration overthrew the Spanish authority in Manila, it owed a high and solemn duty to the Americans, the British, the Germans, the French, the Spaniards, and other nationalities in the archipelago—to preserve them from massacre, and to sare national seif-respect. We have but one way to go and that is in the path of duty. There all honor lies.

"Until the insurrection ends, there is but one duty before the administration, and that is to conquer it. The supremacy of the United States must be acknowledged. In the felicitous language of the President: There will be no useless parley, no pause, until the insurrection is suppressed and American authority acknowledged and established." More than 50,000 soliders at the front and now upon the seas emphasize the aggressive purpose thus expressed. When peace is restored, then will come the discussion of our future relation to the Filipinos; then will come the question of granting them, through the wisdom of Congress, the fullest measure of self-government and the amplest liberty consistent with our duties and responsibilities, and with their needs and capacities. They are not the truest and wisest friends of the Filipinos who counsel their further resistance to the authority of the United States.

"The administration has been able, well poised, firm, courageous, avoiding no responsibility and shunning no

"The administration has been able, well poised, firm, courageous, avoiding no responsibility and shunning no duty. It has been an epoch-making administration. It has walked in untried paths with no guide, except the national conscience. It has observed the fundamental truth that in a republic the people are the source.

the national conscience. It has observed the fundamental truth that in a republic the people are the source of power, and it has taken them into its confidence in fullest measure. Its north star has been the people's will. It is clean. The atmosphere which surrounds it is wholesome. A high sense of civic duty characterizes all actions of public service, and the public business is dispatched without friction and with fidelity."

"It is a hapy augury that we shall enter the new century under an administration which has stimulated patriotism in the hearts of the people, filled the land with the blessings of prosperity, the homes of our countrymen with joy and contentment, enlarged the zone of human liberty, and so crowned the closing years of the old century with such tremendous achievements for the welfare, the honor and the glory of the great republic."

James E. Boyd then spoke upon "Republicanism in the South."

THE PRESIDENT TALKS.

THE PRESIDENT TALKS.

THE PRESIDENT TALKS.

President Wickersham then brought the assembly standing by the announcement that President McKinley would speak. In a brief speech, the President, who was greeted with frantic cheers, said:

"I rise only to express my warm appreciation of the Marquette Club and to say that I reciprocate it with all my heart. We are not strangers; this scene here tonight is not altogether unfamiliar to me. I stood before you once before, not more than three years ago, your honored guest, and I have for you all tonight only the most grateful recollection and unstitted gratitude. You have not only been my friends, faithyll and unfaltering at all times but lection and unstinted gratitude. You have not only been my friends, faithful and unfaltering at all times, but, what is of more moment, and what is much nobler, you have been at all times faithful to your country, true to the inviolability of public faith, standing always for honest government and honest money. [Applause.] And forever standing for the honor and integrity of the flag wherever it floats, carried by our soldiers and our sailors on land or on sea." [Great applause, continuing for seevral minutes.]

The last address of the evening was made by Judge Howland J. Hamiln of Illinois, who spoke on "The Patriotism of the West."

LINCOLN AND DOUGLAS.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]
GALESBURG (III.,) Oct. 7.—On the campus of historic Knox College, where forty-one years ago Abraham Lincoln and Stephen A. Douglas met in one of a memorable series of debates to determine which should occupy a seat in the United States Senate, President McKinley and Postmaster-General Emory Smith this morning delivered stirring addresses, commemorative of the contest between the two great the contest between the two great leaders of former days. The citizens of Galesburg turned out en masse to honor the President and the members of his Cabinet.

The escort to the President, under command of Capt. Charles C. Craig, met the President at the residence of Col. Clark E. Carr, Minister to Denmark during the administration of President Harrison, where he spent the night.

In the carriage with the President were Col. Carr, Mayor Fletcher Carney and Justice Alfred A. Craige of the Illinois Supreme Court. The members of the Cabinet, in company with Dr. John Finley, former president of Kroy College, and other prominent

To attempt to escape the burdens fairly arising out of our own course and conduct would earn for us the reproach of a civilized world, and the forfeiture of our own national self-respect. We have but one way to go and that is in the path of duty. There all honor lies.

"Until the insurrection ends, there is but one duty before the administration, and that is to conquer it. The supremacy of the United States must be acknowledged. Three years—only three years—intervened, and the debate was removed from the arena of peaceful discussion to that of war and carnage. And then Lincoln and Douglas stood no longer divided. Sumter was fired on April 12, 1861. On the 15th of that month Lincoln issued his call for 75,000 troops. The position of Douglas at this critical juncture was that of a patriot. Without halting or hestiating he aligned himself upon the side of the hatlonal government and threw the force of his great personality in support of the Executive. Upon the occasion of his memorable visit to Lincoln immediately after the first call for volunteers, he dictated to the representative of the Associated Press, a dispatch in these words: 'April 18, 1861. Senator Douglas called on the President and had an interesting conversation on the present condition of the couptry. The substance of it was, on the part of Mr. Douglas that, while he was unalterably opposed to the administration in all its political issues, he was prepared to fully sustain the President in the exercise of all his constitutional functions to preserve the Union, maintain the government and defend the Federal capital. A firm policy and prompt action. was necessary. The capital was in danger and must be defended at all hazards, and at any expense of men and money. He spoke of the present and future without any reference to the past.'

"He no longer considered party. His sole consideration was for his country. He had no sympathy with our enemies in the North who openly or secretly counseled the dissolution of the Union. He was for the flag and for its cause and the brave men who carried it had his blessings and prayers. His patriofic course was a mighty factor in molding Union sentiment and in uniting the patriotism of the country, and should serve as an example of good citizenship and an inspiration to duty. "Though Douglas espoused a cause which makes the men identified with it immortal in history. Lincoln was the leader of the triumphant cause. Douglas, though opposed to him

ORATION OF THE DAY. Then followed the oration of the dey by Postmaster-General Smith. Mr. Smith's eloquent tribute to the character and services of both Lincoln and Smith's eloquent tribute to the character and services of both Lincoln and Douglas, with reminiscences of the old days in the Illinois political arena, was greatly appreciated by the immense crowd of listeners, some of whom had been among the audiences that in 1858 witnessed the polemic warfare between the great emancipator and the champion of popular sovereignty.

The Postmaster-General said:

"We are here to commemorate the famous Lincoln-Douglas debate. On the very spot where we now stand, the great combatants met forty-one years ago today in one of the brilliant encounters of that glittering intellectual and political tournament."

The speaker followed the events which led up to that battle of glants, analyzed the arguments made and the alms which prompted the combatants. He paid an eloquent tribute to the exalted patriotism of Douglas, who, after being the antagonist of Lincoln for years in State and national politics, rallied his legion of friends to the support of the President when he saw at last that the life of the Union was in danger.

Of Lincoln he said: "But you canlanger. Of Lincoln he said: "But you can Mayor Fletcher Carney and Justice Alfred A. Craige of the Illinois Supreme Court. The members of the Cabinet, in company with Dr. John Finley, former president of Knox College, and other prominent citizens of Galesburg, followed in a long line of carriages. The enthusiasm of the people was unbounded, and my memorable and in getting in the hearts of the was reached, the President received a tremendous ovation.

Col. Carr presided over the exercises and the invocation was delivered by Dr. C. E. Nash, president of Lombard University.

Congressman George W. Prince welcomed the President to the Tenth Congress District, and the greeting on the part of the people of Illinois was spoken by Gen. Shelby M. Cullom.

THE PRESIDENT'S SPEECH.
The brief speech of the President was listened to with the closest attention and punctuated throughout without outbursts of applause. The President spoke as follows:

"Mr. Chairman and my fellow-citizens: The time and place make this meeting memorable. Forty-one years ago on this spot two mighty leaders, representing opposing ideas, contended for mastery before the tribune of the people. It was a contest which history will not fail to record, and some are yet living to tell of its interesting and the family fireside until to the people of Illinois it has become a household tale, inspiring love of librerty and devotion to free institutions. Here, therefore, are sacred memories which will be cherished by this com-

SECRETARY HAY SPEAKS.

Secretary of State Hay, being called for by the audience, responded briefly. He said, in part:

"We rejoice in a reunited nation bound together over all its immense extent, by the bonds of love. We obey one law, we follow one flag. We owe one allegiance, we press forward together to one glorious destiny. And, in this day of peace and unity—which was earned by most strenuous toil and struggle—it is worth while to remember that in that great controversy which was opened here so many years ago, it was a northern man who sustained the southern side, and a southern man who sustained the northern side, both of them. Americans in mind, heart and soul; both passionate lovers of their country, devoted to its good; proud of its greatness and loyal to its flag to the last drop of their blood."

PRIDE IN COUNTRY.

The President's Enhanced by His Tours of the States.
[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.] JOLIET (Ill.) Oct. 7.—A pleasant incident of the stop at La Salle was the presentation to Mrs. McKinley of some beautiful flowers by a group of little girls. The President was intro-duced to an immense crowd at La Salle by Senator Cullom. He spoke as duced to an immense crowd at Las Salle by Senator Cullom. He spoke as follows:

"I never journey through the East or the South or the West that my pride in my country is not increased. My love of it is enhanced and my confidence in its noble mission and its permanence firmly refestablished in my heart. We are a nation of 75,000,000 people, all of them possessing equal opportunities in the race of life, with public schools and other schools open for the education of the boys and girls freely and without price; with hope put in the heart of the humblest boy in the land, and the right of that boy to aspire to the highest place in the gift of this free republic. And if you needed any example of the slorious opportunities of American citizenship, you have them here in your own great State of Illinois. Lincoln, Douglas, Logan, Lovejoy, Oglesby, and a long list besides, coming from the humblest walks of life, who at last reached the highest summits of fame and favor in the republic. And now to us, for this government rests upon mitted this great fabric of government. Shall we maintain it in its integrity? [Prolonged applause and cries of 'Yes.'] Let your boys and mine be educated in patriotism, and if so educated, no harm can befall the republic."

At Ottawa, the next stop, President McKinley spoke as follows:
"My fellow-citizens: I very much appreciate the fact that at this busy period so many of you have left your accustomed occupations and assembled here to give me welcome and cheer. I rejoice at your prosperity. I rejoice accustomed occupations and assemblee here to give me welcome and cheer I rejoice at your prosperity. I rejoice at the prosperity which is everywhere observed throughout our country, and I wish for you and all the people continued blessings under a governmen which we love and believe is the besin the world."

Senator African Tells How Demo cratic Prophecies Have Failed in the Light of General Prosperity.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.] WATERLOO (Iowa.) Oct. 7 .- A magmificent crowd assembled today and listened to speeches by Senator Julius C. Burrows of Michigan and Congress man D. B. Henderson of Iowa. The meeting marked the opening of the Republican campaign of 1899 in Iowa, and the big tent in which it was held was filled to its utmost capacity, both afternoon and evening. Senator Burrows was the speaker in the afternoon and Congressman Henderson in the

MR. HENDERSON'S SPEECH. Congressman Henderson said in part: "The Presidential battle of 1896 was fought almost exclusively on the money question. The happy result is felt today in every home in the United States. The uncertainties of the conflict of 1896, and the Democratic farm happy greatly the business of this tariff law paralyzed the business of this country. The uncertainties as to the standard of value and the basis for adjusting of obligations, tied up capital stopped business, closed mills, made the engines haul empty cars over the railroads and threw millions of laboring railroads and threw millions of laboring men out of employment. Today capital is moving rapidly into the avenue of trade. Commerce is expanding, the railroads have not cars enough to do their business, labor is everywhere blessed with employment and with remunerative wages never before surpassed in the world's history. We have passed from sadness in 1896 to gladness in 1891. The farm today is blessed with remunerative prices, and the farmer is happy. Why is all this true? We were told in 1896 by Mr. Bryan and his followers that Republican success we were told in 1836 by Mr. Bryan and his followers that Republican success would bring the reverse of what is now true, that prices would go down, that reverses would sweep the coun-try, and the remedy suggested was sil-now true, that prices would go down, that reverses would sweep the country, and the remedy suggested was silver monometallism.

"In the present happy condition of affairs let not the causes be overlooked by the voters in this campaign. Let not the discussion of trusts, in which sil are substantially agreed, obscure the mighty causes which restored happines to a suffering people. Let not the question of war, or foreign policies distract our minds from the great living causes of a sound currency and of a rtable standard of value when it means to much to our common country. It is evidently the plan of those conducting the Democratic campaign to ignore the people from what is 30 vital to their happiness and prosperity. But these tactics are but a shield to cover the real purpose, which is to secure the ultimate triumph of the doctrine of 15 to 1 in this country.

"I predict that a Republican Congress will legislate at the approaching session so as to increase the confidence of the people, know that all of their obligations will be discharged on a safe and firm basis, making contracts to pay the laborer, to pay the farmer and to pay the pensioner, and to pay for every freduct of this country, adjustable only on a just and fair basis, admitting of no doubt or uncertainty as to the adjustment between man and man. It will be seen therefore that while the Democratic party is still trying to destroy the money of the people, the Republican legislation? We are increasing our exports by millions, drawing cash from other countries. This keeps all of our people busy, every manufactory being like a beehive and all of our money is kept at a parity with gold. With growing commerce, good prices and busy people. I ask a pic de you want a change?"

Mr. Henderson touched briefly on the a parity with gold. With growing commerce, good prices and busy people. I ask ardic do you want a change?"

Mr. Henderson touched briefly on the pension question, and then taking up the trust question said:

"There should be absolutely no party politics in the consideration of the trust question. The party or person who attempts to make political capital out of it is neither wise nor fair. The party that does it is controlled by demagogues: the person that does it is a demagogue. Trusts are peculiar to no particular country. They are found in republics; they are found in monarchies and empires. They are found in countries where free trade is the leading principle underlying economic legislation, and they are found in countries that believe in and act upon the policy of protection.

"There is not a member of the American Congress in either house, in my opinion, but who is earer to do anything that can possibly be done within the constitution to investigate, requi-

"There is not a member of the American Concress in either house, in my opinion, but who is easer to do anything that can possibly be done within the constitution to investigate, regulate, control or even destroy any corporation which is operated against the public good, and in restraint of trade among our people. Any political party which in its platform attempts to fix upon the Republican party the birth or development of trusts only demonstrates that it is not candid with the voter, and is not worthy of confidence or even of respect.

strates that it is not candid with the voter, and is not worthy of confidence or even of respect.

"I challenge the records of Congress to show a single bill passing the House to carry out the declarations of the Democratic national platform in any shape or form. The Democratic party certainly has no right to be attacking the Republican party for want of action, and their platform declarations of this year are like a burlesque in the presence of a great and trying question. How much better for all of us to be frank on a question of such vital interests to the American people and unite heartily and patriotically to try to understand a trouble and find such additional remedies as will be possible and just and for the good of all.

"I think that there must be somewhere lodged the power, in this country, that can absolutely control the combination that controls the price placed upon its product. I will go further than that, if you please; that power should be strong enough to destroy if the combination cannot be regulated in the interest of the owners of the canital, and at the same time in the interest of the public who buy from them.

"The aim should not be to destroy honest industries, by any means, but to regulate all industries so that there may be absolute equality among the people of this country, excepting where such advantages come from superior education, superior knowledge and superior character. But what would be the effect of free trade even when applied to protected combinations of this country? Clearly the result will be to have the foreign trusts and combinations of capital get the American Brarket instead of those of our own country. No, no, that is not the remedy. Let us absolutely control by law, firmly and wisely, the aggregated capital of our own country, but let our own capital, with our own labor, furnish what is needed by our own people.

"Under our modern civilization and throughout the world capital is helpless without capital. It is the combination of capital and labor. Labor is helpless without capital. It is the combination of capital and labor which gives the great potential force which we are considering. Whatever legislation is passed should keep both partners in the combination , steadily and firmly in view.

"There is not a single foundation for

"There is not a single foundation for the statement that there is an alliance between the United States and England. The man who makes that charge is either densely ignorant or wilfully wicked. There is absolutely no proof of such an alliance and one has never been contemplated by the administration or any man in this country outside of an insane asylum. This country needs no alliance with England or with any other nation, nor have we any interests that can be advanced by any such alliance. The United States has hewn, can and will hew out its own great and mighty destiny without an alliance with any other nation upon earth. I hope and believe that the citizens of the United States who hail from Germany or from Ireland will in every way rebuke this attempt to play upon their prejudices and to discredit their intelligence.

"Why don't these gentlemen who complain about the Philippines also give vent to their indignation about our holding Porto Rico and the Isle of Pines and Guam? Does it require a rebellion to point out a right or a duty? Ah, gentlemen, who are pressing yourselves? Do you know that Porto Rico, Guam, the home of pirates, and the Philippines, each and all of them, will, in a few years, be like new worlds in the presence of the influences of the United States and the civilization which is flowing into each and all of them?

"Nothing will prevent me, or any American citizen, in the hereafter, from listening with open ears and glad hearts to the appeal of these islands for the highest form of liberty when their progress and advancement indicate that they are ripe for, and capable of, a larger liberty, and until such time shall come, and that is far in the future, the Philippine Islands, being ours of right, thust not be surendered to any earthly power.

SENATOR ALLISON SPEAKS. [ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.] CEDAR RAPIDS (Iowa,) Oct. 7.—The Republican campaign from the Fifth Congress District opened today at Ma rion with an address by Senator Wil-liam Allison. Mr. Allison declared that the claim of the Democrats that the restoration of silver as a money metal restoration of silver as a money metal was the only way to restore prosperity had been proven false by the actual restoration of prosperity all over the country by President McKinley's administration. He denied that either the trusts or the Philippine situation could be made political questions, and said:

"The Republican party has not hesitated to deal with the question of trusts in the past, and who can truthfully say that we shrink from dealing with it now. After all, it is a question fully say that we shrink from dealing with it now. After all, it is a question under our dual form of government how far Congress can go or to what extent the States must exercise the power. Congress has tried it, and nearly all the States have tried it. Republican and Democratic States have made drastic laws upon the subject. I know of no one in any party who is not willing to amend and strengthen the laws where they can be amended, nor do I know of any one who does not welcome every practical suggestion having in view strengthening of these laws, both State and national."

Regarding the Philippines, he said: "There are but two alternatives open to us. One is to press forward until the rebellion in the Philippines is absolutely overthrown and our rightful authority is established and acknowledged there. The other is that we shall withdraw our army and navy from the islands and leave the people that dwell there to the chaos and anarchy which must inevitably follow. The latter alternative the Fresident has no power to adopt, because he cannot allenate territory acquired. Congress when it meets can by law abandom these possessions and direct the withdrawal of our army and navy. Who will propose this and who will vote for it?

"The situation brings upon us difficult problems, some of them not to be solved until the distant future, but we must take them up in their sequence and deal with them as best we be solved until the distant future, but we must take them up in their squence and deal with them as best we can. Congress has the power and responsibility. It cannot act until the islands are pacified and the rebellion suppressed. Then with deliberation and care after full investigation and knowledge. I feel sure that wise legislation will follow, suited to the situation. It is impossible for the Filipinos to maintain independence, and those islands with freedom under our guidance will have the best government and the freest government possible with the protecting arm of our nationality and under our sovereignty and flag."

The surprise of the run out was the remarkable speed shown by Columbia during the last half mile before the turn. She kept her balloon jib up a few minutes longer than the Shamrock, but even after this was in she seemed to be gaining fast. Capt. Demurrer Overruled to Merchants' Trust Company's Suit.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.] NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—Judge Townnd of the United States Circuit Court of the Southern District of New York, in an opinion handed down today, over-ruled the demurrer entered by the defendants in the suit brought by the Merchants' Trust Company against the Missouri, Kansas and Texas Railroad Company growing out of a mortgage made to the former, as trustee, in 1890, made to the former, as trustee, in 1890, to secure an issue of bonds aggregating $20,000,000.

The defendant company filed pleas that for the six months an accounting was asked, the property was in the hands of a receiver, appointed on petition of the trust company, as trustee, in a former action, brought on a prior mortgage; that the receiver accounted for all of the income of the road during that period, and that the accounts had been accepted and approved by the court with the assent of the complains and the complains and the company filed amendments to its bill, and in response to the latter, the Missouri, Kansas and Texas

Now a gigantic house! Increased buying power! Broader resources! Added facilities in all branches! All these combine to make this far-famed Barker plant a still greater marvel. Our show rooms are overflowing with the best handiwork of the finest designers and workmen in the world. This great increase in all lines enables us to double-discount even our previous astounding records. For many years this house has been handing out unending surprises. Now their best previous efforts are being outdone, and forthcoming lower prices will again startle Los Angeles.

Think This Over.

Our chief advantage over other stores this year lies in the fact that we bought much carlier than usual, and also much more heavily. This involved great risk-but it gives us now immense stocks of furniture, all new, bought at last year's prices -while other stores bought laterand at advanced prices.

Unimportant Part Taken by Amerians in International Geographical Congress Creates Some Comment.

Fashionable and Sporting Circle All Agog Over a Gambling Scandal-Admiral Valois's New Volume.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.] BERLIN, Oct. 7.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The municipal Council has resolved that in the future all new street-car lines shall remain exclusively under municipal management and control. No opposition is expected to this, as all parties, whether socialists or otherwise, favor the idea. The municipality is bound by contract for municipality is bound by considerable period with existing lines. Therefore it is impossible to transfer those avenues of transit to municipal management, as the majority of the Council desire. In Frankfurtof the Council desire. THE WEEK'S EVENTS.

America Slimly Represented at the Geographical Congress.

BERLIN, Oct. 7.—[Special cable let-ter. Copyright, 1899.] Public opinion has been much more deeply engrossed this week in following the pro-ceedings of the International Geographical Congress and the sensational developments of the trial of the persons accused of gambling at the Club Der Harmlosen, than with the Transvaal situation, although South African affairs are being followed with keen solicitude by the government and political men. There was considerable comment among the delegates to the congress, as well as on the part of the public, during the sittings, regarding the relatively unimportant share taken by the United States.

With the exception of the paper of Mrs. Zella Nuttal, which was presented in the choicest German, and that of graphical Congress and the sensational in the choicest German, and that of Poultney Bigelow on "Colonial Admin-istration," which contained some startling assertions, there was no striking American feature throughout the sit-ting. It is largely due to this that the next congress will not meet in Wash-ington, as Prof. Bryant of Philadel-

GENTLEMAN WOLFF'S CLUB. The sensational trial of the Club Der Harmlosen has stirred fashionable and sporting circles to the very depths. A peculiar feature of the case is that some of the witnesses belong to the immediate entourage of Emperor William. Moreover, officers of garrisons all over the empire, and many who belong to the guard regiments, are implicated, as well as experts on the correct way of playing baccarat and men of the highest fashion. If the Count von Renventlow, of the Union Club.

Wolff, the founder of the club, has gone to parts unknown. It was proved that he had been convicted of theft and had served a term in prison, although most of the witnesses asserted that he was a man of excellent de-Harmlosen has stirred fashionable and and had served a term in prison, although most of the witnesses asserted that he was a man of excellent demeanor and perfect manners, whence his nickname "Gentleman Wolff." Count Flattau, although his evidence would have been of the most important character, was excused from testifying. Gen. von Kroech, father of one of the defendants, the commander of an army corps and an intimate adviser of Emperor William, refused to appear. His son admitted that he had been guilty of fleecing.

In well-informed army circles it is asserted that Emperor William not only wants the matter thoroughly sifted, but intends that the trial shall be followed by an extensive weeding out of gamblers, and otherwise undesirable officers. It is asserted that there are 270 of this stripe quartered in sixteen garrisons, who will come within the category of offenders.

A NAVAL BOOKLET,

A NAVAL BOOKLET, Rear-Admiral Valois recently published a book entitled "Seekraft Seegeltung Seeherrschaft," which is attacting great attention in political military and naval circles. It contains tracyng great attention in political. military and naval circles. It contains a powerful argument that the United States, as a leading colonial and exporting power, will necessarily become a keener competitor of England and that it is to the interest of both the United States and Germany to join hands in curtailing Great Britain's sea and colonial power. The writer strongly advises a naval alliance between the United States and Germany on other grounds and considers the possibility of Holland and France joining the United States and Germany in colonial matters. Lieutenant-Commander William H. Beehler, United States naval attaché in Berlin, Vienna and Rome, who has sent a partial translation of the book to Washington, considers it the strongest exposition of naval policy and the most important naval work that has appeared for years.

ECONOMIC CONDITIONS.

ECONOMIC CONDITIONS.

Economic conditions in Germany arouse attention. The industrial boom continues, values especially in industrial enterprises being in many cases greatly inflated. The official Deutsche Bank, the Dresdener Bank, the Disconto Gesselschaft and other leading institutions do not believe there is any immediate cause to fear a panic or a serious and extensive collapse, although there appear to be indications tending that way. Some of the leading papers, more or less agrarian, however, during the last few days have published alarmist articles. The boom is most noticeable in iron and steel, as the demand is much greater than the supply. The industrial press now advocates a temporary suspension of the duty on iron and steel in order to obtain raw material in England and the United States as cheaply as possible. This course is violently opposed by the agrarian press, but the industrial press insists that unless it is followed thousands of workmen will have to remain idle for months. This is particularly true, the industrial organs contend, regarding the coal mines in Westphalia. ECONOMIC CONDITIONS.

London Money Market.

LONDON, Oct. 7.—The money marget excites attention. A still higher bank rate is regarded as not improbable, should war break out. France, it is reported, declines to sell more gold to America. The stringency is felt throughout all Europe. Russia is suffering from a rather severe financial crisis. The reserves of the Imperial Bank is now very low and stocks of all kinds have fallen considerably. This, presumably, is due to over-speculation and to the gigantic flotation of industrial companies. In a word, Russia has been trying to go too fast in the endeavor to become a great manufacturing nation. Money also was very tight in Germany.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 7.—The acting superintendent of the Sequola and Gen. He also recommends that new roadways be constructed and the old ones repaired. During the absence of troops in the winter he says two guardians should be appointed.

Fowler vs. John Crane. Judgment was given in favor of the defendant. The findings of the court were, in substance, as follows: That the contentions of the plaintiffs were not sustained: that the defendant had represented the matter to the Fowlers truthfully, the representations being sustained by corroborating evidence; that the Fowlers sought Crane instead of Crane seeking the Fowlers; that the property was worth not less than the price paid; that the fact that plaintiffs had resided on the premises, or property purchased, from December, 1898, to May, 1899, a period of five months, without having made any objections or found any evidence of misrepresentation, was evidence that no fraud had been committed. In fact, the court found that there was a preponderance of evidence sustaining the defendant, instead of a preponderance of evidence sustaining the many allegations of the plaintiffs, and therefore judgment was rendered in favor of the defendant. The court on the cross-complaint ordered a foreclosure suit for the balance due, $13,000, and costs. Can Any More Be Said or Done? The End Near.

Ordinarily when a dealer sells eight r ten pianos a month he would call it a pretty big business, even in a city of ouble the population of Los Angeles. But when a man sells ten pianos daily, and keeps that rate up for a week, the public naturally thinks he ought to be more than satisfied. THE CITY'S ONLY HOSPITAL TO BE REOPENED AT ONCE.

Mospital Association to Take Charge. Shakespeare Club Opens Its Sea--Student Nearly Loses Sight

PASADENA, Oct. 7 .- [Regular Correspondence.] Although the Pasadena Hospital is closed, this city is to have a hospital and to have one right away. An enthusiastic meeting of the Reorganized Pasadena Hospital Association was held this afternoon at Hotel Green. Twenty members were pres-ent, including a number of physicians. J. A. Buchanan was chosen temporary chairman and H. H. Klamroth secre-tary. The committee appointed at the last meeting reported in favor of continuing the present hospital in its present location, till a new building can be completed. The hospital is not run-ning now, having been closed last week by the lessees, but the committee will at once confer with the owner of the building, Mrs. McGilvray, and tee will at once confer with the owner of the building, Mrs. McGilvray, and make arrangements to reopen the institution immediately under a new management, if possible, so the hospital interregnum will be brief. The plan is to select a matron and run the hospital under the direct control of the hospital association.

It was voted to reorganize the association under the old charter and bylaws, and that the old board of directors elect a new board. A number of names were suggested. The old board will meet at 9 o'clock Tuesday moraing and elect their successors. The surviving directors are: A. R. Metcalfe, P. M. Green, E. H. Hull, Prof Lowe and G. F. Kernaghan.

J. A. Buchanan was today elected an honorary life member of the association, in recognition of his services for charitable objects in Pasadena for many years.

The association now has $1000 in sight toward the new hospital, though a canvass has not been fairly started

SHAKESPEARE CLUB. The season of the Shakespeare Club opened brilliantly this afternoon, when the first reunion since the summer vacation took place. About seventy-five ladies were out. The clubhouse had been beautifully decorated by Miss Stickney, the profusion of ferns being noteworthy. Every nook and corner had its fernery. The new president of the club, Mrs. Bowler, was in the chair. The guest of honor was Mrs. Reeta V. Haddon of San Bernardino, president of the Woman's Parliament, Mrs. Bowler made a little address of welcome and outlined the programme of the club for the winter campaign. Mrs. Haddon was introduced and spoke of the club for the winter campaign. Mrs. Haddon was introduced and spoke of the preparations for the parliament next week in Los Angeles, mentioning the part which Pasadena will take. Friitade, cake, etc., were served, amid music and a buzz of conversation, this meeting being a social function. Next week's meeting will begin the active work of the club. It will be a "Pasadeha day," and the needs of our city will be discussed by the ladles. C. J. Willett-will give an address on municipal government. Ladles will speak on such topics as better streets, a public park and a hospital.

A WARM CLOSING. The season of the Shakespeare Club

The mitary district rally at North Passdena closed at a late hour last night with a warm spell. Much of the heat was contributed by "Habeas Corpus" Ladd of Los Angeles, who turned up at the meeting in the role of a philanthropist. He opposed the organization of a sanitary district, and protested that he did so not at the instigation of the liquor dealers, but because he had the interests of the taxpayers of North Pasadena at heart. He declared that the proposed district would be asource of expense and tribulation generally, and that it was unnecessary to form it, as the County Supervisors would suppress the saloon if the people of North Pasadena should so desire. He averred that it was the rule of the Board of Supervisors, if one citizen should protest against a saloon license, to require the applicant to secure the indorsemnt of a majority of the voters before granting him a license. Dr. Reid and others explained that the County Supervisors were not bound by any such rule, and that it was impossible to get rid of a saloon through their assistance.

SAN DIEGO, Oct. 7.—[Regular Correspondence.] The slot machines have departed. Wednesday night the ordinance prohibiting their use went into effect. The police authorities report that the majority of the machines were taken out of town early in the week.

COUTS CASE JUDGMENT. Judgment was rendered in the Su-uerior Court yesterday in favor of Mrs. Elizabeth Schrader, formerly Mrs. Cave Couts, against Cave J. Couts, also the Colorado Mining and Development Company for $8234.18, interest at the rate of 7 per cent., to be allowed until the judgment is settled. W. H. Tal-cott is named in the decree as com-missioner authorized to conduct the sale of all property owned by Cave Couts, in San Diego county. At the time of Mrs. Couts's divorce a note upon which judgment was secured, was given in settlement of the suit against Cave Couts. Default in the payment of the note necessitates the present sale.
The Ranchita mine and considerable valuable property in the county will be involved in the coming sale.

from the Soldiers' Home, was cleared by the finding of his body on the beach today. The discovesy was made by Joseph Bacher. He found the body between this city and Santa Monica Cañon. The shoes and socks were missing, and the coat was gone. Otherwise he was properly clothed. Decomposition was far advanced, and there was nothing indicating foul play. At the inquest, which was conducted by Coroner Holland at Guidinger's undertaking establishment this afternoon, it was learned that Horsley was born in Nottingham, Eng., and was 55 years of age. He had lately lived much of the time in the Soldiers' Home, but had been away frequently on furloughs. He had complained of imperfect heart action. The verdict recited the facts and expressed a belief that there had been no foul play. "The evidence points to heart disease," the verdict further said, "in which condition he may have fallen into the water."

Horsley leaves a widow, two sons and three daughters in Hueneme, and one son in Illinois. Learning that Horsley was missing from the Soldiers' Home his son-in-law, J. H. Brush of Hueneme, came to search for him, and was in Los Angeles when the veteran's death was reported.

At the corner of Los Angeles street the horses turned sharply, throwing Mrs. Pierce and the child to the sidewalk, along with a part of the contents of the wagon. Continuing out Los Angeles street, the team frightened a Chinese gardener's horse and the two run-way outfits proceeded abreast to Center street, where the team turned west and the horse east. The latter was stopped within a block, but the team continued west several miles to the country place of Judge Pierce. Mrs Pierce and her son escaped serious injury. But few vehicles were on the streets at the time of the runaway.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

There is a cure for dyspepsia Sufferers who have tried noxious nostrums will probably be keptical, but skeptiesm vanishes whos Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are tried. Whether the trouble is dyspepsia of long standing, or merely a simple case of Indigestion, relief is prompt and pronounced. The less the trouble he tewer the tablets need be taken.

Heaviness after eating, sour stomach, as indicated by belching, fatigue wish slight exertion, or with no exertion at all, disturbed sleep, nervousness, constipatica, depression, "blues," these things can commonly be set down asymptoms of dyspepsia. And dyspepsia lamerely indigestion in an aggravated form.

By promoting perfect digestion, Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets produce strong nerves, restful, refreshing sleep, pure blood and good, sound, healthy flesh. They make the skin clear, the eyes bright, the mind cheerful. Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are a medicine and more than a medicine. They digest the food and make it easy of assimilation, and they relieve the inflamed, diseased condition of the memoraneous linings and the glands of the stomach and towerls. They help the digestive organs over the hard places, and put them into a healthy, active condition. They effect a quick and permanent cure. You don't have to continue taking them forever, still it is well to have a tox handy and take one at the first return of the trouble.

refrectly wen people are made size at waters too much, or unwholesome food, but not if they take a tablet after eating. Treatment with Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets does not necessitate deleting or any change of habits. Up-to-date hats are what all up-to-date men ought to wear. You're behind the times if you wear anything else. No one can make a back number pass for a new fall shape. The difference is too great to be overlooked. Everything new in hats, neck-wear, hosiery, gloves, underwear, bath robes, etc., etc., is to be found in Desmond's immense stock. There's quality in his hats, as well as style, and quality is one of the elements of style. Any hat bought at Desmond's gives the maximum of quality and value at such moderate prices as $2.50 and $3, $4, and, of course, $5 for the celebrated Dunlap hat. Best values and largest assortment of 50 and 75-cent underwear in the city. See Desmond's show windows this week, in the Bryson Block, No. 141 S. Spring street.

Selling Extraordinary. The Southern California Music Co. Having a Most Wonderful Sale.

$50 to $200 Can Be Saved by Buying Now.

Judging by the pianos that are passing out of this house, there will be a merry time in Los Angeles this winter. Without being boastful, it would not be too much for us to say that such selling of pianos is unparalleled even in the largest Eastern cities. The fact is that almost every one who makes a call here to investigate our public statements ends by making a purchase sooner or later.

To persons who have any desire at all to own a piano, we know that the present special prices are well nigh irresistible. The fact that you can purchase a piano now anywhere from $50 to $200 less than you will be able to buy the same article six months or a year from now is the strongest kind of an appeal to reason. An appeal which many people have answered with, "Yes, I will take that one."

There are still several of those $400 pianos which arrived in the extra carload for the Fisher people late last week. They are still marked to go at $243. This will be about the last call on this special lot.

We have an elegant $600 Decker Bros. Piano marked to go at $325.

We have a beautiful Baby Grand made by Kranich & Bach. The $850 grade, this week at $585. Violins, Music Boxes, Orchestrellas, Pianolas, and all sorts of wind and string instruments at sacrifice prices.

Come this week without fail, and come as early in the week as you possibly can for the best assortment, but come by all means.

NEWMAN'S CAREER ENDS.

DESPERADO SHOT DOW

New Mexico Sheriff and Deputy Engage in Terrific Struggle With the Fugitive-The Marderer Dies Wearing His Victim's Clothes.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.] EL PASO (Tex.,) Oct. 7.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Norman Newman, a noted desperado wanted in Green county. desperado wanted in Green county, Okla., to answer an indictment for murder and robbery, was killed this morning by officers at St. Augustine ranch, New Mexico, twenty-five miles east of Las Cruces, the county seat of Dona Ana county. Newman was shot while resisting arrest and the shooting was done by one of Sheriff Pat Gar-ret's deputies, José Espalit. Garret, the noted slayer of "Billy the Garret, the noted slayer of "Billy the Kid," was notified a few days ago by Sheriff Blaylock of Oklahoma that Newman was in hiding near Las Cruces. Accordingly he, with Sheriff Blaylock and Deputy Espalit, went out to Cox's ranch to arrest the fugitive. They found Newman there at work in the kitchen and drawing their weapons, ordered him to throw up his bends. Inordered him to throw up his hands. Instead of complying, he opened fire and a terrible struggle ensued. Newman is a powerfully built man and almost a match for the three officers.

It was their purpose to take him alive if possible and they knocked him down several times with their weapons and almost stripped him of clothing in the melée. Despite this the outlaw broke away and was escaping when his ca-

Newman murdered and robbed his partner in Green county, Okla., a year ago and was arrested, but broke jall last July and made his way to New Mexico. He was trailed to Las Cruces by Sheriff Blaylock of Green county. Newman was regarded as a desper-ate character, and the action of the of-ficers in killing him was considered justifiable by the Coroner's jury, which exonerated them. The dead man when killed was wearing a suit of clothes taken from his victim.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES. The President Points Them Out to the People of Kewanee. [ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.] KEWANEE (III.) Oct. 7.—Although the itinerary of the Presidential train did not include a stop here, a dense crowd was gathered at the station, the itinerary of the Presidential train did not include a stop here, a dense crowd was gathered at the station, and in deference to the wishes of the President, a stop of five minutes was made. The President mounted a platform and delivered a brief address which called forth great enthusiasm. The greater portion of the auditors were workmen from the factories and shops. The President said:

"I thank you for this patrictic demonstration. I appreciate these expressions, not as personal to myself, but as your tribute of devotion to the government of the United States over which, through partiality of your suffrage, I am permitted to preside.

"I am glad to meet the workingmen of this busy town, and my fellow-citizens generally, and congratulate them over the improved business conditions over 1896. I am glad to know that this year the place hunts the man and not the man the place.

"Somebody has asked what are the signs of the times. Coming along on the railway I received a letter from one of your great works here, and I thought it gave the best answer that could be made. Here it is:

"In 1896, from 100 to 300 men were turned away from our gates every morning and every night who were looking for work. These people went away with tears in their eyes. We gave work to large numbers of people for a few days at a time, simply to enable them to live. During the two last years our bulletin board has been constantly covered with notices of additional men wanted."

"In one of your factories in 1896, in the month of September, you paid $33.000 to labor; in the same month of 1899, you paid $103,000 to libor. I am told that this railroad, over which we are traveling, loaded in the month of September, son paid $3.000 to labor; in the same period last year. So I feel that I can congratulate you upon the prosperity that prevails in this community and throughout the country. The hum of industry has drowned the voice of calamity, and the voice of despair is no longer heard in the United States, and the orators without occupation he ed by a Committee.

[A. P. EARLY MORNING REPORT.] SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 7.—Gov. Stanley of Kansas, who arrived here ast night to welcome the Kansas volunteers on their return from Manila, says: "Gen. Funston can have any-thing he wants politically in our State. They want to make him Governor, Senator, Congressman-at-large and give him half a dozen other titles, all at once. Nothing will be done, however, once. Nothing will be done, however, until he expresses a wish of his own."

All the members of the Kansas regiment will be decorated with imitation sunflowers of yellow felt and brown satin, which have been made by the ladies of the party. On the raliroad journey to the Coast, 500 of these were made, the men joining with the ladies in fashioning the badge. Each member of the Reception Committee is wearing one of the facsimiles of the State blossom.

NAVAL STORE AT CAVITE.

Mitchell omptroller Against Its Establishment.
[A. P. EARLY MORNING REPORT.]

WASHINGTON, Oct. 7 .- Comptrolle Mitchell has rendered a decision in the Mitchell has rendered a decision in the case of the proposed naval store at Cavite, P. I., a case which has been watched with interest as affecting all naval officers, especially those of foreign stations. The Comptroller holds hat there is no warrant for establishing at Cavite a naval store, similar to the stores maintained in the army, where officers and men may purchase at cost articles of food not included in the regular ration list. The articles for sale in the army stores include small luxuries, such as preserves, lime julce, cigars and tobacco. Procuring them at cost, especially on distant stations frequently means a great deal to the officers and enlisted men who are able from their mess to secure many things outside the regular ration, which otherwise would be beyond their reach. The Comptroller holds that the law granting the store privilege to the army is a special privilege and not an allowance, and that it does not extend to the navy. where officers and men may purchas extend to the navy.

AUTUMN FESTIVAL BEGUN Chicago's Big Celebration Now

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.] CHICAGO, Oct. 7.-The celebration of the Chicago Autumn Festival began in earnest tonight with the arrival of President McKinley and the members of his Cabinet, Vice-President Maris-cal of Mexico and party, and Sir Wilfred Laurier, Premier of Canada, with other Canadian notables. Tonight also the first of the series of parades and banquets were held, and from now until Tuesday business will be practically suspended. Vast crowds congregated tonight in the handsomely-decorated and brilliantly-illuminated court of honor. One of the features of tonight's celebration was the bicycle procession of over 7000 uniformed wheelmen.

Many distinguished guests arrived during the day, including Secretary of the Treasury Gage, Capt. Coghlan of the Raleigh, and Father Chidwick of the ill-fated Maine.

A delegation of Nebraskans, headed by Mayor Frank E. Moores of Omaha, and including Maj. H. B. Mulford of the First Nebraska Regiment, recently returned from the Philippines, also arrived. They will invite President Mc-Kinley to visit Omaha to review the three Nebraska regiments during his journey through the West.

As the President will be in Sioux City October 15, the delegation has strong hopes of inducing him to extend his itinerary to Omaha.

Entire Range Believed to Be in Danger-Dean Held to Answer to Superior Court-Wheelmen in Court-Capt, Aseril Dead.

SANTA BARBARA, Oct. 7.-[Regular Correspondence.] A mountain fire is raging in the Santa Ynez range back of this city for a distance of eight or ten miles. The Los Olivos and Santa Barbara stage was late this evening and reports a great deal of difficulty getting by the fire. A light breeze is blowing and the indications are that the whole range is in danger. Many thousand acres of mountain pastures have been destroyed. The fire will cause much suffering to stock on ac-count of the scarcity of pasture.

DEAN BOUND OVER. Charles Dean, accused of forgery, was Wheaton. He was bound over upon charges of passing two forged checks, with bond fixed at $2000 in each case. Some interesting points were brought out in the case. Dean, when he passed the checks, did not affix revenue stamps. The two merchants who cashed the checks placed stamps upon them before presenting to the bank. The defense claimed that the checks, unstamped, were not legal documents, and moved to dismiss. The court overruled the motion. The rule is that unstamped checks shall be returned by banks to the persons drawing them. It is, however, the custom here among merchants to affix stamps at any time and to receive unstamped checks. Dean and to receive unstamped checks. Dean claims that he will justify himself in the Superior Court, but refuses to say by what means.

The city authorities have made a sudden move for the enforcement of a long-neglected bicycling ordinance. The result is that a dozen or more wheelmen, some of them well known, were before the Police Judge this morning for riding on sidewalks. The ordinance fixes a fine of from $5 to $50 for the offense. Bells are also required, but it would be a task to find a dozen in the city. A movement is on foot to secure the passage of a new wheel regulation. For this purpose and general wheeling purposes a wheelmen's club was organized here last night. The following officers were elected: President, Eugene Roe; secretary and treasurer. Walter M. Cooley; captain, Roy Caldwell: first and second lieutenants, C. R. Sawyer and Jasper Tebbetts.

SANTA BARBARA BREVITIES. The first meeting for the present season of the Woman's Alliance of the Unitarian Church was held last evening at the residence of Mrs. E. F. Dinsmore. Cecil Rhodes will hardly be less prominent than Oom Paul Kruger in the South African embroglio. To him the eyes of the English will naturally be turned. As a representative of the progress of Great Britain in the dark continent, Mr. Rhodes has been called "South Africa's uncrowned king." It is his dream that the northern and southern extremities of Africa should be connected by one vast belt of British empire. Rhodes is the son of a poor English clergyman. He emigrated to South Africa at the age of 16, for the benefit of his health, and, like a magician, has built up a fortune of $100,000,000. While working his mines he pursued his studies, went to England, stood the examination at Oxford, and returned to Africa an A.B. Mr. Rhodes is about 42 years old.

ERSONAL-

PERSONAL, — VITAL MAGNETISM IS A great healing power, which is dormant in agearly every human being. It has been wonderfully developed in a few persons, and the names of Newton, Paul Castor and Weltmer are very familiar. Mr. Madden, the healer, 331% S. Spring st., has made a study of vital magnetism for several years, and has developed great power over disease. He cured himself of locomotor ataxia in less than 3 weeks. He can reduce the hottest fevers to "normal" in a few minutes; gives quick relief in rheumatism and neuralgia, and female complaints are soon cured; no medicines used; no massage treatments given. He can teach others how to develop this wonderful power in themselves. Terms reasonable. Consultation free.

in the German Capital—An In-perial Reception on the Tapis. Venezuelan Boundary Question

BERLIN, Oct. 7.—[By Atlantic Cable.] Gen. Benjamin Harrison and Mrs. Harrison, who arrived in Berlin last evening from Paris, viewed the sights of the town today, accompanied by United States Ambassador While. While at the United States Embass, where all the members were presented, including the veteran messenger, William Knoth, Gen. Harrison, referring to the latter's dark hair, said he surely had not been long in the service. Knoth replied: [ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

Ambassador White and Mrs. White will entertain Gen. and Mrs. Harrison at the opera this evening. On Monday Mrs. White will present Mrs. Harrison to the Countess von Brockdorff, first lady in waiting, and Emperor William will receive Gen. Harrison the same day, immediately before the galax court concert at the new palace at Potsdam, to be given in honor of Queen Wilhelmina of The Netherlands, at which Gen. and Mrs. Harrison and Ambassador and Mrs. Harrison and Ambassador and Mrs. White will meet the Emperor and Empress.

On Tuesday Mr. and Mrs. White will give a reception in honor of Gen. and Mrs. Harrison, to which the members of the American colony are invited.

On the following day the United States Ambassador will give a dinner to Gen. and Mrs. Harrison, at which the Imperial Chanceller. Prince von Hohenlohe, other members of the diplomatic corps will be present.

On Thursday Gen. Harrison will leave for Brussels and for The Hague, from which latter point he will return to London, to sail for the United States on October 28, by the American line steamer St. Paul.

To a representative of the Associated Press, Gen. Harrison said today: "The Venezuela boundary question is now buried, thank God, and thereby one of the disturbing factors in our relations with Great Britain is removed."

the Times from Washington says:

"Suggestion was made today of the possibility that a diplomatic officer of self, but it is not thought likely that it will.

"The fee involved, so it is reported, is $250,000 promised by the President of the Venezuelan government to Benjamin Harrison for his services as legal counsel for the Venezuelan republic before the Paris Arbitration Commission. It was suggested that in the event of the triumph of the insurrectionists in Venezuela, now almost at the gates of the capital city, Caracas, the obligation of the preceding administration might be repudiated, inasmuch as the benefits derived by Venezuela from the award are doubtful.

"In this case State Department officials are of the opinion that the debt would be regarded as one of honor, partly on account of Mr. Harrison's high position as the former Chief Executive of a republic whose good offices were alone responsible for averting war and securing arbitration to Veuezuela.

"The obligation is none the less bind-notified in time; if not, the matter will go over until tomorrow.

An employe of the Southern Pacific said yesterday afternoon that when the boys saw the train approaching Willie Spencer called out to his companions: "Come on, boys; let's hop on the cars." Willie, he says, deliberately got in front of the approaching train, and refused to leave the track when warned of his danger and called by one of his companions, evidently wishing to see how long he could maintain his position without being struck. The man says that the boy apparently jumped in front of the train in a spirit of bravade, and did not realize his danger.

According to the railroad employé, the trainmen have considerable trouble with boys, who jump on slowly-moving

An inquest was held yesterday at Robert L. Garrett & Co.'s undertaking rooms on the remains of Elijah Hass, the old tin peddler, whose dead body was found on Friday afternoon in a shed on West Washington street, where he had made his home. When the body wes found it was thought that his name was Howes, as he had frequently laid claim to that name, but yesterday several people who knew him identified him as Hass. The Coroner's jury decided that the immediate cause of death was alcoholism. It is said that the old man had a married daughter named Barker living near San Bernardino, and two other married daughters in Massachusetts. An effort will be made by the undertakers to communicate with the relatives of deceased. Died from Alcoholism.

marily dismissed. Amy has another suitor, Horace Drake, a bosom friend of her father's, and a man twenty years her senior. In a moment of pique she accepts Drake, but through attentions and kindness the elderly husband wins his wife's sincere love. Winfield again comes upon the scene, and though knowing that Amy is both a wife and mother, proceeds to make love to her. Though repulsed, he insists, and upon her birthday sends her a box of violets and an insolent letter. She returns the gifts to their sender at his club, where the handwriting is accidentally seen by her brother-in-law, who informs Drake of his suspicions that all is not as it should be between Amy and Winfield. It is then that Drake learns for the first time that the couple were once friends, and that it was rumored that she had married Drake in pique after a lovers' quarrel with Winfield. The latest Swedish-American play, "A Yenuine Yentleman," which comes to the Los Angeles the the tree of the tree nights and a matinée, commencing Monday evening, will afford Ben Hendricks, well known to local theater goers, an opportunity for the airing of his clever work in the handling of Swedish dialect.

The play tells the story of an ambitious young Swede, a graduate of the famous Upsala University, who comes to America to make his fortune. He secures a position as a mining expert in one of the great mines in the Coeur d'Alene district in Idaho, and is first introduced to his audience on board a steamer en route to America, together with the other characters There is, as may be anticipated, a strong humorous element in "A Yenuine Yentleman," in which the Swede figures prominently, his many quaint and excellent qualities being brought out with no little skill.

Among the characters are an exminister to Sweden, returning to this country to engage in business; a German baron, who is something of a villain; the ship's executive officer; an American girl, the daughter of the exminister, who falls in love with the young Swede, and a rough, but goodhearted, Irishwoman. Numerous exciting incidents are introduced, the scenery including the Harbor of Southampton, a view of the harbor in New York, and a variety of scenes in the picturesque mountains of Idaho.

The authoress of "The Gadfly," Mrs. Voynich, comes out in a letter in the New York Tribune, explaining that she submitted to the cuts and alterations made by Stuart Robson, but declined to allow her name to be associated with an illiterate melodrama or condone Mr. Robson's conduct. The play has already been withdrawn, and it is alleged Mr. Robson is out $30,000 on it. This is probably an exaggeration.

The former friends and partners in minstrelsy, Primrose and West, seem to have succeeded in the cultivation of a sentiment something akin to personal dislike. The two minstrel companies, one headed by Primrose and Dockstader, and the other by William H. AT THE THEATERS.

CLYDE FITCH'S merry comedy, "The Head of the Family," will be presented by the Frawley Company at the Burbank Theater every evening this week. This play was written by Mr. Fitch for William H. Crane, follow-ing "The Senator," in the repertoire of that famous comedian for two seasons. The story of the play revolves about the household of one Prof. Holden of New York, who has three daughters, one of whom is married when the play opens. Another, Amy, is courted by one Douglas Winfield, part firt and part scoundrel. Amy is touched by his attentions are not nonrable, he is sum-part scoundrel. In an interview with Miss Jordan Smith, a talented young painter of Virginia, she gives a pleasant little reminiscence of student life in Paris Virginia, she gives a pleasant little reminiscence of student life in Paris swhich concerns one of our Los Angeles residents. She says: "I was wild to see the great Marchesi in her own house, so my chum Gertrude Auld obtained an invitation to the coming 'audition' and reception for me. The eventful night came. We decked ourselves with great care and taking a cab, soon reached the Rue Jouffroy. We were ushered in by gorgeous footmen, and after removing our wraps in an upper room, we entered the drawing-rooms. We were greeted by Mme. Marchesi and her handsome daughter and Miss Auld was hurried off to an adjoining room, for that night a part of Bemberg's opera 'Elaine' was to be given with Mme. Melba and Poi Plancon in the cast, and Miss Auld had been chosen one of the five young girls to assist in the performance. Well, of course everything was a brilliant, exciting success. Elaine (Mme. Melba) died beautifully in a high-backed chair, and I saw Miss Auld's knees tremble as she knell near her with the other four minstrels. The stout duchesses in the front row applauded loudly. After the music was over, swerybody pushed and jammed and congratulated everybody else, and we were presented to M. Poi Plancon by the president of the American Journalists. M. Plancon made very brilliant eyes at us and turning to M. Mangin, the present chef d'orchestra at the grand opers, and also accompanist for the French opera class at the Marchesi school, asked, 'What kind of a voice has Miss Auld?' Miss Auld gripped my arm in despair and I knew that we could fear the worst, for M. Mangin has the reputation among the students of being very severe and impossible to please. Imagine our surprise and happiness, when he said grayely, as if weighing each word: 'She has the clearest voice that I have ever heard, it is pure like crystal.' They had champagne in the dining-room, but we did not need it after that."

assumption that good accompanists are scarce, and set out to make them in a factory. She thus describes in an interview the needs of an expert, and the method of producing one:

Even the most accomplished, bestversed singer is likely to have slips and mishaps once in a while. The expert accompanist must be able to "fill in" these awkwardnesses, as it were, by intuition, and she must put in chords not written in the score to bridge over the gap, and give other by intuition, and she must put in chords not written in the score to bridge over the gap, and give other help for the singer to right himself by. As far as possible, when giving a delineation I try to forestall all the slips and backsets that a singer is heir to, and that an accompanist may be called upon to tide over; and so my pupils, after taking the thorough course, are immune to getting rattled, as the slang is, and are finished in something else than mere stereotyped accompaniment playing by rule and measure.

Music and Musicians. * People in Society. * Personal Gossip.

Decline in the Art of Singing.

A writer in the Nineteenth Century says; "I would draw attention to a few facts connected with the art of singing which seems to me at present to be either totally ignored or else neglected. In the first place, I know of only too many instances, especially in the case of males, in which the pupil has been allowed to start singing too soon after the natural change of voice, which takes place at the age of puberty. Before this change the larynx is small and situated high up in the throat, producing high soprano notes, like those of a female. At the period of transformation it increases in volume and sinks to its permanent position. It is therefore fatal to disturb or exercise it until nature has restored matters to their normal condition, and the voice is once more settled in its new character of tenor, baritone or bass. Not less than two years must be allowed to elapse before the student should attempt to sing, and then only on the competent advice of a throat doctor, or a professor of singing. "Then again, as I pass along the

and then only on the competent advice of a throat doctor, or a professor of singing.

"Then again, as I pass along the streets, I am constantly hearing people singing wrongly. They will persist in vocalizing the 'a' as if it were spelled 'awe' whereby the mouth is forced up spoon shape. Needless to say that it should be enunciated broadly like the letter 'r' in English and with the mouth wide open and slightly smiling. If the erroneous method of vocalizing is the result of the professor's training, the sooner the professor is changed the better.

"I am inclined to think it is mainly due to this wretched system of vocalizing that it is so difficult to make out in what language the majority of our artists and amateurs are singing. During the past season I heard a débutante at a fashionable concert sing a famous old ballad. She had a fine and sympathetic voice, but had it not been for the well-known tune, she might have been singing Chinese for all the audience could make out. This terrible defect is not, unfortunately, confined to singers of the third and fourth ranks. Many of those who are 'stars' of the first magnitude sin in this direction to an inconceivable extent—an extent, indeed, which renders it possible for an opera to be occasionally given in three different lauguages at our leading operahouse, nobody being any the wiser."

[Springfield Republican:]. The Con-ert Goer gives this account of Miss ddrienne Remenyi, the daughter of the amous violinist, who will sing in pub-ic this account.

Adrienne Remenyi, the daughter of the famous violinist, who will sing in public this season:

"Miss Remenyi has been secured by the well-known manager, Henry Wolfson, who says that he considers her the best singer of songs before the public. Combining as she does the temperament of the Hungarian with the schooling of the French woman, Miss Remenyi is peculiarly fitted for emotional-song interpretation. She was educated in Paris, and when still a young girl, her lovely soprano voice attracted the attention of her teachers and companions. She was carefully trained in music, along with her regular studies, and she progressed so well that she came to America as soprano of her father's concert company two seasons before his death. A serious throat trouble, which forced her temporary retirement from the concert platform, has now been thoroughly overcome, and those who have been so fortunate as to hear her during the past few months are exceedingly entusiastic over her gifts. Miss Remenyi will include a considerable number of Hungarian songs in her programme, and these will add a decided novelty to her performances. Her thorough French training also gives her complete command over the immense range of song literature in that language, so that she is able to make a double appeal to the public."

The Musical Age:] The Maine music festival will be held this year in Portland and Bangor, Me. One of the soloists for this year's festival is Mime. Sembrich, who will be heard in the two solos in which she has uchieved the greatest success, the 'Fruhlingstimmen Waltz,' which was vritten for her by Johann Strauss, and he grand aria from Verdi's "La Traviata."

Nature of Moorish Music.

"Moorish music," says a Saturday Reviewer, "is inarticulate, and so it brings a wild relief, which no articu-late music could ever bring. It is the Reviewer, "is inarticulate, and so it brings a wild relief, which no articulate music could ever bring. It is the voice of uncivilized people, who have the desires and sorrows common to every living being, and an unconsciousness of their meaning which is, after all, what we come back to after having searched through many meanings. It is sad, not because of all the sorrow there is, and always has been, in the world. The eyes of Spanish women have something of the same fierce melancholy, and with as little personal meaning. It is a music which has not yet lost companionship with the voice of the wind, the voice of the same the voices of the forest. It has never accepted order, and become art; it remains chaotic, elemental, a part of nature trying to speak."

The Rome corespondent of the Pall Mall Gazette writes under a recent date: "The young Abbé Perosi announces that at last the finishing touch has been given to his new oratorio. The Nativity of the Redeemer, and that it will be performed for the first time on September 12 in the Cathedral of Como, which, for the occasion, will be transformed almost into a concert hall. In the body of the church there will be opera chairs, armchairs and common chairs, at different prices, while in the chapels there will be reserved places. The orchestra will be composed of 120 maestri and 200 choristers, who, to gether with the principal singers, will come every day from Milan. The oratorio is divided into two parts, the 'Annunciation' and the 'Birth.' The former begins with a chorus with the words, 'In the name of Jesus Christ, Amen.' for theme. Then follow the prologue, the announcement of the appearance of the Angel Gabriel in the house of Mary, and the dialogue between the two. It ends with a 'Magnificat' of the Virgin. The latter begins with a 'largo,' the tempestuous night of the birth of Christ is described, and an angelic hymn is sung by a chorus, without instrumental music.

New Anecdotes of Rubinstein.

[Springfield Republican:] These anecdotes of Rubinstein by M. Davidowa of St. Petersburg are quoted by the New York Evening Post: "During his sojourn in Dresden, Rubinstein lived in one of the largest hotels, the proprietor of which had promised him there should be no piano playing during the hours when he composed. It came to pass, however, that an aristocratic lady, who wished to make an impression on Rubinstein, occupied the room next to his, and persisted in playing his compositions by the hour, till he became frantic and complained to the landiord. The lady was informed of the situation and, seeing that her ruse had the opposite effect of what she had expected, she left the hotel in a rage. On another occasion, Rubinstein had some guests in his room, and at their request played something for them. Presently there was a knock at the door and a servant brought in the card of the wife of a well-known general, who begged that her neighbor would stop playing, as it annoyed her. Rubinstein took his card and sent it to the lady, with profuse apologies for having disturbed her. On seeing his card, the lady was so mortified at what she had done that she forthwith packed her trunk and left the hotel.

On still another occasion, Rubinstein was informed that a lady who was at the point of death, knowing that he was in the same hotel, had expressed to a better world. In the last years of his life, Rubinstein was very apt to a better world. In the last years of his life, Rubinstein was very apt to faint. Once he fell in a swoon, while reading Zola's "Debacle;" another time, while eating a cake in a confectioner's shop, a third time after performing with a sore finger. He often the card of the was in the same hotel, had expressed to him, and it was reported that he had fainted at sight of her beauty. Rubinstein was superstitious, fearing three lights and the number thirteen particularly. He would never understate anything of importance on a Monday or a Friday. Shortly before the light and loved and played. That is all. M. Davidowa also relates that about the time of the composition of the oratorio "Christus" Rubinstein because it seemed to him too egotistical a thing to do.

Mascagni's new opera "Maschere" ("The Maskers.") deals with much the same characters as Leoncavallo's "Pagllacci"—that is, the harlequin, the columbine and pantaloon of the old Italian comedy.

It is rumored that a new Chinese comic opera, "Yung Shai, or the Mandarin's Daughter," may be seen shortly at the Garrick in London, and that the chief part will be played by Mme. Caro Roma, the American prima donna.

Leo Stern, the celebrated 'cellist (and husband of Suzanne Adams, one of the prima donnas of the Maurice Grau Opera Company,) will accompany his wife to America and will appear in a number of concerts during his sojourn in this country.

Owen Foster has nearly completed the cast for his new opera, "La Fiesta," and will begin stage rehearsals in about two weeks. A chorus of about forty voices have been drilling for some time. An interesting feature in the opera will be the carrying of a tenor part by a well-known contraito of this city.

Miss Pauline Joram, an American singer and violinist, was recently married to Baron de Bush of Prenshaw, Hampshire, Eng. He is the eldest son of the late William Bush, and is now in his thirty-ninth year. He was president of the chemical section at the Brussels Exposition of 1888, and is a well-known chemist.

"Six Stolen Sweets" is the title of a set of planoforte pleeces adapted for Miss Clara Butt, the young English contralto, is said to be a beautiful girl of 20 years; she is over six feet in height, and has a powerful, well-trained voice. She is to sing in concert with Emma Nevada November 12, at the Metropolitan Operahouse, New York City. Miss Butt is the most popular woman singer in England today. Her tour in the United States is limited to five weeks.

Miss Josephine Patterson begins her tournee with Gilmore's Band next Monday. She is looking forward with pleasure to the engagement, particularly as the itinery includes California, where the organization will appear in February. Miss Patterson has been taking some finishing lessons with Isador Luckstone, the famous teacher of professionals in New York.

Ellen Beach Yaw, the California soprano, has been engaged to appear in a new opera, which Sir Arthur Sullivan has written for the Savoy Theater. Miss Yaw has been most successful in London. The extraordinary compass of her voice has been the subject of much notice, but she deprecates this, desiring with reason, that she be judged on the merits of her voice in its essence and entirety; in fact, she is beginning rather to resent the attention paid to her wonderful top notes.

Edward German's new symphonic work, which was heard at Norwich on September 5, and in London shortly afterward, is based upon the idea of the four seasons, summer typified by a harvest dance, forming a sort of scherzo, while autumn is the slow movement, and the finale is a Christmas-tide fete. Mr. Elgar's songs, written for Miss Clara Butt, form a cycle of sea pictures, starting with a slumber song, which is followed by a number entitled "In Haven at Capri," while the third song is entitled "Sabbath Morning," and the fourth "Where Corals Lie," and the last, "The Swimmer."

It is stated in what seems to be an authoritative manner, that Adelina Patti will not come to this country this season after all. No doubt the famous singer has sung "Home, Sweet Home" so often that she has come to believe that she really feels the sentiment of the song. Nevertheless, it is a pity that she is not coming, for there are thousands of young aspirants for vocal fame who might learn from her, old as she is, how far they are from the ideals of their art. Some of them would no doubt be encouraged to greater effort, and others would be so discouraged that they might give up their pursuit of the fleeting shadow of fame, and this would be a good thing for art.

A SWELL OPENING.

One of the swellest millinery openings of the season was held at the beautiful parlors of Mrs. N. E. Smith, 205 S. Broadway. The parlors were profusely decorated with smilax and flowers, and the artistic manner in which the hats were arranged showed all their lines of beauty. Among the many new ideas shown for street wear was a graceful trimmed hat to be worn vith a tailor-made gown For reception and evening were some very gorgeous ideas shown. The elaborate display of highclass novelties made it very pleasing to the eye and, judging from the large number of visitors, it was a flattering reception. Mrs. Smith was fortunate, while in the great metropolis, to secure for the season one of New York's best trimmers.

THOSE AMERICAN PRISONERS.

Says the Cincinnati Enquirer:

"What's this talk about American prisoners in the hands of Filipinos!

The reports from Gen. Otis never mentioned the battles in which these prisoners were taken." For the excellent reason that the handful of prisoners in the hands of the Filipinos were not taken in battle, but were either sentries on exposed outposts, or foolhardy men who pushed beyond the limits of safety and thus fell into the hands of the enemy by ones and itself, without doubt, printed complete

CONTINUE THE GOOD WORK.

One of the wisest moves ever taken the Philippines the policy of the Presiin Los Angeles looking to the sanitadent is to make a misstatement. Our tion and appearance of the city's policy in the Philippines is that of the streets is the scheme of sweeping the American people through their duly busy portions of the main business accredited and authorized representathoroughfares by hand. The appeartives in the Congress of the United ance of these streets now, as compared with the time when they were states. It was the Senate that con swept only by machines, is such as cluded the treaty with Spain, through which there were ceded to this counto make the citizen who rejoices in try the islands of the Philippine archicleanliness hope that we may never go back to old conditions. The City der in those islands the President is Council has never made a better investment of the funds placed in its simply carrying out his manifest duty as the Chief Executive of the nation. hands by the taxpayers of the municipality than in paying for hand sion, change the status of affairs in street-sweeping, and wherever else may be necessary to cut expenses the Philippines, it will still be the duty of the President to carry out the there should be no cutting in this department, particularly at a season of the year when the city is beginning to fill up with visitors from abroad Nothing is more attractive to the tourist than clean streets, and they give the visitor a first impression of a city which is worth far more to a gogues who are noisy, but who are municipality than the street-cleaning can possibly cost. The men-in-white who are keeping the downtown thoroughfares presentable to the eye and to the olfactories should be retained where they are, and as soon as possible their force should be increased. as it is quite impossible, with the number of sweepers now on the streets, to keep them as clean as they

A BRYAN BRAY.

W. J. Bryan, speaking at Canton Ill., on Friday (Bryan is always talking somewhere,) took occasion, as usual, to denounce the course which the President has pursued and is pursuing with reference to the Philippine Islands, claiming that the trend of the President's policy is "in the direction of imperialism." He declared that the war in the Philippines is a war of conquest, and not in the interest of republican government. Bryan said he would have the Filipinos "treated as the government has promised to treat the Cubans," and that, instead of doing what is being done, "it would have been better for Admiral Dewey, after destroying the Spanish fleet, to have Everybody, including even Mr. Bryan, knows that the war in the Philippines is not a war of conquest, but is a war for the restoration of peace and good order in territory belonging to the United States. It is also a war in the interest of republican government; for no form of government other than a republican form can be established in the islands under the sovereignty of the United States, which is itself the greatest, the freest, the most just and the most beneficent government . on earth.

As for treating the Filipinos "as the government has promised to treat the Cubans," it will be time enough to talk of that when the Filipinos consent to treat the United States as the Cu bans are doing. The war in the Philippines is not a war of our own seeking. It is a war which has been forced upon us by the ill-advised rashness of a few semi-civilized and inordinately ambitious Tagalo leaders, whose mo tives are wholly selfish, and who would set up in the islands a savage despotism if they could succeed in driving

If the Cubans had acted toward the American army of occupation as did the Filipino rebels-if they had organized armed resistance to our flagthere would have been in Cuba, following the Spanish evacuation, a war similar to that which is now in progress in the Philippine Islands. We should have taught the Cubans as severe lessons as we are teaching the Filipinos. We should have suppressed the insurrection with a strong hand. as we shall suppress the insurrection In the Philippines; and after subduing them we should have given them larger freedom and a better government than they could give themselves-and even so we shall do unto the Filipinos. Mr. Bryan's premises in this instance, as n many others, are seriously wrong: and being so, his deductions (must necessarily be defective.

In case the Democrats of Illinois nominate Mayor Harrison of Chicago We know of no one more competent to do this from personal experience threatens to desert the party. Let hs all pray that Harrison be not nomi-nated. The continuance of pleasant re-lations between the ex-anarchist Governor and the Democracy is worth at least 2,000,000 votes to the Republican that there should be any hitch in the harbor work at San Pedro. After the long and tedious battle for a free har-bor which the public-spirited citizens of this community have made, they have a right to expect that, barring work of construction will go forward steadily to the completion of this great engineering undertaking. Any inter ruption of the work-any failure to o insure its completion within reason anxiety on the part of the people of this community, who have sacrificed so much and have striven so strenu ously in the battle or the harbor. So many times have the people been misled and betrayed that they have grown extremely suspicious, and will never be thoroughly confident and satisfied until they behold the San Pedro Haror as an accomplished fact.

At the time when the bids were pened, and it was found that the bid of Heldmaier & Neu was only $1,303,-198, while the highest bid amounted to about $4,500,000, there were strong intimations that the bid of Heldmaler & Neu was not a bona fide one, and that it would never be carried out in good faith. The Times has never regarded these fears as worthy of serious consideration. The firm of Heldmaier & Neu is a responsible one, it is under heavy bonds to execute the contract awarded it, and there is no will not be carried out according its terms. The present difficulty said to be due to the unexpectedly po quality of much of the stone found in the Santa Catalina quarries, by reason of which it becomes necessary to quarry a much greater quantity of stone than can be used in the work of construction. It may become neces but even in such case it would not follow that the contractors would be obliged to relinquish the contract, Capt. Meyler, the government englis being done, may be relied upon to protect the public interests at every stage. He has already notified the contractors that work is not going forward as fast as is desirable, and he may be trusted to take such further action as may be requisite, from time to time, to insure the completion of respect to affairs in the Far East is the harbor in due course.

The San Pedro Harbor will be built, and without much doubt it will be built within the time originally estimated as necessary for its proper construction. If by any possibility the present contract should be forfeited, the work will be readvertised, and others will take it up and carry it to completion. It is not of so much consequence who builds the harbor, as that the harbor will be built.

THE VENEZUELAN ARBITRATION. Both Venezuela and Great Britain have cause for satisfaction over the award of the Venezuelan Arbitration commission. The government of the makes sorry those who have believed United States has also cause for satisfaction, as having been instrumenta n bringing about a solution, by arbitration, of a dispute which at ime threatened to be serious, and which would probably have involved the United States in a war with Great Britain had not arbitration been agreed

The award of the Paris tribunal of arbitration is not a complete victory for either of the disputants, yet it is qualified victory for both. Of the territory in dispute, the major portion s given to Great Britain. But Venezuela has gained some of the important points for which she contended. Her claim to the complete control of the mouth of the Orinoco River is con firmed, and this is a concession of the utmost importance. Again, the rich gold regions on the Yarurari River the Venezuelan side of the boundary. These two valuable concessions will go their wonted places upon the aforesaid far toward offsetting the award of disputed territory to Great Britain, including the coast line from the mouth of the Essequibo River to Playa Point. The award is, in fact, a compromise; but it will doubtless be heartily an proved, both in Great Britain and in Venezuela, as bringing a long and tedious dispute to a close, with honor to both parties to the controversy. The London Post expresses the opinion that that award "does not altogether justify the principle of arbitration," and in timates that it would have been cheaper for England to have fitted out an expedition strong enough to enforce the British claims fifteen or twenty years ago. It might possibly have beer cheaper for Great Britain to have done this and it might not have been. Much would have depended upon the view which the United States would have taken of such an expedition. But, at all events, Great Britain should be better satisfied with a decision reached through the judicial deliberation of an impartial commission, than with a decision enforced by superior physica San Francisco proposes to give the gallant Twentieth Kansas Regiment, and Brig.-Gen. Funston, formerly colonel of that regiment, a reception, upon their return to these shores, commensurate with the deserts of these fighting and swimming Jayhawkers. None of the commands in the Philip-Cincinnati Enquirer learns that Maj? pines have performed more service than these stalwart lads from Sunflower State, and it is mee that they be acclaimed vocifer apon their return, not only by Califor ians, but by the people of every State through which they may pass or meward journey. sovernment, upon request of either side, to use its friendly offices, pro Britain and the Transvaal Republic Tile petitions which have been circuaction can do no harm-or, at least need do no harm-for the Presiden would make such offer as the petitions of his friendly offices being sought by one side or the other to the controversy; in which case it would be the natural and gracious thing for him to

But the offer of our friendly officer s one thing and taking sides in the quarrel is quite another thing. While we may do the one thing with perfec propriety, we may not do the other thing without a grave breach of international courtesy. It is necessary for our government, in the existing emergency, to observe the strictest neutral ity as between the belligerents. There is no doubt that this will be done, for the men who are at the head of affairs in our government know what their sides of the Transvaal question. As in all quarrels, whether they be between individuals or between nations, the right is not all on one side. As individuals we may hold such opinions as we see fit in this as in other matters. But as a nation we are bound to observe a strict neutrality, however strong may be the temptation to sympathize with the weaker power on th one hand, or to espouse the cause of our friends and brothers of Great Britain on the other.

The threatened war may yet be averted, although it appears to be inevitable. The people of the whole civlized world will hope that it may in some manner be avoided; and if the government of the Tinited States could be instrumental in bringing about a peaceful solution of the trouble, if would be a great triumph of diplomacy This, however, is not probable-in fact it seems hardly possible at the present stage of the controversy. But there will be no harm, certainly, in showing our friendship toward both belligerents by standing ready to tender our good offices whenever it shall appear that they will prove acceptable.

CONCERNING CERTAIN HOLLERIN'. The Evening Express has resumed

alleged value of the afternoon paper as an advertising medium, and about its alleged printing of the news "fourteer hours in advance of the morning papers," etc. and etc. Have the old fakirs and failures who brought that concern very near to the door of the sheriff resumed control of the evening organ? Do the present experimenters anybody in his senses to believe its absurd and groundless claims? Its impudent assertion that it has "the largest circulation in the city of Los a par with the adroit claim of that cunning Scot, the elder who was in the habit of announcin in large and inveracious type that "the Herald has the largest circula tion in America"-which was true, for its circulation in Europe was exceed ingly limited! The Times cannot, of course, claim that it is in the same with this noisy, widely-read, promise-making evening sheet, alleged advertisements that the alleged bargain-seeking women read "of evenngs;" but it has one quiet assertio to make, and to prove, should it be news all the time) has a larger regular bona fide circulation in the city of Los Angeles than has the evening sheet all put together (the circulation, not the sheet.) And The Times circulates outside of the city nearly as many copies as it circulates in the city, making a combined city and country circulation in excess of the local contrumperies, all rolled together "Let it be recorded!" in the dust. And let the rival's yawp cease—or go on, as the case may be. "Selah!" to quote the Ahkoond of Swat.

A few days ago the London newspapers were making remarks of a more or less heated character with reference the unduly excited state in which the American people were becoming over the yacht race. It is now our turn to smile. While we were reading the bulletins last Tuesday, all London was packed around the newspaper ofof that metropolis in such a dense mass that policemen could not locate their beats, and wouldn't have been able to reach them had they located them. At midnight the streets were thronged with crowds, which, according to a London dispatch, were "excitedly discussing the results of the contest with an intensity that no Derby or 'varsity boat race ever equaled, and which more nearly approached the scenes incident to an American election than anything England has here-tofore known." It would appear from this that our English brethren are not so all-fired cool and phlegmatic "their own selves."

The Chicago Post suggests that if, as the result of a war with England, "Oom" Paul should lose his job he might come to this country and reorganize the Farmers' Alliance, the Post claiming that his whiskers would be the only credentials needed. We doubt if Mr. Kruger could pass. President Kruger's circular fringe, which he appears to wear with so much grace and Kruger's circular fringe, which he ap-pears to wear with so much grace and abandon, is not of the same class as those wind-wooing adornments sported by Senator Peffer and other eminent and distinguished gentlemen of the Populist party who stepped from the Farmers' Alliance into the full blaze of Fame at a single bound. "Oom" Paul would probably find it very diffi-cult to get into the Farmers' Alliance without the necessary password and grip, and we feel that our esteemed contemporary is to be censured for holding out hopes to the distinguished President of the Transvaal republic for which there is no warrant.

Admiral Dewey has announced his ington as a present from the American people. Those who may desire to be represented in this graceful compli-ment to the hero of Manila may yet do so by forwarding their contributions to the treasurer of the Dewey home fund, Washington, D. C. $50,000 has already been subscribed and paid into the fund, but it would be pleasing to the admiral, no doubt, to have something left over for the furnishing of the new home and to stock its larder. By the way, where are the people who were making unpleasant remarks a while ago about this move-ment to present a home to the great admiral? They appear to be keeping still in a tone of voice that can be heard a mile and a half.

Before the people of this section of the State fall into the scheme of State control of water distribution at State expense (which means at the taxpayers' expense)—a scheme that originated in San Francisco and probably in the yellow railroad building—they should sat-isfy themselves that it is not a cunning scheme of the Southern Pacific Com-pany to secure the irrigation of its lands at the expense of the pubown lands at the expense of the pub-lic. The connection of W. H. Mills with the scheme casts suspicion upon it. He is the cunning and confidential agent of the S.P., and is not in the habit of doing things for his health, nor from motives of philanthropy. The whole question must be thoroughly sifted—canvassed in all its bearings—

"Teddy's" remarks, particularly when we come to consider the fact that every time Col. "Teddy" makes a politi-cal speech he lifts the hides of Democrats and hangs them on the fence In this instance the hide of John R. McLean is "among those present."

We must at least say that Dewey's pictures in the newspapers bear a sort of family resemblance to each other.

STATES MILITARY ACADEMY.

How Gen. Hancock Was Treated When He Was a Plebe-Queen Revenge Taken by Custer for a Trick Played on Him-Taking the Conceit Out of Newcomers.

[Philadelphia Times:] The statement hat hazing at the West Point Military cademy has become so brutal that he Washington authorities have been called upon to deal severely with all hazers there hereafter, recalls to mind some funny phases of "hazing" at that some funny phases of "hasing" at that military post. What makes them all the funnier is that the victims were, years after graduating, officers of national reputation. Besides, they told of their experiences themselves.

The summer of the year when Grant was nominated for President for the last time was a great summer at the dirst time was a great summer at the academy for old West Pointers. The board of visitors was largely composed of distinguished men, who were cadets when Grant was a cadet. As general of the army he came to the academy during the examination that summer, and the old schoolboys used to themselves in the evening in the board of visitors' room, in the basement of the hotel, with reminiscences of the themselves in the evening in the board of visitors' room, in the basement of the hotel, with reminiscences of the time when they wore the gray, bedecked with bell buttons. The heart and soul of the meeting was Gen. Grant, William B. Franklin, Profs. Peck and Capple, the one then a professor in Columbia College and the other a professor in a western university, were not far behind him when hazing stories came into play. Grant, as usual, was always reticent. But at times he was not loath to draw out some of his fellows about cadet capers that were fresh in his mind, and he enjoyed the reminiscences as heartily as the others. There was no brutality about hazing in their cadet days. Grant himself said that, but there was just enough trickery about it to make it a very tantalizing thing for the unfortunate "plebe" who was made the victim. Winfield S. Hancock was a majorgeneral of the army, with his famous war record fresh in its glory when the story of his hazing was told. He was a plebe taken in badly. "You see," said the member of the board who spoke of it one evening that summer, "Hancock, like all of us, came to the academy with an idea that he 'knew it all.' He was a whole-souled, manly boy, and no one cared to do anything that would be hurtful to him. However, he had to be taken in and done for. The graduating class had donned the blue and gone, and the third classe, and the plebes that would be in the following September the fourth classe, and the plebes that would be in the following september the fourth classe, and the plebes that would be in the following september the speaceful slumbers one night by the officer of the guard—at least he thought the cade woke him up was that lordly fellow. He was told that one of the tasks of a good soldier was to obey orders and ask no questions. He got his order, it was to get up a tree near the old fort near the camp, and, rifle in hand, he was to keep a strict watch on the hotel, as it was suspected some men from New York, who were harbored there, intended to make a ste

It was a hot night. Hancock had only his underwear on, and thus uni-formed he got into the tree. It is need-less to say that he discovered no marauders. As daylight began to break iess to say that he discovered no marauders. As daylight began to break over the mountains he became painfully aware that the early risers at the hotel were up and doing. In a short time all the windows were thrown open. There was Hancock in his raiment of white and his rife on his arm seated up in the tree patiently waiting for the men from New York. Of course, he came down when the real officer of the guard discovered him. He was a mightily surprised 'plebe' when he found he had been fooled. He often laughed over that 'hazing' when I used to dine with him at Governor's Island and talk over old times."

One of the funniest haze happenings, a member of the board said, was just before the war, when Custer was a cadet. He was induced to believe, when a "plebe," that one "plebe" every week had to get up an hour earlier than the rest of the corps and study. He was the elect one week. He did his "duty" until an early inspection of the barracks was made one morning by the superintendent. The young "plebe"

"duty" until an early inspection of the barracks was made one morning by the superintendent. The young "plebe" was disciplined for doing what he had been ordered to do, as he thought, by a high authority. Custer never forgot the hours of sleep he had lost, and quietly resolved to be revenged before he graduated. His revenge was a queer one, for it resulted in an extra hour's sleep for the whole cadet corps. The bugler, "Old Benz," was quartered in the soldiers' barracks, way on the northwest end of the post, near the river.

Ner. Benz was a slow walker, and it took im a long time to go from his quarters to the cadet barracks, due south of he parade ground. There he "took to the cadet barracks, due south of the parade ground. There he "took time" from the big tower clock, and sounded the bugle call for the cadets to get out of bed. One morning Benz, after his tedious march reached the cadet barracks. A look at the tower nearly, paralyzed him. There were no hands on the clock. By the time he had gone back to the soldiers' barracks and returned, with an official timepiece borrowed hastily for the occasion, the whole cadet corps had enjoyed the longest sleep on record at the academy. Then it was that the sentinels remembered that a shot had been heard just at the break of day from some quarter near the cadet barracks. But the call for the corporal of the guard and all else that followed resulted in no discovery. No one at the time ever thought of the clock tower. Custer always got the credit of knowing what had happened to the hands of that clock.

Probably one of the most serious hase doings was carried out when Grant and Pitcher and Franklin, Peck and Cappie wore gray coats. On a bitter cold night a "plebe" was awakened, and hastily made to put on his uniform—fortunately, his overcoat, too. The cadets who hustled him, he supposed, were a special detail from the superintendent's office. He was chosen, they told him, to "grun the guard" and they told him how to do it. Then he was to go to old For Put, way up on the western mountain ridge, and do sentry duty till sunrise. At that time he was to march down to the barracks, and bring with him a big branch of a cedar tree as evidence he had been up on the ridge.

The reader can imagine what a sensation the poor "plebe" made when, covered with snow and nearly frozen to death, he staggered down the "old bark road" into the barrack yard, with a huge cedar branch in his stiffened arms. The cadet who was thus hazed became twenty years afterward one of the famous corps commanders during the civil war.

Even Gen. Franklin, who enjoyed the reminiscence immensely, refused to say who he was. "It's all in a lifetime," said he, "and all we know about it was heresay." Grant laughed in his quiet way, and took an extra puff on his cigar. Amid a roar of laughter he asked quietly: "It wasn't you, was it, Franklin?"

There is one thing about West Point that cannot be denied. It is thoroughly democratic. The poor how and the millionaire's son are alike in the eyes of his fellows. Any "plebe" whose father is one of the 400, and who, because of that, attempts to parade his social standing, soon gets a fattening out. In the past few years the haze lessons that have resulted in bodily injuries to "plebes" have mostly, it is said, been the result of "putting on airs" by "plebes" who did not know that dollars did not make belt buttons on a rich boy's coat look brighter to the cadet corps than a poor boy's bell buttons. There is probably not a college or a university in the United States where "hazing" of some kind is not in vogue. In the eyes of a West Foint cadet, it is a necessity, if practiced in an innocent, harmless way, te take the conceit out of a newcomer. Pride at West Point must always have a heavy fall.

"PHWAT DEWEY SAID TO ME."

McNally and Malone were anchored at McCarthy's bar, Expressing their opinions of the Philopino war. McNally said it was a shame; he said

They argued and expressed themselves from every opint of view;
They emphasized their arguments until the air was blue;
They quoted great authorities, in language loud and strong;
Each one declared his side was right—the other side was wrong.

McNally said that Dewey didn't like the war a bit; He said that George was very glad to get a chance to quit. "An', furthermore," he added, as he proudly raised his head, "'Tis me thot can repate to you the words that Dewey said."

"Let's hear 'em," said McCarthy, who was standing at the bar,
"For Oi'm reight intheristed in this Fallypany war.
Oi ain't so posted on th' war as you an' Pat Malone,
For Oi've as much as Oi can do attindin' to me own."

McNally, thus encouraged, slowly but-toned up his coat, And in a noisy manner he began to clear his throat. He struck an attitude, and in a quite dramatic way He said: "Now, gints, Ol'il tell ye both phwat Dewey had to say.

'He said he was opposed, an' he would not consint to make
A war upon thim Philippines for innybody's sake.
He sez, 'Th' divil take ye all, 'twas me
thot blazed th' way,
An' now, ye dommed Kilkenny cats,
O'm goin' home to stay.'"

McNally paused; upon his friends he shot a searching glance;
He saw that they were much surprised; he had them in a trance.
He spoke again, in whispers low, in guarded tones said he:
"But thot's not all; Oi haven't tould phwat Dewey said to me."

Malone gazed at McCarthy, and Mc-Maione gazed at McCartny, and Mo-Carthy at Maione; They both gazed at McNally, who was silent as a stone. At last Maione, in timid tones, in-quired: "Is it true Thot Dewey's been discussin' these af-fairs av state wid you?"

McNally looked upon the pair, a twinkle in his eye.

Thought he: "Ol'll niver get th' drinks unless Ol make the try."

Then cautionsly he whispered: "Though Ol'd jipardize me head, Ol'll tell ye, for the drinks, the virry wourds that Dewey said."

Malone, as quick as lightning, held a dollar in his hand;
"Th' best," he said, "McNally, now ye have at command."
The order that McNally gave was strictly up to date;
McCarthy filled it quickly, so he wouldn't have to wait.

McNally sipped the tempting draught;
he slowly drank it down, While smiles of satisfaction banished
every haggard frown.
McCarthy and Malone both stood respectfully aside And patiently awaited what McNally would confide.

At length McNally wiped his lips; a smile of sweet content Informed Malone his dollar had been very wisely spent.
McNally stroked his chin and in a self-important way,
Said he: "O'll now repate to you what Dewey had to say."

McCarthy and Malone inclined to him an eager ear.
They craned their necks and hungrily they bent their heads to hear.
McNally watched the pair; he smiled;
he know there'd he some fun. And hurriedly and prudently prepared himself to run.

He spoke. Said he: "'Twas yistherday, about th' hour av four, Oi met his Royal Highness (Mack was standing in the door.)
Oi doffed me hat; Oi bowed to him;
sez Oi, 'How do ye do?'
An' Dewey sez to me,' he yelled "says Dewey, 'How-de-do?'"

No faith in the ground, or atmosphere, or previous cultivation and care, only a fluctuat ing spinal column, as easily influence as that of the ordinary dispenser of calamitous prophecy. In spite of all this, look at the score! Crops 20 per cent. greater than the greatest expec-tations, hundreds of men engaged in their care and handling, enlarged bearore than equal year's loss, and a buoyant market, the top notch of which is not yet reached! Surely Santa Barbara should rise to doxologies and benedictions and "Learn to dig and irrigate."

Two hundred and seventy-eight thousand dollars for the members of the San Antonio Fruit Exchange at Pomona for last year's orange crop, and this year's crop estimated at one-third more, or 600 carloads, ought to make it reasonably clear to inquiring home-seekers that intermittent periods of drought are not, necessarily, fatal to citrus-fruit raising. Local climatic conditions, aside from the rainfall, due to topographical and geographical causes, are the leading constituents and greatest factors in the success of citrus-fruit growing, and these conditions abound throughout what is known as the citrus belt. That this is not a mere dogmatism, the above re-sults and scores like them readily prove. In years when water was cheap and plenty, it is probable that many orchards were overirrigated. The present scarcity has been the means of valuable knowledge, in that it has proven just what measure of drought well-cultivated orchards will stand and duce good fruit. Wholesale Jewelers Victimized by Clever Swindler.

Clever Swindler.

Entenmann & Borst, wholesale jewelers at No. 217½ South Spring street, were victimized yesterday by a clever swindler, who succeeded in selling them for $100 a bag of brass filings supposed to be gold dust. The trick was worked by substituting the base metal for the precious after the bargain had been closed.

The man who worked the swindle was slightly known to the jewelers by the name of Madden. He claimed to be a miner and dropped into the office frequently of late to chat about metallurgy. He said he had worked in the gold mines of Australia, and had also been in the Klondike. His manner was always quiet, and he did not attract always quiet, and he did not attract much attention. Yesterday he came into the office with sixteen ounces of gold dust which he said he wanted to deposit as se-curity for $100 he would like to borrow for a few days. Mr. Entenmann tested the gold and found it to be of good quality, probably worth $200. He then instructed his partner, Mr. Borst, to advance the money as the security was all right, and walked out. Mr.

was all right, and walked out. Mr. Borst stepped into a back room to get some wax to seal the bag of gold dust, and while he was gone a bag of brass filings was substituted in place of the gold. This was sealed and put away and the swindle was not discovered for several hours.

Later in the afternoon the same man called at the assaying office of James Irving & Co., No. 128 North Main street ,and made another attempt to get an advance of $100 on his gold dust, but was unsuccessful, as they refused to let him have any money.

Madden, or whatever his name may be, is described as about 45 years of age, 5 feet 9 inches tall, dark complexion and wears a brown moustache.

TRAINING ANIMALS.

GREAT PATIENCE REQUIRED TO TEACH THEM TRICKS.

How Dogs and Monkeys Differ in Brain Power, Just as Human Beings Do-A Judicious Use of Whip Necessary - Vicious Monkeys Prove Most Tractable.

[Washington Times:] The trained monkeys, dogs and ponies which re-cently appeared in Washington were remarkable for the clever manner in which they performed tricks and acrobatic feats usually gone through by men and women in circuses, and their training required months of work and more patience than is possessed by the average person.

"We have offers of hundreds of dogs at every city we visit," said the trainer, "but it is seldom that we buy any, unless they strike our fancy with ing especially smart and easy manage.

"The first thing to teach a dog is to mind, and it is not as easy as mind, and it is not as easy as you would think. Kindness is all right, but firmness is better, and there are few dogs that can be trained without getting a taste of the rod. The adage about 'sparing the rod' is as applicable to dogs as it is to children. It takes six months to train a dog to follow with the other dogs and to answer. with the other dogs, and to answer his name. After that his education begins in earnest. Dogs are not the least imitative, and, while a monkey will pick up a trick by seeing other monkeys perform it, you have to train each dog separately to do his work. The old adage 'you can't teach an old dog new tricks,' does not hold good in our business, and it is easier to teach an old dog new tricks than it is to teach a new dog old tricks. "Dog sense does not run in families either, for there are Shellbark and Maj. Russian poodles, full brothers, but Shelibark is a colleged graduate, while Major is still in the kindergarten. Shellbark, the white woolly clown with brown ears, appears in almost every act, from knocking over the baskets to running under the hoop, while Major hauls one of the wagons around and does odd jobs.

STARS AMONG THE DOGS. with the other dogs, and to answer

hauls one of the wagons around and does odd jobs.

STARS AMONG THE DOGS.

"The stars among the dogs are just like the stars in the comic opera, grand opera, or any theatrical performance. All they do is the one speciality, and then they rest. They never appear in the street parade, and for jealousy they have gotten the human stars beaten all hollow. Take Ellis, the white English collie that rides the pony bareback in the show, and jumps over the pony, and rides in the hurdles. After the show Ellis lies down and rests, and if any of the other dogs make a noise around him there is trouble, for Ellis starts a fight. He is jealous, too, and, if any other dogs gets more applause than Ellis, he sulks and does not want to act. Cyclone is another star. He is the big white greyhound that made the high leap, and that is all he did. He makes a leap twice a day, and then he takes it easy. The smartest dog in the show is Dixle, the little white fox terrier, with black ears, that made the did we from the high ladder. It took just thirty minutes to teach him to climb the ladder, but he did not like the idea of making the jump. After twenty or thirty minutes' coaxing, however, he jumped, and since then we have had no trouble. In an hour he learned a trick we have spent weeks trying to teach other dogs, but none has succeeded like Dixle.

"The French poodles, which perform the act of 'Mr. and Mrs. Snyder,' and the 'Baby Bunch,' were easy to train, but they are so timid that they never gain full confidence in themselves, and at every performance they are afraid they are going to make mistakes. The care which they exercised in sitting In the chairs and which looked as if they were trying not to rumple their clothes, was caused by their timidity, but the audience thought it was good acting, so the result is just the same. They have to be treated like timid children, and only coaxing and petting will get them to go through with their work.

A YEAR TO LEARN A TRICK.

Italian, whom he had bitten so badly that his arm had to be amputated, while "Joe," who was chief of the fire department, and held the hose which extinguished the fire, bit two drunken soldiers at a soldiers' home in California so badly that he was sentenced to be shot, but was bought by the circus people from the soldier as he was being taken out to be killed. Both monkeys showed their vicious spirit by snapping at every one who came near them except the trainer, who was compelled to frequently club them with the butt of his whip to keep them afraid of him. Otherwise he would not have been able to make them perform.

A YEAR TO LEARN A TRICK.

"It required a year to teach Ellis, the white English collie, to leap on the back of the moving pony. He was first taught to jump up on the pony while it was standing, the broad board saddle which he first rode on being used. After he had learned to jump up on this board, the pony was walked around, and the trouble began, for Ellis could not keep his balance, and it was several months before he got expert enough to stay on the moving animal; after that was accomplished he had to be taught to keep his balance on the bare back of the pony. He could jump on the pony all right, but he could not stick there. Finally "It required a year to teach Ellis, the at he could not stick there. Finally is found that by standing near the only's shoulder he could brace himif and retain his footing, and he has the trick down pretty fine, but even ow he is not asked to jump on the my more than twice at each performance. It is a star act, and causes ore comment than any other in the low."

ance. It is a star act, and causes more comment than any other in the show."

Of all the men connected with the show any one of them could be better spared than "Old Sam." His name is Sam Breniser. but none of the show people know his family name, and it was only learned by asking Sam himself. With the show people he is simply "Old Sam." who has charge of the dogs. day and night, when they are not in the show ring, and when they are Sam is in the tent near, dressing the dogs and monkeys for their acts. Sam feeds the dogs and marshals them to and from the drain to the show grounds when a new town is entered. He knows the name of every dog, and the dogs know his voice and obey him. Without him it would require fifteen or twenty men to lead the canines about. Sam has two or three helpers who whip in the disobedient dogs, but most of them follow him closely and halt and start at his word. One of his hardest tasks is to teach a new dog its name when it has to be changed. He spends hours every day repeating over and over to the dog the name it has to bear, and then he dog is put into the yard where the others are confined, and its name called out. If it does not respond, one of the men enters the yard and brings it out. This is kept up until the dog finally learns its name, but even then it has spells of forgetfulness and has to be reminded by a sharp cut of the whip.

JULIE The start of the shaking powy, knows when to nod the head in affirm.

The way Juilet, the talking power knows when to nod the head in affirm knows when to nod the head in affirmative and when to shake it in the negative was explained by the trainer, who said signs were used, and that the pony watched all his movements when he had it face the audience, but what the signs were the trainer said was a secret, and the closest watch on his movements failed to reveal them. his movements failed to reveal them, though the pony could see them as it went through its performance in private for the reporter, and never failed to give the correct answers to the questions.

According to the trainer, the more vicious the monkey the easier it is to train, and "Jim," the big Simian, which kept the gong on the fire engine ringing as the apparatus dashed into the arena, was purchased from an

is now in the Yosemite Valley, and after leaving Los Angeles the itinerary includes the copper regions of Arizona and the Grand Cafion of the Colorado. The party includes, among others, Dr. James Douglass of New York, president of the institute; Dr. Rossiter W. Raymond, editor of the New York Engineering and Mining Journal, secretary: Prof. Theodore D. Rand of Philadelphia, treasurer; Herr Ernest Fleming of Berlin, representing the German imperial government; Prof. Heinrich Reis of the mining department of Cornell University: Prof. N. W. Lord, University of Ohio; Prof. E. W. Parker, Washington, D. C., Unasad States Geological Survey; Samuel Thomas of Catasauqua, Pa., of the Thomas Iron Company; Prof. W. P. Biske of Arizona, Prof. Ferrier of Rossland, B. C.; Prof. A. Thies, superintendent of the Halile gold mines, South Carolina, and Prof. J. F. Newsom of Stanford University.

The members of the institute have been the guests of the California Miners' Association since entering the State, and Los Angeles is represented on the committee by Prof. Theodore B. Comstock and Lew Aubury. Other members of the Entertaining Committee are Lieut. Gov. J. H. Neff, W. C. Raiston, E. H. Benjamin, Hon. F. A. Leach and C. G. Yale. Mayor Eaton has appointed committees from the Chamber of Commerce and Southern California branch of the California finers' Association to receive and entertain the visitors here.

Borate mines near Daggett, Albert McCuistion, Walter McCuistion and Ed Nelson, were severely burned by an explosion a few days ago. They arrived here on the Santa Fé train yesterday morning and were taken to the Sisters' Hospital for treatment.

The accident resulted from the sprinkling of gasoline on the floor and in the crevices of the room to destroy insect pests. The gasoline became ignited, presumably from the heat of the sun, while all the men were in the building, and resulted in a heavy explosion. None of them escaped injury, but Walter McCuistion received the worst burns about the face and head, which will probably result in permanent disfigurement, if not lasting injury.

Mrs. White, the mother of the McCuistion boys, was in Daggett at the time of the accident, and went at once to the mine where she took charge of the injured workmen. It is thought all the men will recover.

FOR RATE REVISION.

Meeting Held to Consider Regulation of Freight Tariffs.

A meeting of the Transportation Committee of the Merchants' and Manufacturers' Association was held Friday to consider the action of the St. Louis Traffic Bureau and other or-ganizations in Chicago in a suit brought by them before the Interstate Commerce Commission against the transcontinental railroads and tributranscontinental railroads and tributary lines...

It is proposed by the traffic bureau to demand a revision of the freight tariffs so as to do away with the differentials between carload and less than carload shipments, and to grade the rates from St. Louis and Chicago East, and especially that every point on the Pacific Coast receive the same or less terminal rates than San Francisco, Sacramento, Portland, Sattle, Tacoma and other terminal points.

No definite action was taken, but it was agreed that the jobbers of the Pacific Coast raust unite and form a plan of action. Another meeting will be held this week.

Hudyan Cures.

Hudyan strengthens and quiets the nerves and nerve centers.

The mind is usually first to show evidence of a letting down of the nerves. Your memory becomes impaired, your intellect becomes clouded; you become despondent, melancholy; you shun society; you become nervous, morose, irritable and are unable to apply yourself. You have headaches or dizzy spells, Fig. 5, hollow eyes and dark rings under eyes, Fig. 4, your heart becomes weak or palpitates, Fig. 3, your digestion gets wrong, Fig. 2, your liver becomes inactive-torpid, Fig. 1, and you become costive. You may have been of a joyful and gay disposition, but now you are sad and sober; unnatural fears take possession of your mind. your strength is lost, your back pains you and is weak. Your sleep is interrupted and you awake mornings feeling tired and unrefreshed.

This represents one who is on the verge of nervous prostration. The above symptoms are messengers to warn you that your nervous system is breaking down.

Hudyan will cure you. Hudyan stands at the head as a remedy for strengthening the nerves and restoring their natural tone when overstrained or abused, Hudyan speedily makes its influence felt, in nerve quietude, improved appetite, corrected bowels, increased strength, increased weight. Hudyan is nature's own remedy for building up and rejuvenating the nervous system. Hudyan is for men and women.

IN WOMEN, these nervous conditions are usually associated with painful or irregular periods, profuse or scanty menses, profuse mucous discharge, and chronic ulcerations or inflammations.

Hudyan is a capital remedy for all such conditions, for Hudyan strengthens the delicate organism-Hudyan rebuilds all broken-down tissues. Women who suffer with headaches, Fig. 1, sunken eyes, Fig. 2, hollow cheeks and pale faces, Fig. 3, irregular flutterings of heart, Fig. 4, weakness of limbs, Fig. 5, should take Hudyan. Hudyan removes one and all these symptoms. Dragging pains, bearing-down feeling, weakness of kidneys, cold extremities, extreme weakness, sharp pains, giddiness, a timid, nervous, restless feeling, sparks before the eyes, depressed spirits, all these conditions call for Hudyan. Don't wait until complete prostration has overtaken you. Hudyan will avert the danger. Hudyan will make you well and strong. Everyone who takes Hudyan, recommends Hudyan, because Hudyan does what is claimed for it and Hudyan cures are permanent. Hudyan is pleasant to take, and is agreeable in effect. It is readily tolerated by the weakest of stomachs. Hudyan does not nauseate. Get Hudyan from your druggist, 50c a package, or six packages for

Gray Homespun Suits and Skirts

Wherever one goes in Eastern cities the popularity of gray homespun for women's apparel is most noticeable. Such popularity and general use has made them scarce and played havoc with prices. Twenty-five per cent advance was bulletined last week. We are the fortunate owners of a liberal supply of suits and skirts, but at the present rate of selling we'll soon run short. Take our advice and buy now. Every garment is made in the height of style. We quote.

NEW DEVELOPMENTS IN THE OIL CONTEST.

not Make a Report Until Tomorrow-The Coming

The Divorce Mill Grinds an Unusua Grist in the Courts Yesterday. County License Ordinance Case.

The contest over the limits protect ing Sunset Park now being waged be-tween the wild-catters and the property-owners remains in statu quo ere were no new developments in the situation yesterday, and the report of the Fire and Water Committee, that now has the matter in charge, is expectantly awaited. The probability is that Councilmen Lauder and Todd, who constitute a majority of the commit-tee, will recommend some slight change in the existing lines in order to get Police Commissioner Parker out of trouble. It is not believed that the requests of the oil men to prolong the seventy-five-foot line along Ocean View avenue will be listened to at all, and Councilman Pessell said vesterday that he would not vote to change the northern line now established. As the speculators must get six votes in the Council to pass the ordinance over the Mayor's veto, it is by no means prob-able that there will be any change whatever in the existing lines. The bids for supplying the city with 15,000 feet of fire hose will be opened on the 30th inst., and much interest is beginning to be manifested regarding the disposition of the contract. Fire Chief Moore thinks that the price on the standard brands of hose is apt to be higher this year than last, owing to a general rise of prices all along the line. The last hose purchased cost the city 80 cents per foot, but it is thought that Paragon, Bay State and Victor Jacket, the three standard brands of hose in the Los Angeles department, will cost at least 90 cents per foot this year. 15,000 feet of fire hose will be opened

[AT THE CITY HALL]

AT A STANDSTILL.

NO CHANGE IN THE OIL-LIMITS

FIGHT.

Speculation Rife Regarding the Re Committee-Fire Hose Again Deands Attention.

There was no change yesterday in set Park. Everything is at a stand-still in expectation of the report of the Fire and Water Committee. This Committee has already decided what it will recommend to the Council, and has formulated its report on the matter, but the result will not be made public until tomorrow. It is generally thought until tomorrow. It is generally thought that two of the committee, Councilmen Lauder and Todd, will vote for some modification of the existing line, but there is very little likelihood that Councilman Pierce will agree to any such measure. From the temper of the committee at the meeting held on the committee at the meeting held on Friday for a discussion of the question, none of the members will accede to much exaggerated form has already found its way into eastern papers and journals.

"The oil men claim that their industry has done wonders for the town and that many men are employed, and thereby the condition of the working classes is benefited. This is largely stuff in my opinion. During the last municipal campaign I had occasion to make a canvass of a large part of the oil district, and I could scarcely find fifteen men who made their living from the industry by hand labor. Ninety per cent. of all the money that is taken out of these wells goes into the pockets of the pipe manufacturers in Pittsburgh and other eastern manufacturing centers. Some of the tools are now bought here, and no one can really blame Fred Baker, our Councilman from the Second Ward, for looking out for his large hardware interests. It would be foolish from a business standpoint for him to antagonize the oil men or any part of them.

backs down from this position and allows the few paltry speculators interested to gain another concession, business men of wealth, whose presence in the city is necessary to its progress and development, will have very little faith in their elected representatives, and will not only refuse to invest money in the section now menaced, but will be chary in trusting their wealth to a municipality governed by such fickle methods."

Mr. Marsh also said many other forcible things concerning the promises which members of the Council had made to him. He contended that he had a perfect right to feel hurt, as the oil derricks and attendant evils had already cost him thousands of dollars, owing to the depreciation of property.

It is more than likely that already cost him thousands of property.

It is more than likely that before the proposed ordinance is drafted, some provision concerning derricks will be inserted. The speculators who have put their foot into this fight realize that something must be sacrificed to the demands of property-owners, if they are to obtain consideration at the hands of the Council, and as the Mayor and several members of the city's legislative body are known to favor this move, some such provision will probably be made. The main body of the oil men who have already erected derricks, would probably oppose such a scheme on the part of the wild-catters, and as a result pressure would be brought to bear to induce the few to give up the fight for a change of line.

The whole matter will, in all probables.

They May be Higher Than Last Year.

Fire Chief Moore thinks that the bids made this year for supplying the city with 1500 feet of fire hose will be higher han those of last year. The standard than those of last year. The standard brands of hose could at that time be bought for about 80 cents per foot, but owing to the general advance in prices on all kinds of articles during the last few months, the probability is that neither Paragon, Bay State nor Victor Jacket, the three standard brands used by the Los Angeles department, can be bought for less than 90 cents. Undoubtedly some brands of hose will be offered at a lower figure, as competition to secure the big contract is keen.

Martin, Marsh of the firm of Ramish & Marsh, who is at present superintending some excavating work on the Surf line above Santa Barbara, was about the City Hall yesterday, and he expressed his opinion on the oil situation in no measured terms. Mr. Marsh has had much experience with the oil industry, and has traveled about the country enough to view the situation in a broad light. In the presence of some of the Council to consider a further reduction of the situation in a broad light. In the presence of some of the Council to consider a further reduction of the line protecting property in the vicinity of the parks. Aiready one section of the city has been ruined by the tall, unsightly derricks, and it is time to call a halt. I did a very considerable part of the work on the Wilshire tract and I know that $30,000 was spent in improving the property. People have now erected fine homes there, and it is a shame and a disgrace for the city to allow any further encroachments in this direction.

"Not alone would such action by the Council disgust many people with the city government, and do an irreparable injournals.

patrons as a part of their meals, one pint of wine in an original package, "manufactured in California from grapes grown in the State."

The bill of complaint then recites that, under the charter, the city has power to regulate and license all its professions, trades, callings and occupations, "provided that no discrimination shall be made between persons engaged in the same business otherwise than by proportioning the tax upon any business to the amount of the business done."

Under an ordinance, numbered 232, it is provided that every person or firm conducting a restaurant doing a gross business of more than 1400 a month must pay a tax of $2 per month. The total number of such eating houses in Los Angeles, plaintiff believes, is 142, all paying the $2 license tax every month.

The number of eating houses here, doing this sort of a business, plaintiff believes to be forty-four. This special tax is payable on the 10th day of every month in advance, and anyone carrying on business without paying it is punishable by a fine of $200 or imprisonment for ninety days, or both.

the special tax is unreasonable, unjust, oppressive, partial and unfair in that the sum of $18 a month is an unreasonable amount to require him to pay for furnishing his patrons wine with their meals, when the keepers of restaurants who furnish tea, coffee, or milk slone to their patrons are required to pay but $2 a month for conducting the same business.

to pay but $2 a month for conducting the same business.

The last argument for plaintiff's position is that ordinance No. 5746 "contravenes the policy of the State of California and the laws thereof for encouraging viticulture and the manufacture and sale of Ca ifornia wine, and is in conflict with such general laws."

Plaintiff's prayer, is that this ordinance be declared to have been adopted without power, and that the same is small and void so far as it imposes a special tax; that the city be perpetually enjoined from asserting any rights thereunder, and that the Tax Collector be forever restrained from asking Bailhe for the special tax.

PROMISSORY NOTE. H. Greena-walt is suing J. K. Stump to recover $300 alleged to be due on an unsecured promissory note executed October 9, 1895, at 10 per cent.

THEY MAKE ANSWER. An answer has been filed in the suit of J. W. McCelland against Mrs. Bertha S. Ball, his former wife, and her present husband, Capt. Charles J. Ball, the Adams-street capitalist. The action was brought to recover $13,500 and for the annulment of the decree by which Mrs. Ball received her divorce from McClelland. Mrs. Ball and her husband declare that McClelland made a voluntary gift of his property to his wife in 1891. The real estate, they say, was community property, upon which a homestead had been filed. The defendants also deny that McClelland was mentally deranged and incompetent to manage his property. They say there was an agreement between McClelland and Mrs. Ball, made in 1895, whereby he released all claims against his former wife, in consideration of the relinquishment by her of the title to certain lots in this county. The statute of limitation is also pleaded.

respondence.] It is known that Leon ard, the partner of Herbert Glover, who was shot and killed about a week ago at Orange by Officer Murray, while resisting that officer, is one of the worst criminals that has ever infested this country. Deputy Sheriff Hannah returned today from the north where, in company with Deputy Sheriff Bush, he landed Leonard in the State's prison at Folsom. He states that not-withstanding the fact that Leonard was carefully searched twice before he was placed in the Los Angeles jail, when he was brought out of that repository of criminals on their way north, a large knife was found on his person. Leonand waxed wrathful when this weapon was found, swearing that had he known the officers would have found the knife he would have made good use of it before. At Bakersfield, Fresno and other towns en route friends of Leonard came to the train to see him, one of whom from Fresno gave him his address. The closest watch was kept upon him all the way through the San Joaquin Valley for foar an attempt would be made by his friends to liberate him. Upon arrival at Folsom he was asked by the warden if he had anything of which he wanted special care taken during his incarceration. He replied that he had, producing the address. When asked whose it was he said it was that of his cousin. The warden recognized it as the handwriting of one of the worst criminals that had ever been within the walls of the Folsom prison and who had been released only a few weeks before. ard waxed wrathful when this weapon eased only a few weeks before. It is now also known that Glover was an ex-convict, having been released from Folsom only a few months before his advent into Southern California. The two men were certainly very bad characters and dangerous, and Officers Murray and Bush are fortunate to have come out of the shooting scrape at Orange without mortal wounds inflicted upon them.

STATE AND COLUMN TAXABLE

STATE AND COUNTY TAXES. The computation of State and county taxes has been concluded by the County Auditor, the figures being as

Total valuation, $9.953,295; State and county tax, $139,346.13; road tax, $24,-635.63; special school tax, $29,684.92; city tax, $24,839.65. Grand total, $217,506.33.
The tax rate inside cities in the county this year will be $1.40 on the hundred dollars' valuation, and in the country districts, $1.75 on the same valuation. The first installment of taxes falls due Monday, October 9. They will become delinquent October 27.
WORK OF THE CANNERY.

WORK OF THE CANNERY. Since the opening of the cannery at the beginning of the fruit season this year there has been no occasion for any one who wanted to work at fair wages to fail to have it. The cannery has disbursed from $15,000 to $30,000 per month for labor and fruit, the larger portion of which found its way into circulation again among the many business firms of the city. So far this season the output of the institution in cans has been as follows: Apricots, 302,479; peaches, 448,049; pears, 168,111; grapes, 9741; plums, 5804; apples, 625; tomatoes, 63,191, or a total of 982,970 tomatoes, 63,191, or a total of 982,970 cans. The cannery is now in the very midst of the tomato season and in all probability will run the remainder of the month on this veegtable, which will make the output for the season run considerable above the million mark. This will be the work of the first season the plant has been running, which is undoubtedly a very satisfactory showing. The output next season is expected to exceed this by at least one half. As a result of the establishment of the cannery many farmers in the valley are paying more attention to fruit interests and are consequently planting many deciduous fruit trees.

The Remarkable Experience of Mrs Anna Johnson, 1432 San Pedro St., Los Angeles, Cal.

Doctors said the knife was the only remedy—Ordered to the hospital to have one of her kid-s neys removed—Friends became interested and refused to allow her to go — Mrs. Johnson and her daughter recommends McBurney's Kid-ney and Biadder Cure— And today Mrs. Johnson walks the streets of Los Angeles, a living, enthusiastic witness as to the success of McBurney's Kidney and Bladder

The most remarkable cure in the history of medicine. Doctors and patients interested invited to call on Mrs. Johnson and hear her story. Investigate this cure.

The case of Mrs. Anna Johnson has baffed the skill of physicians of Los Angeles. Mrs. Johnson was 60 years old. For 30 years she has been a victim of kidney and bladder troubles and rheumatism. Doctors in the city examined her and told her that the only help for her was to have one of her kidneys removed. Mrs. Johnson of course consented, the doctors made arrangements to take her to the hospitait, the sambul ance was ready to take her, and sympathizing friends were around weeping, for the doctors said. "We fear the results." Mrs. Johnson was 60 years old, and must undergo such a dangerous operation. Thus she was looking through the great Vailey of Death, ready and willing; poor woman, consented to be operated on, if possible to save her life.

The devoted daughter and friends, seeing the poor chances for her recovery, interfered Investigation Invited.

Mrs. Anna Johnson was cured three years ago, from the use of McBurney's Kidney and Bladder Cure. Those interested can call at 1435 San Pedro St. Los Angeles, Cal., and Mrs. Johnson will tell you the story of her recovery. Doctors and patients suffering from kidney and bladder trouble are cordially invited to call and see for themselves the wonderful result attained from the use of McBurney's Kidney and Bladder Cure. One bottle cures.

Rheumatism is caused by uric and only by removing this poisonous acid on the blood, and only by removing this poisonous acid can rhoumatism and neuraligic troubles be cured. Uric acid finds its way into the blood because the kidneys are waskened and do not throw it off from the system. Restors the kidneys and you restore the power that will force the uric acid from the body. That is just what McBurney's Kidney and Bladder Cure does. It drives the deadly uric acid from the blood. It sustains the organs that austain life and the forces that make blood.

McBurney's Kidney and Bladder Cure is sustains the organs that austain life and the forces that make blood.

McBurney's Kidney and Bladder Cure is guaranteed to be aboutely harmless, and a strong tonic in building up the weak and a strong tonic in building up the weak and astrong tonic in building up the weak and abblittated. It cures acute or muscular rheumatism in from one to five days. Sharp shooting pains in any part of the body stopped in a few doses. A prompt, complete and permanent cure for lameness, soreness, stiff back and pains in hips and loins. Chronic rheumatism, sciatica, lumbago or pain in the back are speedily cured. It seldom fails to give relief from one to two doses, and almost invariably cures before one botte has been used.

Do you suffer with pain in the back and bladder? Does your feet and legs swell? Do you have a constant desire to urinate and a tired feeling, and your heart flutter? Do you have scalding? Do you have brick-dust deposits? If you have the above symptoms take ten drops of McBurneys. One bottle cures.

McBurney Will Prove That His Remedy Cures.

So many false testimonials have been given relative to cures performed by fake kidney cures, that Mr. McBurney feels it his duty to notify the public to beware. Mr. McBurney says: "I only ask for justice. I only want the public to interview patients cured by my kidney and bladder Cure, talk with them, see for yourself, and you will be satisfied that McBurney's Kidney and Bladder Cure has done all that was hoped for."

Last Sunday Mr. McBurney advertised he would give with every bottle of his Kidney and Bladder Cure one 25c bottle of Liver tablets, free of charge, and hundreds availed themselves of this opportunity. In order to give the country people, as well as the city people, a chance. Mr. McBurney has extended the time one week longer.

Take time by the forcicek, and never put off a duty you owe to yourself or to others, but go at once and purchase a bottle of McBurney's Kidney and Bladder Cure. One bottle cures.

The Conduckter looked kind of steddy at paw fer a minute and then sed:

"All rite."

So he went on punchin the Tickets, and after he was up at the other End of the Car, paw says:

"They am't nothin Like Havin nurve and Keepin' your Wits about you. I hope you'll take after me and always po Enuff to keep Cool and Camm When you git in Tite places. I wouldn't of Done a Thing Like That only this Rode run over a Cow for Uncle Henry Wunst and Wouldn't pay him nothin."

Purty soon the Conduckter Came Back and Leaned against the Seat in front of us, and Says to paw:

"So the General manager is one of your fambly, is He? When was you in to See the Old gentleman Last?"

"About a week ago," paw Says.

Another Life Saved.

My son had been complaining for some time, but we could not ascertain the cause, until we were suddenly surprised by the appearance of a dangerous looking lump on the abdomen. In our fear we called in the first physician we could reach in the neighborhood. He pronounced it "strangulated hernia" and said nothing could be done. The boy must be chloroformed and the rapture forced back, and if that failed he must submit to an operation. He also assured us that delay now of even a few hours meant death to our son. While deliberating over the matter I chanced to hear that Harry Angel's son had been cured of Rupture by Prof. Joseph Fandrey, No. 642 S. Main Street. I. consulted him at once, put my son in his care and a happy father and mother can testify that by Prof. Fandrey's skill our son's life is saved. One of the leading surgeons of the city as well as his parents witnessed the fact that without chloroform or the knife the rupture was returned through the small ring to its proper place and our son is saved from strangulated hernia and is today on the way to a permanent cure. Anyone wishing further information in regard to this case, please call on or address, Paul Jordan, 2024 East 36th street.

were to tell the object of their visit and to listen to any suggestions from citizens of Los Angeles present. Among the interested attendants were representatives of the various civic associations of the city, and other prominent citizens.

citizens. 2:40 the meeting was called to by J. S. Slauson, president of the ber of Commerce, who in a brief ss introduced the visitors, saying address introduced the visitors, saying that he did not know whether their ideas were right or wrong. He asked that consideration be given the addresses made, and called upon William Thomas to present the case for the San

In part Mr. Thomas said: "Our idea is to have this State take up the work is to have this State take up the work for itself, supplementing any work done by the government. This is a work that I am afraid the government will never be able to carry to completion because of the opposition of the eastern population who do not understand the needs of the great West. "The entire matter is a business proposition and is resolved into nothing more than ownership of water by the State. Not one cent of money shall be spent until we know what the whole thing will cost, and to this end a survey is proposed to secure the necessary data."

vey is proposed to secure the necessary data."

The speaker asked for the coöperation of Los Angeles in the convention to be held November 14 at San Francisco, adding that a strong delegation from this city would aid much in the work in hand. Mr. Thomas called attention to the income which would accrue to the State from the sale of water power as well as from the increased taxable value of the property benefited. In closing the speaker asked for free criticism of the plans proposed.

J. S. Filcher, secretary of the association, read a printed address to the clitzens of California, declaring the need for the conservation of the flood waters of the State, and calling a convention to meet in San Francisco on November 11 to Advisor of the State, and calling a convention to meet in San Francisco

UNIVERSAL JUDGMENT:

Thanks to a Discriminating Public

Truth, Honesty, Merit and Skill Have Triumphed.

True are the words that "nothing succeeds like success," The vicinity of 245 South Spring St. is becoming famous, made so by the success attending the efforts of the management of the Homo-Alo Medical Institute. The steady stream of people seen flocking to and from the Hemo-Alo offices is attracting widespread attention. Universal judgment is in their favor-you get just what is advertised. Best physician's advice, examination and medicines for Fifty Cents.

Were it not for the fact that every member of the staff of the associated physicians in attendance at the Homo-Alo Medical Institute sees and consults with upward of 80 patients each day, while the ordinary physician in general practice sees only one or two, their services could not be obtained for the small fee

Each member being thus brought into personal contact with every form of disease naturally becomes, if such a thing be possible, more able to treat successfully all forms of chronic, deep seated and lingering disease, which are popularly supposed to be incurable Still, taking into consideration their skill, they assall to do nothing but what reason, judgment and common sense has taught them. They are not miracle workers, but as day succeeds day many cures are being made which could be called modern miracles. Still every intelligen person knows that knowledge is power and the success of any one physician must only come to

Facts are stubborn things, therefore incontrovertible, and the fact is now a well established one winning for the staff of Associated Homo-Alo Physicians an enviable position. It has been strated with gratifying results to hundreds of patients that the Ho tute is not only a success financially, but a boon to suffering humanity. These physicians are bound by no school or sect, but the best of every school of medicine is selected and each and every one calling is surprised at the accurate diagnosis given, which only has been obtained by special study, hospital training and years of experience in treating all forms of chronic, nervous and deep-seated diseases. The Associated Physicians are consulted daily by scores of people of all stations and conditions of life. Twice have their offices had to be extended in order better accommodate their constantly increasing practice.

The Homo-Alo Medical Institute is an incorporation backed by $500,000 capital stock. More physicians engaged, more capital invested than in any similar institution in the United States Their laboratory is a complete drug store within itself and is stocked with the best medicines money can buy or science and skill produce. Their offices are the best equipped with all modern medical, surgical and electrical appliances of any institute outside of New York city. Why pay more when you can get the best within your reach? KEROSENE BOOMING. Oil (petroleum) has advanced again, and it seems, from the fact that the production at the wells is now less than curtion at the wells is now less than current requirements, says the Chicago Grocer, the runs being from 15,000 to 20,000 barrels below the shipments, that still further advances will follow.

Crude petroleum has been advanced 3 cents by the Standard Oil Company, the price of the Pennsylvania produce reaching $1.45, and of Indiana oil $1.01 3 cents by the Standard Oil Company, the price of the Pennsylvania produce reaching $1.45, and of Indiana oil $1.01 a barrel. Since a month ago the rise amounts to nearly 20 cents a barrel. The cause of the boom are to be found in the lower stocks of visible oil, the scarcity of new producing territory and the falling off in "wildcat" operations as a consequence of the advance of 120 per cent. in the prices of tubing and casing since the tube trust was formed.

and casing since the tube trust was formed.

Great excitement exists throughout the Pennsylvania, Ohio and Indiana fields, in all of which considerable Chicago capital is interested. Operators generally believe the Standard will continue to boost the market until considerably higher figures are reached.

As indicative of the high values on producing property, due to the market, announcement has been made of the sale of a West Virginia lease with 300 barrels daily production for $120,000, which is said to be among the highest figures reached in transactions of this character.

CIGAR TRUST. A cigar trust, known as the United States and Havana Cigar Company, has been formed in New York, the names of the old companies in it being: The E. H. Gato Cigar Company, D. L. Trujillo & Sons, and George W. Nichols & Co., of Key West: the Ybor-Manrara Company, Seldenberg & Co., Y. Pendas & Alvarez, Salvador Rodriguez, Julius Ellinger & Co., and Cuesta. Rey & Co. of Tampa; Salvador Rodriguez, Julius Ellinger & Co., and Cuesta. Rey & Co. of New Orleans; and Eugene Vallens & Co., Chicago. The capital is $15,000,000, divided into $10,000,000 ordinary stock, and $5,000,000 cumulative 7 per cent. preference shares; all but $2,000,000 of which has been issued to the vendors in payment for their properties. The joint annual production is placed at 150,000,000,000 ordered described as clear Havanas. The trust expects to save $750,000 in the cost of doing business.

GENERAL BUSINESS TOPICS.

WHAT THE CENSUS WILL SHOW.
It would be a difficult matter to name any manufacturing industry of importance in this country, which has not grown greatly since the latest census, says the Philadelphia Record. Ac-cording to the census returns of 1890 there were in that year more than 350,000 manufacturing establishments, employing nearly 8,000,000 people, to whom more than $2,000,000,000 was paid whom more than several making any at-in wages. Without making any at-tempt (which would be futile) to es-timate approximately the increase in tempt (which would be futile) to es-timate approximately the increase in the number of industrial establish-ments and of employés since 1890, we may safely say that in many indus-tries there has been an increase of at least 100 per cent.; and there are several now employing thousands of hands which were then in their in-fancy, or were not even in existence. Take, for example, the various prac-tical applications of electricity. It was not until the year 1888 that the first street railway equipped with electric not until the year 1888 that the first street railway equipped with electric motive power was tested, in the city of Richmond, and a very amateurish affair it was. In climbing a hill the motor came to grief, and the little "dinkey" car was dragged back to the starting point by a mule amid the jeers of the onlookers. Now there are over 16,000 miles of electric railroad in this country, and it is reported that there were more miles of electric railways built last year than of steam railways. There are more than 40,000 electric street cars running today, and the capital invested in the manufacture of dynamos, motors, resistance boxes, wire cables, cars and all other paraphernalia amounts in the aggregate to hundreds of millions of dellars.

The most recent addition to the industries of the country which bids fair to grow to sufficiently large proportions to warrant special note in the next census is the manufacture of automobiles. Indeed, if we may accept the capitalization of some of the young corporations which make these vehicles as a safe guide to the present extent of the business, it must already have sprung into an important place.

Changes for the Week not a Marked as Anticipated.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.] NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—The weekly bank statement shows the following changes: Surplus reserve decreased $1,081,250; loans decreased $3,590,200; specie decreased $3,494,000; legal tenders increased $1,351,400; deposits decreased $4,205,400; circulation increased $317,900. The banks now hold $643,200 in excess of the legal requirements. of the legal requirements.

compared with the violent fluctuations for some time past. This condition represents the adjustment of values between the conflicting influences of stringent money and prosperous business. What with unwillingness to sell at present prices and usual readiness to buy, the market has been remarkably dull. It has not been narrow: the number of different issues dealt in however, has increased, and buying of odd lots has indicated the presence of the bargain hunter. Pressure to liquidate has not been heavy, even when money rates were highest. The amounts loaned at the high rates, which were 40 per cent. on one day and 35 per cent. on another, were a small proportion and were caused by eager bidding of belated borrowers who had been dilatory about the suplying of their needs from the early offerings, hoping for a break in rates on the day.

The problem for the future is how much further the demand for crop moving purposes will encroach on deposits of the interior banks with New York banks and on call loans of interior banks placed in Wall street. With the Bank of England's official rate advanced to 5 per cent., and weak returns from the great continental banks, no further hope is entertained of relief by gold imports. Indeed, the conviction is general that, any relaxation of the local money rate would result in a prompt demand upon us by London for gold. The movement of the crop will continue to absorb money for several weeks to come, and the United States treasury's surplus of revenue over expenditures will continue to take money from the open market unless means are taken to prevent it.

Bonds have been dull and have moved in sympathy with stocks. U. S. 2s declined %, new 4s, %, 5s, %, and old 4s % in the bid price.

Atchison, 20%; Atchison pfd, 62%; [ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.] NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—The changes in the statement of the associated banks of New York for the week endin the statement of the associated banks of New York for the week ending October 7 were not as marked as had been anticipated. Instead of an average loss in loans of nearly $7.000,000 and a decrease of $10,000,000 in deposits, as shown in the totals extending over the last twelve weeks, the banks contracted loans for the current week of only $3,590,200, and deposits $4,205,400. As the banks have lost about $128,000,000 in deposits and $88,000,000 in loans from the high point attained in June, there is some ground for the belief that the period of excessive liquidation is at an end. Still the demand for cash for the interior requirements continues heavy, while the banks seem unable to recoup their resources from usual available quarters. The gold engaged in London does not count in the present statement, although raceipts from one or two other quarters are included. The receipts of gold on Saturday alone were over $2,000,000. The great difficulty experienced this fall in financing the crop movement can be turned to the losses which the banks have sustained to the treasury and the slowness of the continent to respond by exports of gold to the usual incentive of rising money rates here. Conservative opinions favor the statement that the tide must turn soon and that the general situation will improve, but there are bankers in New York who assert that, even shough the statement that the cases soon, the flow of money on this center again will be Atchison, 20%: Atchison pfd, 62%: the Baltimore & Ohio, 49%; Canadian Pacific, 91½; Canadian Southern, 52½; Central Pacific, 55½; Chesa, & Ohil., 25; Chicago, Great Western, 14; Chicago, Bur. & Quincy, 129%; Chicago, Ind. & Louis, 10%; Chicago, Ind. & Louis, 10%; Chicago, Ind. & Louis, 10%; Chicago, Rock Island & Pac., 112½; C.C. & St. Louis, 56; Colorado Southern, 65%; Colorado Southern, 18th pfd, 45; Colorado Southern 1st pfd, 45; Colorado Southern 2nd pfd, 16; Del. & Chudson, 122½; Del. The grain and cotton exports from now on will be a factor not to be ignored, and it is difficult to see how the shipment of gold this way is to be avoided, even under the strain of untoward circumstances abroad. As it is, the banks here are carrying a double burden, and as liquidation has been carried to an extreme point, there is reason for expecting a change soon. The operations of one bank account in large part for current decreases. The grain in legals doubtless represents the heavy payments into bank following the holidays. The apparent reserve over requirements is at present only $643.000, but this of course is exclusive of the $2,000,000 of gold received Saturday, as stated, but not included in the averages.

number of the citizens of Tropico thendale and Burbank are holding mass meetings in Richardson's Hall in Tropico relative to the construction of an electric road from Los Angeles into the towns of Tropico and Glendale, thence around the foothills to Burbank, thus affording better facilities for reaching the city. Such an enterprise watched with much concern by the citizens throughout the valley who re-alize the need of a rapid transit line. The majority of the houses in the valley are represented with from one to three members in the High School, State Normal and other schools, shops and stores of Los Angeles, while the facilities for reaching the city are not

SOLDIER BOYS WELCOMED.

N. P. Banks Woman's Relief Corps of Tropico tendered a reception Wednesday evening at G.A.R. Hall to Sergts. Phelon, C. C. Thom, C. de Hart Thom and to Privates Logan, Patterson, Tarr and Niemeyer of Battery D, and Claude Ely of the United States navy. The hall was handsomely decorated with the national colors, palms and flowers. Beneath the folds of the Stars and Stripes the boys of Battery D were received and bade thrice welcome to their homes in the valley, by the throng of relatives and friends.

An orchestra composed of the several members of the Doyle family rendered stirring and patriotic airs. Punch was served and dainty favors presented to the guests. Addresses of welcome were delivered by Rev. Crist, post commander: Mrs. Hapgood, corps president; T. D. Kanouse and Hon. O. Z. Hubbell of Indiana.

HOLLYWOOD ELECTRIC LINE. Success or Failure Must Be Determined by Tuesday Noon. At a meeting of property-owners held at Hollywood Friday evening, Col Griffith J. Griffith pictured the Ca-Valiley as it was when he first knew it, twenty-seven years ago, "a sheep pasture worth scarcely $1 per acre;" traced its development through successive stages of barley growing, successive stages of barley growing, vegetable-raising and lemon culture, "which have given its lands a present value of from $300 to $500 per acre," and concluded with the statement that "the next crop to be harvested will be the home-seekers, the intellectual people of the Eastern States, who, by their improvements, will make its lands worth not $500, but $500 per acre," H. J.-Whitley of the Executive Committee, said: "After two months of continuous labor in this matter, it is my deliberate judgment that the people of the valley utterly fail to appreciate at its true value the importance of this movement, the magnitude of the issue at stake."

P. J. Beveridge of the Executive Committee said, in part: "On behalf of the Executive Committee, I am authorized to say that the success or failure of this movement must be determined by Tuesday noon, and will be determined by the action of those property-owners of whom the Executive Committee has requested donations of right-of-way. I cannot believe the people of this valley will permit this movement to fail. To do so is to turn from our doors the investor and home-seekers, to depreciate our property and to rob our children of a part of their inheritance. To insure success, two things are imperatively .necessary:

"First—To enable the committee to close a final contract with the company, subscriptions to the bonus fund must be made available before Tuesday noon, either by payment in cash or the giving of acceptable notes to Mr. Griffith, treasurer and trustee of the Executive Committee.

"Second—It must be thoroughly understood that our agreement is to furnish the necessary right-of-way over private property and that the committee has not one dollar to be used in the purchase of right-of-way. Unless those of whom we ask a right-of-way come at once to our rescue, this movement must fail. Upon them and them alone now rests the entire responsibility of success or failure. If through selfish motives this movement be defeated, it will be due to the committee and to those who have given toward the bonus fund, that the responsibility be publicly placed where it belongs."

He said the wound had been inflicted by an unknown assailant near the corner of Commercial and Los Angeles, streets. One of Jaynes's acquaintances stated yesterday that the captain was assaulted by a man whom he had attacked through the columns of his weekly paper. The wound was a severe one, entering just below the eye and piercing the cheek bone. The affair was not reported to the police.

The B'dway-The Busy Store | The B'dway-The Busy Store

Thoughtful women have had their eyes opened—and their purses. This new way of starting a season has been a pleasant surprise to Los Angeles women. They didn't find that Sunday-like, dress-up, foppish air about the store. They found here and there throughout the great rooms living illustrations of the goods and effective applications of the favorite styles. But that was not the whole show--like the speaker, who inforces his point with some familiar word picture, so the clever artist arranged these mercantile exhibits to impress you of their value-and he did,

For we've never seen such eager buying in all our history.

The prices have come in for as much comment and admiration as the styles.

Dress Goods.

Demonstration bargains throw forth their lure.

It was a hearty Dewey ovation-all day long yesterday. The surprise at the variety-the qualities and the patterns did not begin to equal the surprise at the very common prices.

It's the prices we want to tell you about.

THE PROBLEM OF THE TRUSTS.

THE problem of the trusts must be met. This fact may as well be accepted at the outset. But the problem will never be satisfactorily solved by the methods of the political shyster. In fact, the political shyster is not endeavoring to solve it; he is trying to der it more complicated. The robe of righteousness which he assumes when he talks of trusts is only one of the garments he dons to serve the devil of politics in. The trust problem must be solved, if solved at all, by rational methods. This means that it must be solved by methods that take into account its causes, the conditions which surround it and the probable consequences of any proposed solution. A solution which would leave conditions less satisfactory than before would be worse than no solution. The problem is therefore one which demands careful, earnest, exhaustive study in all its

It is gratifying to know that a considerable number of the newspapers of this country-notable among them being the New York Tribune—have been giving this subject the careful, calm consideration which it demands. The recent conference in Chicago-while an attempt was made to utilize it for political purposes-has, nevertheless, contributed in some measure to a better understand-ing of the problem. This has been accomplished not only by the presentation at the conference of some valnable suggestions, but by drawing out more careful and conservative consideration by the press.

A trust is essentially a corporation. It is an organization in which the individual members intrust the management of their interests to a chosen body of directers or trustees. In fact, most of the so-called "trusts" are nothing more than large corporations. No one possessed of reason and any knowledge of business affairs will deny that great advantages are gained in many branches of industry by corporate organization. The incorporation of capital, instead of exempting it from legal restraint, places it under greater supervision. As the St. Paul Pioneer Press says, in a well-considered article on "The Use of Corporations:"

"Corporations are merely associations of individuals contributing their funds to carry out enterprises usually too big for individuals not thus associated. They are as legitimate in themselves as individual ownership or management. But differing from the latter, they are the creation of law, and can be brought under the restricting and regulative power of the law. There is no question as to the power of the people to control and regulate them. The only question is how that power can be best exercised for the public interests without interfering with the natural and legitimate development of the industrial and commercial energies of the people."

The end to be desired is not the "smashing" trusts, or of anything else, but the prevention of injustice and oppression by the power of accumulated capital. Safety must be sought in such firm and just supervision by the government as shall not destroy the power for good which inheres in corporate organization, but shall prevent abuses of the power of wealth. The Pioneer Press, in the article to which we have referred, pertinently asks whether the aggregations of wealth and the control of special industries now brought about by combining the resources of smaller corporations and of individuals into a single enterprise would be any less dangerous or less destructive of "equality in opportunity" if such aggregations were each owned by an individual or a private firm; and whether operations like those imputed to the Standard Oil Company would be any more tolerable to small dealers if such operations were ducted by Rockefeller & Co., than they are now when conducted by the Rockefellers as the guiding spirits of a corporation." To these and other similar questions, the er must be "No," "for not only would the acquisitive spirit of the men who now control the trusts centinue to animate them if they should buy out all the other stockhelders and continue business as private individuals or but the private business would at once be freed from most of even the small restrictions now set up by law against the misuse of corporate power. And between the corporation that may be regulated for the public good and the private business of equal magnitude which cannot be so regulated, the choice must instantly be made in favor of the former.

"Yet, if the trusta, meaning the corporations," the Press entinues, "are to be forthwith 'smashed' in accordance with the demand of certain delegations and individuals at the Chicago conference, they will just as surely be followed by individual or partnership ownership of the enterprises involved—in every case where the combination has proved profitable—as the flood tide follows the ebb. When anti-trust legislation compelled, the owners the concerns united in the Standard Oil trust had not the slightest difficulty in abandoning the trust form of organization and substituting a corporation. So it was with numerous other combinations, until now there are few, if any, actual 'trusts' left in the country. Let the big corporations in turn fall under destructive legal interdict, and what is to hinder their reorganization as private firms—a step which would at once place them beond the reach of troublesome corporation laws? One of the largest corporations in the country, engaged in the manufacture and sale of agricultural implements, has lately taken this step—scenting afar off the danger of trouble from 'anti-trust' legislation, so called. . . . "In the combinations, as in competing private ventures, however, the greediest men are apt to work to the front; to buy up controlling interests; to inaugurate policies detrimental to the good of the people. Herein is shown the necessity of supervision and regulation by the government. Such regulation could prevent most of the evils experienced or apprehended from the 'combines.' watering of stocks could be prohibited. Prices could be made subject to revision by a national board of trade, here again following the example of England—the proposition for which board was indorsed by ex-Secretary Foster in his recent speech at Chicago. Finally, as suggested Bourke Cockran and several other leading speakers at Chicago, over all the affairs of the corporation could be thrown the searchlight-always gleaming-of publicity. With secrecy, there might yet be something for the people to fear; with constant publicity, nothing."

As The Times has said in substance heretofore, there is no reason for such serious apprehension as the politicians and malcontents would have us believe. supreme power in the United States rests in the people. The people will often suffer to some degree before they assert their power, but the power is at their command, and when oppression in any form reaches the limit of patient endurance, they will rise and overthrow it. the trusts become unduly oppressive, a way will be found to regulate them. Just how to regulate them, is the question to be calmly and wisely considered.

OUTHERN CALIFORNIA, after passing through three comparatively dry years, is a marvel to those who come to us from the other side of the continent, for it does not present to them the bare and desolate appearance which our lack of rain has predicted to their imaginations. They marvel at our green groves, at our fruit-laden vineyards, at our great harvests, which have defied the drought, and at the abundance of water which e still have for our lawns and gardens

California is in every respect a land of surprises—a land unlike other lands, where man's struggle with nature is eased by her beneficent tendencies, and her readiness to respond to the touch of labor. Growth is nore natural here than the failure of growth, and we look for harvests as confidently as we look for the alternations of day and night. Southern California was never more prosperous than she is today, in spite of her three successive years of light rainfall. The development of er natural resources is rapidly going forward, and she is making ready for that magnificent future which will naturally be hers, lying as she does at the open gateway to our new possessions in the Orient,

It is not, at present, possible to predict the future of this State, but that it will be the center of great commercial enterprises no one can doubt. If all our tillable soil were improved and cultivated, our harvest supplies would almost feed the world. Our rich wines and nuts and oil will soon be in demand throughout all Christendom. Our inexhaustible mines might fill the treasury of the nation. The priceless trade of the Philippines will naturally come in this direction, and when peace shall once again be established it will be no small factor in our growing prosperity.

There is perhaps no section of our country where the essibilities for the future are so great as right here in this Golden State. Almost everything known to temperate, semi-tropical, and even tropical regions may be produced here. Manufactures are multiplying; railroad facilities are rapidly increasing; water is being developed, so that irrigation may be made possible for much larger areas than at present; population is rapidly growng, numerous new productions are found to be peculiarly adapted to our soil and climate, and the world is looking on with interest, watching our growth and waiting to participate in our prosperity.

In educational matters we are not behind the rest of he country, and in no part of the world is the newspaper field better filled, and nowhere will you find hurches more numerous or better sustained. This argues well for the intelligence and morality of our different communities, and promises much for the future of our where Puritan influences abide, and where the same other sections of the East, has poured in upon us a tide of the best elements of her social and religious life.

The history of California see ems especially written by the hand of Providence, and its gradual unfolding in the direction of the best in American civilization point promise to a future that shall be second to no State in this great free land of ours. A rare climate, rich soil, and intelligent human effort are a trinity that no power can resist or hinder in the glorious upbuilding of the State.

LIGHTS AND FLASHES.

How much of our life-of our world-lies in books and newspapers. Our thoughts and our characters are shaped by those silent companions as much as by the influence of friends with whom we associate from day to day.

wonder how the world lived so many generations as it did without pictures-man's miniature creations of fit did without pictures—man's minature creatons of God's great breathing universe. They touch our lives with largeness; they break the chains that fetter us to place, and open for us unnumbered doors through which we may pass down the dim shadows of the ages, or out into the wide and boundless realm of today.

It is questionable if there be any such thing as honest infidelity, for there is that planted within the soul of man, rooted, indeed, in his very being, which defies it. There s a deep-seated, hidden consci ture of the spirit that no false teaching and no system of unbelief can wholly eradicate. Infidelity ends in barronness. It is a desert in which no human soul can thrive, where every faculty of our higher nature is starved, and dwarfed, and fettered:

e look at life through our stomachs. They give color and tone to all of our undertakings. The man whose stomach is in a sound, healthy normal condition is at peace with himself and the world. He sits in the per-petual warmth and glow of moral sunshine. Life is ful of its aspirations. Activity is an ever present law of his being. Cheerfulness is a fixed habit. Life means work for him—it means achievement, and whatever tends to promote such physical condition is certainly worthy of our highest consideration.

All knowledge is not universal, but we have yet to find the man who is unable to advise an editor of the best methods of editing a newspaper. The man who has never tried to do it is the one who knows all about it, and who believes it would be just as impossible for him to make mistake in the business as it would have been for corge Washington to tell a lie.

The man who habitually speaks slightingly of woman, and who is without faith in her, is not a man to be trusted. His associations have either been what they should not be, or else he is shallow-brained and morally should not be, or else he is shallow-brained and morally warped, and from the stagnation of all noble qualities in himself he judges there can exist nothing higher or nobler than what he finds within the realms of his own miserable consciousness.

E. A. O.

OCTOBER IN THE EAST.

October, handmaid of the passing year, In the far East comes golden crowned, and bright With the rich splendor of her woods, which near And far flash into glorious light, if the sun, with all his treasure-trove Hid in their leaves, with brightest colors wove A splendid diadem for the old year, Brighter than summer's rose or grassy spear. The blue skies bend above the drowsy earth, Which laughs no longer with its summer mirth; The hills are brown, the blossoms all have gone, But, eh, the glory of the woods! I long To see their wondrous face. The many s Holding the gold of all the sun's bright beams, Rush singing onward, fed by autumn rains, Whose chorus breaks into wild, rich refrains. Sometimes a song-bird calleth from the trees, And sometimes Winter whispers to the breeze Of his near coming, and the waiting world, Whose lengthening nights, cool shadows are unfurled, Shivers so softly as it clingeth yet, With fading face and heavy eyelids wet With Autumn show'rs to passing Summer's hand. The skies are bright which bend above the land, But there's a traiter in the camp who steals The warmth of sunbeams, and who quick reveals His frosty javelins and hastes to smite All growing things, and like a veil his white Breath covers them whene'er the starry dark Drops down upon the world. In vain we hark For his swift footsteps, they come and go Soft-feeted as the winter's falling snow. Silent as death they steal through forest glade, And wide, still meadows in the evening shade. Castles and towers and waterfalls he leaves Castles and towers and waterfalls he leaves. Etched on the window panes, nor ever grieves To see the gentle floweret hang its head, Or see the world of lovely grasses dead. A merry soul he is, yet cruel, too, And blasts of cold he blows his fingers through, And winks at Winter as he'd bid him see His wanton hand upon each bush and tree. But still the day shines bright at noontide's h And the great forests, rich in beauty's dower, Flame into splendid color. Rainbows pale Beside their brightness, and the arching skies, Like one great gleaming sapphire rise; a them with his sunshine's richest gold. And earth the Indian summer does enfo er warm clasp until the daylight fades And Jack Frost steals again from hidden glader Smiting the earth till Nature slowly dies, Or in a swoon of pulseless silence lies. ELIZA A. OTIS.

Caught on the Wing. By Robert J. Burdette.

F 'TWAN'T fer one thing," said the man from Arizona, mopping from his honest brow enough sweat to moisten the bread of an entire State Legislature, "I sh'd say we would have a general thaw." "And what is the one thing in the way?" asked the Tenderfoot. "Ain't nothin' froze," replied the Sandman. And the hand played on band played on.

Section 7, on the sleeper Moc. 1to. "Sunny side of the cah, sah," remarked the Pullman Providence, "but do breeze mostly comes from that side, sah." And he was right. You can also get a fine breeze likewise by opening an oven door and looking in. You can also raise quite a breeze by singing "Croppies, Lie Down," as the procession marches pass on the 17th of March. You can invoke quite a little cyclone, if you are fond of breezes, by introducing a high-license resolution in a Prohibition convention. L breeze is no nove'ty. And any time we wanted a nice desert breeze in section 7, I merely raised the window one brief minute, and there swept in the sunny southern breeze, a thousand miles a minute, min-gled with sand, dust, cinders, live coals and hot clinkers, disintegrated granite, bone dust, alkali, smoke, grit, mice schist, sand, motes, nebular atoms, cosmic dust, riparian debris, flotsam, fever germs, unclassified bacillis, mixed drift, general wind wreckage and jetsam. Then we closed the window.

"Couldn't have been a very pleasant trip?" That's where you are off in your diagnosis, my boy. It was a pleasant trip. Because, you see, all these things were on the outside. They didn't come into the car unless we let the outside. They didn't come into the car unless we let them in. I have an idea that with the right kind of people you might make a very pleasant excursion trip across the desert of Sahara—out by the hottest, and return by the sandiest way. Nansen, the man who has gone nearest to the North Pole, had a pleasanter trip than any Arctic explorer who ever made the norther tour. He brought his ship back in good order; all his men returned healthier and fatter than when they left home, and all the time they were gone they had such a good time they were afraid they wouldn't have anything to tell about when they returned. That's the way to travel son.

Getting Ready.

You know, there are people who make travel a bugbear in spite of its pleasures. They are not adjustable them-selves. And an inadjustable man is always a misfit. The great, big round earth was made for millions and millions and millions of men, not for any one man and his family Even the United States is gauged this year for about seventy millions of people on the mainland and about eight or ten millions more on the islands. Our islands. Therefore, when you set out to go some place on this earth, you must make up your mind, before you pack a comb and brush, that it is morally certain that—

(a) Some other people on the earth are going to the

(b) That they have as good right to go there as you (c) That some of them have already been there, before ever heard of the place. (d) That there are people already living in that place, who were there before you happened, and some others who will be there long after you are dead. (e) That it doesn't make a cent's work of difference to

(e) That it doesn't make a cent's work of difference to all these other people whether you go there or not.

(f) And, finally, that if you get mad, and wash your hands of the whole business, and turn back home and refuse to go to that place, the place will continue to abide right where it is, the other people will go on just the same, they will joyously divide up your business among themselves, and nobody will ask what became of you, and nobody will know if the other bodies should ask, and nobody will care, even if anybody knew.

Now, before you pack anything in your valise, trunk

Now, before you pack anything in your valise, trunk or sample case, my boy, do you pack a, b, c, d, e and f in your brain; put it in a handy cell in your memory, with a good telephone connection, and then you will be ready to begin to get ready for a trip.

Needful Things. Take everything with you that you need. The things you really need on a journey do not take up very much room. The useless things are the bulky ones. Not the traveler who carries the least baggage, but he who carries the best assorted "duffel" travels most expeditiously and comfortably. I have known men who traveled with a pocket comb and a toothbrush. And yet there are some men who would not like to pull a toothbrush out of a vest pocket containing also a couple of cigars, crumbled fragments of half a dozen others, a lead pencil, some lint, a few newspaper clippings, a piece of string, and a knot of Turkish rhubarb, and thrust the brush into their mouths. Cleanliness may be next to godliness, son, but it ought to be next to it on both sides. A dustcolored traveling suit gets just as dirty and grimy as a pale lavender one. Only it doesn't show. That's all. But dirt is dirt. You've been long enough in politics, my boy, to know what whitewash is? We are frequentl pained to observe the free use of it by our friends the enemy. Worst thing about whitewash is that it peels off with exposure to air and weather. Out of Tune.

The young man in Lower 'Steen—and a handsome young fellow he is—got on at Indio. He wore—and at writing, away east of Deming, he still wears it—a e suit. He came aboard looking like the angel of the sunshine white linen traveling cap, white jacket, snowy shirt, legs clad in duck trousers, like "white samite, By the time we got to Volcano Springs there were so many thumb prints and finger marks on it that he looked like an album of palmistry. off for supper at Yuma the marks had got streaked to-gether, and he marched into the dining-room looking like a white zebra. At bedtime last night he was shady as a dream of twilight. And this morning he is the grayest dapple gray colt you ever saw, and you never saw a gray colt. There is no more dust and grime on his suit than there is on the pepper-and-salt suit worn by the old man in Upper None, but—the younger man didn't adjust him-self to the climate, that is all.

Essentials.

The first thing My Lady takes out of her handbag, always, is a dainty traveling clock in its case. It stands about four inches high. The doors of the case are opened, the little timepiece is stood on the window sill, and you the fittle timepiece is stood on the window sin, and you don't know how, as by magic, the section becomes home. That a useless bit of "impedimenta?" It seems to me we could better do without anything else. We carry our watches, of course, but a watch isn't a clock. A watch is made for the pocket. It is something to carry about with you. But a clock is of the Home. It carries a print watch a stood of the s picture—not a photograph, you can have plenty of photographs—but a picture of the home in its open face, and every minute and every hour the hands are pointing to new scenes in the home life. The little clock! It makes the hotel room a part of the home. Flanked by a few photographs of the home and the people in it, it surrounds us always with the atmosphere of home.

"Well," one man says, "when I'm going anywhere I don't want to be bothered with that sort of trumpery. I just take what I absolutely must have, and hurry

Good man, we will not detain you. You do not belong in this symposium. We are discussing traveling. Not transportation. That's another thing, and belongs to the freight department. Now, things like the little clock, that take up almost no room at all, and carry tons of comfort, of suggestion, of mental conversation, I consider very important items in the baggage list. We are two people, off on a two-months' tour through sixteen States, two Territories and thirty-two climates, and all combined baggage weighs about one hundred and forty pounds. And we have everything for every climate, place and emergency, from a mountain climb to a dress recep-tion—a railway lunch-counter at Gallup, or a dinner in New York. You don't need much baggage—you just want to know what you may need, and take that along.

Then, alongside the little clock on the car window, sits a combination barometer, thermometer and compass. a combination barometer, thermometer and compass. We glance at it—we are sailors, we know we are steaming sou' by east, southeast, or east by south. The strange mountains hemming the strange desert cannot mislead us. The sun never rises in the north, and when Orion shines forth at night, "his bands are not loosed," he is always in the right place. And the index on the barometer tells us how we climb or descend. As the train climbs the grade or sweeps down the grade or sweeps down the screen it tall the strain climbs the grade or sweeps down the curves it tells us foot by foot how we approach or leave the sea level. It tells us what the train men cannot, and we do not have to pester it with questions, either. And it never says "Blodfino," as sometimes the wearied train man wants to say, whether he does or not. And the thermoneter tells us that it isn't half so warm as it looks, and that it isn't that it isn't was never over 110 deg. on the sunny side of the car, and if our coffee came on like that we would call it tepid, and indignantly send it back to the kitchen with a warning to the cook, much warmer than the coffee. So you see desert ravel, even in the hot season, isn't nearly so bad as it would be if it were ten times worse than it now is. The Weather Bureau.

The weather is never so hot as the people who are in it. Once in awhile some man gets impatient, and, manlike, he opens the window. Now, it is only 110 deg. in the car, and no dust. But out on the desert it is 125 deg, with all the dust in addition. And he lets all that in on himself, which serves him right, and on the rest of us, who are innocent martyrs to his asininity. And not often, but now and then, a woman does the same thing. And then the passengers know that when she is at home she lives in a house with never a fly-screen, and eats her dinner with one hand, while with the other she waves over the table a fly brush made of a stick and paper ribbons. She has pie for breakfast, and fries her steak. You know the kind of a woman. Her conversation is limited to the weather. She lives in a town you never heard of before, where they are having a fight in the Council over an ordinance prohibiting hogs from running at large in the streets. She tells you they always had an abundant supply of good water until last summer, when the town pump caved in, and they had to haul water from the "crick." It cost the town $1 a day for an extra constable during that period to keep the boys out of the swimmin' hole. She tells you this with the air of a woman who is rather aristocratically fastidious about her drunking water herself, and doesn't care who knows it. That's the kind of woman who opens the car window in your face when you are crossing the desert. The man who does it usually hackles husks in a mattress factory, digs "sang" root, and works in a chrome mill when times are

But, son, they are the "other people," who are going to your place, and they have a right to go there. You have no business to quarrel with them. Some of your ways are not their ways. You made yourself very offensive to a gentleman from Gander Neck vesterday morning when you laid your hand upon your hairbrush, just as he reached for it, and politely showed him the public currycomb in the rack. He blushed crimeen to the roots of the sun-burned mane he was intending to polish, and he will? sacrastically refer to you when he gets home as a "stacks" up dude." And if ever you so to Gander Neck to self goods, or make a campaign speech, I hope you won't run up against him, that's all. In his way he has as much pride as yourself, and I think it is a far more sensitive pride. I observed that later in the day, when you tried to soothe his wounded feelings by offering what is called a "see-gyar," he declined it, on the ground that he didn't smoke, and shortly afterward he pulled out an ante-bellum pipe, rubbed out a charge of "niggerhead" plug between his palms, lit up, and emptied the smoking-room. between his palms, lit up, and emptied the emoking-room at the tenth puff—the Dewey of the forward compart-ment. The world is overfull of proud, sensitive men ment. The world is overfull of proud, sensitive men and women, my boy, and they don't all hold diplomas from your college, nor wear your fraternity pin, nor belong to your club. And some of them are gentlemen, my boy, and some of the men who belong to your club are also gentlemen. Yes, indeedy, son. Some of them are. Some of them. I've heard you say so, yourself.

There is one man who might be very comfortable if he would let himself alone, and give himself haif a chance. But he won't do that. He began by talking about the heat, which is a bad thing to do, anyhow. In hot weather it is worse than drinking iced water, which is the advance agent for sunstroke. Then he began to "shuck his garments," which is also a foolish thing to do. He began with his necktie, then he took off his collar, then his cuffs, next his coat, then his vest; then he took off his shoes and put on a pair of Romeo slippers, and then the porter came in and told him he mustn't take off any more things. By this time he was the hottest man in the car, and he looked it. The company wisely keeps the thermometer hung away up aloft, where the pasengers cannot read it, knowing how such literature aggrevates the heat. But this man climbed up on the arm of the seat, at the risk of his neck, every ten min-utes, and held onto the curtain rod while he read of the figures. The exertion itself was a violent one, and in-creased the flow of perspiration from every pore. Then he would walk up and down the aisle, challenging each one of us to guess how hot it was. This was enough to warp the roof of the car. I guessed 54 deg., and I heard him tell the man behind me that I had no sense. At this I shivered slightly and threw my light overcoat on my shoulders. Then this buzzing human bluebottle said he didn't propose to travel with a lunatic asylum, and strode into the smoking-room, reeking with perspiration and blazing with indignation. And the car cooled off perceptibly after he went out of it.

A Pleasant Corner.

In the hottest part of the evening I looked into the smoking-room to see how he was getting along in ra-tional society. There are two seats in the smoker—one seating four men and the other two. Then the porter had put in a couple of camp stools. There were ten men in that room, smoking away for dear life, and the bluebottle was telling them how hot it was.

Ah, my boy, if we would only he halfway good to our-selves, if we would only give Providence a chance to do what He wants to do with us and for us, this would be a far more comfortable world to live in than it is. But we exaggerate our troubles so. If it is 80 deg. in the shade, we fret it into 100, and take away the shade, and then howl to the heavens and earth because our gourd withered. If it is anywhere near freezing point we shiver it down 20 deg. below zero, and take off our gloves to show people how blue and cold our fingers are. Here in California people do not talk so much about the weather as they do anywhere else on earth, because there is nothing to say but, "How pleasant it is today." That is well enough, perhaps, but to talk about excessive heat or cold only exaggerates these conditions, multiplies our discomforts, decreases our powers of resistance to climatic oppressions, and adds to the general sum of human annoyances. Suppose you resolve that for one straight month you will not say one word about heat or cold, wet or dry, rain or dust. You will be surprised at the end of the month to know that climatic and meteorological conditions have been properly and wisely looked after without your assistance, suggestion or comment, and that your conversational powers have been stimulated and broadened by a compulsory course in some sort of literature higher than "Oh, my! isn't it hot?" Seasons gone by, the wearied old world rose up against the man who says "Is this hot enough for you?" and drove him violently down a steep place, bristles and all.

The Vision.

And in the mean while, the desert, with its measureless ocean of yellow and brown and white, its wonderful skies, its marvelous stars, its own peculiar novelties and fascinations, is past, leaving an indelible picture in the memory. The train has crossed over into Texas, and you could tell it with your eyes shut by just one thing. There is in the very cars a southern atmosphere of cordiality and welcome. The soft southern accent of the voices you hear is pleasant. The train men, from conductor to newsboy, unconsciously assume the attitude of hosts, and regard the passengers as their guests. Pleasant attentions are lavished upon you; your comfort is studied; your wants are anticipated; your needs are supplied, and you can't help thinking that at any time of the year, in any temperature, under any conditions, it is "mighty pleasant" and "right neighborly" to be traveling in the South and among the southern people, with a copy of the Los Angeles Times to clarify, temper, and determine the whole

Pess-8-888 A MARVELOUS CAVE.

By a Special Contributor.

HE Black Hills of South Dakota, described as the richest 100 miles square on the face of the earth, possess in addition to their mineral richness, one of the greatest wonders of the world. This is Wind Cave, in Custer county, twelve miles north of the city of Hot Springs in the southern portion of the Black Hills.

This cave is in an immense bed of limestone—a bewildering labyrinth of box-work, stalactites, stalagmites, popcorn, geodes, and frost work of glistening whiteness so cate that at the slightest touch it crumbles in pieces. A fitting playground for the little people with whom the superstition of the Indians peopled the Black Hills in the days when they were afraid of the somber mountains, bethe pale face came and the iron horse followed after; and the spirits of the hills were driven out.

Prof. Morrill of the Smithsonian Institution says the formation of the cave is unknown. Other geologists incline to the opinion that it is an extinct geyser—perhaps a former outlet for the warm mineral waters which now a former outlet for the warm mineral waters which how come to the surface at Hot Springs and vicinity. Some of the formations show the evidence of having been formed by water—a warm mineral water; and some, notably the frost work, are so delicate that they could not owe their existence to the action of water, but must have been formed by a gas or vapor which congealed as it struck the

The prevailing formation in the cave is what the guides, for want of a scientific name, have called box-work. Some Beautiful Formations.

The popcorn formation, as its name implies, looks very similar to a lot of well-popped corn fastened to the walla and ceilings of the cave. In places the balls are smaller than a pea; in others they are several times as large. This formation is usually pure white, without the brilliancy that makes the frost work dazzle the sight. Akin to the popcorn work is the snowball. In various portions of the cave the walls and ceilings look as though a number of boys had been throwing snow balls at the walls and the snow was just wet enough to spatter and stick.

The frost work furnishes the chief beauty of the cave. It is formed in the softest rock and in the upper parts of the cave; it is suspended, or shoots up or out, from the base of limestone in clusters of tiny white needles formed of infinitesimal crystals, reminding one of pine frees. The coarsest of this formation is not larger than a needle, and it decreases in size until it looks like the finest cotton. There is some of it in the cave which is called mineral cotton and which would deceive anyone if it were away cotton and which would deceive anyone it it were away from the cave. There is some of it hanging to a stone be-yond the Pearly Gates, which the guides have called Noah's Beard, comprising a bunch of fine-spun white wire several feet long and white as snow. When the calcium light is thrown on the frost work it flashes and scintilates like

One Hundred and Ten Miles of Passages.

The cave is formed of fissures or crevices paralleling one another at a distance of from fifty to three hundred feet apart. These fissures range in height from thirty to over one hundred feet. They are all connected by numer-ous side passages scarcely large enough originally to per-mit an ordinary-sized man to get through; it has been necessary to widen and deepen these connecting passages in order to make the cave accessible to tourists. There are eight tiers or layers of these fissures, the lowest being 500 feet below the entrance. The chambers have all been found in the fissures, and range in size from twelve feet square to a little more than three acres.

A recent survey of the cave disclosed the fact that it covers an area two miles square. By a simple arithmetical calculation one can obtain some idea of the miles of cave there are to be yet explored. There are eight tiers of fissures; each fissure is two miles long; in each tier the fissures are distant from fifty to three hundred feet, over a space two miles wide; placing all the fissures 300 feet apart, there would be fifty-five on each tier, or 110 miles; then multiplying by the number of tiers, the result will be 880 miles, without counting the side or connecting passages and the size of the chambers. There are some openings which lead below the eighth tier, but those have not yet been explored.

Why it is Called Wind Cave.

Wind Cave has been rightly named. In every moment of the year the wind is rushing in or out of the entrance with terrific force, its direction being regulated by the rise and fall of the barometer. About two hundred yards from the entrance, no matter whether coming in or going out, the current of the wind is always in, and this inward rush prevails throughout the entire explored portion of the cave except in a small side passage not far from the entrance of the following year two men. Tom and Jess Bingham. fall of the barometer. About two hundred yards from the out of the mouth of which the wind comes, seemingly to meet the main current and go back into the cave with it in an unending and unvarying circle. For days the wind has rushed out of the opening at the entrance and yet all the time there was on change in the direction of its course in the cave. In last March for fifteen days the wind blew in continually, except for a period of three hours one day? This was during the bitter cold weather of last winter. Mr. Folsom, who lives in the house above the entrance, said that during that time he saw icicles on the bottom of the passage leading to the entrance, that were two feet long and not larger than a lead pencil; they were formed in this manner; the cold current of wind as it came into the cave followed the floor, pushing the warmer air to the top. The evaporation caused by the meeting of the two meet the main current and go back into the cave with it currents was so great that a stream of vapor was formed which rose to the top in the warm air, collected into tiny drops of water, which in turn fell back to the floor in the cold current, freezing instantly; the dropping was so slow cold current, freezing instantly; the dropping was-so slow and the drops so small that the icicles were not given a nce to grow except in length.

No Animal Life in the Vast Space.

The steady current of wind may be given credit for the perfect purity of the air in the cave, it being dry, sweet and invigorating and, as stated, unchangeable in temperature. On a warm day the explorer feels the chill upon first entering, but in a few moments is comfortable and need not worry about drafts and celds until the trip is over and out into the warm air again; the guides guard against ill-effects from the sudden return to heat by detaining tourists several minutes in the room above the entrance before permitting them to go outside. That the cave has other outlets for this constant stream of wind, cave has other outlets for this constant stream of which, cannot be doubted, but no evidence of any has been found. Attempts have been made, by following the candle flame expecting it to lead to the outlet, but all such attempts have ended in failure, the explorers coming back to some already explored portion of the cave. As though the wind were lost and in endeavoring to find its way out of the laborated government. labyrinth, goes round and round.

In all the miles of the cave there is not a bat, a rat or insect of any kind. There is no moisture in the atmosphere at any place, and no water except that which seeps through from the surface into the upper tiers of chambers.

About one hundred miles have been explored since 1891.

Three thousand rooms, or chambers, by actual count, have been found, every one of which has been named. No end has been reached and no evidence of an ending has been

The guides have laid off the cave in routes; there being fourteen different ones, only three of which are open to the public. Of the three the trip to the garden is the shortest, requiring a little over two hours; the fair ground route is the next and can be made in about three and a half hou:s; the pearly gates route is the longest, in attempting which one must prepare for a jaunt of five hours. All of these trips can be made without inconvenience, the management having expended a large sum of money in making paths, enlarging the narrow and low places, bridging the chasms and making the climbs easier by a liberal use of stairs.

How it Was Discovered.

some tradition of the cave having been discovered in 1877 by "Lame" Johnny, one of the early stage robbers and outlaws of the Black Hills, who was subsequently the central figure in a neck-tie party. In the fall of 1881 John Wells, a granger located in Cold Brook Canon just outside the present limits of Hot Springs, followed the canon in search of deer. About thirteen miles from home his attention was attracted by a noise that sounded like an intensified whistling of the wind through the pines, impelled by a spirit of curiosity, blasted out the hole until it was large enough to crawl into. They went in a little distance, when their further progress was stopped by a distance, when their further progress was stopped by a deep well, and this ended their explorations.

In the fall of 1882 Joe Petty, Henry Marty, and Joe Carr drove out from Hot Springs (then called Minnekahta,) properly equipped with ropes, lights and provisions. They spent two days and a night at the cave and descended the well which had stopped the Binghams, and crawled along the bottom some distance, when they were stopped by the passage becoming too small for them to get through.

In 1893, during the World's Fair, the largest chamber in the cave was discovered, and named the fair grounds; the room covers an area of a little over three acres, and is in shape something like a mosque: with a high central dome shape something like a mosque; with a high central dome and numerous wings radiating from it; the dome is about sixty feet in height; the average height of the whole dome being about twelve or fifteen feet.

Chambers Named by Visitors.

The cave will eventually be thoroughly developed, lighted with electricity, and an electric railway from the cave to Hot Spring constructed. A large number of the chambers have been named by visitors. Various social, fraternal and religious organizations have rooms which have been properly dedicated. Among these are Odd Fellows' Hall, G.A.R. Hall, W.C.T.U. Hall, Eastern Star room, Woodmen Hall, T.P.A. Headquarters, A.O.U.W. Hall, K.P. Hall, Elk Hall (which was named and dedicated last August,) and all the religious organizations. The Odd Fel-August,) and all the religious organizations. The observable with Hall is perhaps the most fittingly named; in it are two goats, a large and a small one, which are wonderfully life-like, the three links, the all-seeing eye, and a number of little things which an Odd Fellow would readily see. In the ceiling of the Monte Cristo's Palace are his diamends, that are two ones goads six or seven inches monds; they are two open geodes six or seven inches across, and connected; in one is a pure calcite crystal formation and in the other pure quartz crystal. Geologists always stop here and look and wonder, for the two formations belong to periods that are separated by thousands of years.

Found a Pinhead.

The most remarkable thing that has happened in the history of Wind Cave was the exploit of Johnstone, the mind-reader, in 1893, when he found a pinhead which had been hidden in the Standing Rock chambers about ten miles from the entrance. The thing was done by Johnstone to advertise himself, and he was assisted by the people in charge of the cave to advertise it. While Johnstone remained in Hot Springs, two citizens carried a pin's head to the cave. Alva McDonald, at that time the pin's head to the cave. Alva McDonald, at that time the most expert of the guides, piloted them through the passages until they thought they had found a suitable hiding place. They drove back to Hot Springs, and the four, with Johnstone standing behind the seat, his eyes blindfolded, and one hand on their wrists, drove to the cave at a breakneck speed, making the twelve miles in forty-two minutes. Arrived at the cave there was no delay. With the wrist on each of the two men in his hands, his eyes still blindfolded, Johnstone started in search of the pinhead. McDonald followed in their rear, with provisions, water, candles, etc., to watch them and find them should they become lost. At times the two committeemen would lose their bearing; they would see a passage leading of lose their bearing; they would see a passage leading off somewhere which looked familiar, and Johnstone would immediately pull them through it; when they would stop, lost, the mind-reader would groan and curse them for not knowing how to go; and they would stand until McDonald could reach them and start them off again. During all this time Johnstone was nearly crazed; it was almost impossible to make him stop to eat and when they wanted to rest they tied him to them. The whole party was in the cave seventy-two hours and twenty minutes before Johnstone found the pinhead where it had been hidden under a rock. The man did not recover from the intense nervous strain for some time, and it is thought that the trip was the principal cause of his death two years later.

The Wind Cave is destined to take its place at the head cave wonders of the world, both on account of its size and its unusual and beautiful formations

RESPONSIBILITY OF A CLUBWOMAN.

[New York Tribune:] One of the best-known club-omen of Arkansas is Mrs. Frederick Hanger of Little Rock, who was recently elected president of the Arkansas Federation of Women's Clubs. It was largely due to her support at the Denver convention last year that Mrs. William B. Lowe of Alabama has the honor of being the president of the General Federation. She nominated Mrs. Lowe. Mrs. Hanger has been president of the Little Rock Aesthetic and Quid Nunc clubs, chapter regent of the Daughters of the Revolution, secretary of the Colonial Dames and State regent of the Daughters of the American Payolution.

In the new Arkansas Year Book Mrs. Hanger says to the clubwomen of her State:

"It is hoped that every clubwoman will realize that the keynote to success in the State work is through individual responsibility and practical co-operation. The do-nothing responsibility and practical co-operation. Ine do-nothing club and the club with only a programmed and papered past to point to are both out of time with the tenor of the times. When every clubwoman helps herself, her club and her community to enjoy her best efforts for the betterment of humanity, then the Arkansas Federation of Women's Clubs will have other than alphabetical reasons for being placed very near the top in the roll-call of the General Federation of Women's Clubs."

"THAT'S ME, MAMMA."

DESCRIPTION OF THIS REMARKABLE MINING SECTION.

From a Special Correspondent.

T. MICHAELS (Alaska,) Sept. 1.—The most remarkable gold mining at present in the world, if not in able gold mining at present in the world, if not in the entire history of gold mining, is that now in progress at and about Cape Nome, on Norton Sound, Bering Sea, Alaska, situate about two hundred and twenty-five miles north and west of the mouth of the Yukon River, or 135 miles from this point. Gold was first discovered on Snake River last fall, and during the earlier portion of this assess. Cape Name district had acquired portion of this season. Cape Nome district had acquired considerable repute as a gold producer, and not a few miners from the Yukon River country, many of them stranded here, went over to Nome and either staked such claims as they could get, or secured work as they could find it. Much complaint was made that claims had been taken by persons holding powers of attorney, their principals not being present in person, and in June the Cape Nome district had become so unpopular that reports were circulating to the effect that the whole thing was a "fake" foisted on the public by the transportation companies to improve their business.

Whatever of truth may have been in these stories is now of small import, for in June or early July, some one of the stranded miners tenting on the beach, as the only unclaimed space, accidentally discovered gold in the sand at his feet. He told his story quickly among his stranded friends, and soon all the unemployed were at work on the beach with any and all kinds of tools that would dig. Their success was such that within a few days men who had work on claims along the creek at $10 a day and board, threw up their jobs and took to the beach, expecting to earn, and actually earning in many instances, as much in an hour as they had earned in a day.

Iem. By some it is claimed that the gold in the sand, which is entirely "dust," has been washed out from the tundra by the waves at high tide and deposited through hundreds of years in the sand. It is found here now from two to five feet below the surface in the drift, and so plentiful that the miner who does not find it in paying quantities is the exception. On the other hand, there are some who claim that the gold is washed in from the sea, and that the real field or "mother lode," so to speak, is to be reached and developed by dredging. There may be something in this theory, but the other seems to be the

The beach to the east of Cape Nome makes no such gold showing as does the beach to the west, owing to the existence of a long reach of water or "lagoon," which lies a short distance back from the sea and parallel with Gold deposits along the creeks in the interior are quite as rich in one direction as in the other.

Life at Anvil City.

The headquarters of the Cape Nome territory is Anvil City—so named from the shape of the mountain above it-at the mouth of Snake River, although Nome City is the postoffice. While the city possesses a number of frame houses, tents are the prevailing shelter, and prices for commodities are pretty much as they are in all mining Notwithstanding this is one of the most accestowns. Notwithstanding this is one of the most account of the mining towns on earth, as ships from any part of the world may come up to its very doors, making due allowances for no harbor and much delay between ship and shore in bad weather. Meals are from $1.50 to $2.50 each; a bed in a tent, $1.50; plain drinks, 50 cents each; beer, 50 cents per glass, and other things in proportion, including a mutton chop at $1.25-and, by the way, these are not much in excess of prices at first-class places in New York City. Copper plate for use in rockers is worth its weight in silver, and one miner, who had no copper, substituted silver dollars for it, sixty-four of them being substituted silver dollars for it, sixty-found them being required to properly plate his rocker, which, added to its first cost of $20, made it somewhat expensive, even for this locality. Labor in the mines is worth from $8 to $10 a day and board, and even carpenters, about the only other clas of labor, are paid $1.50 an hour and board being scarcer than food, but among the "beach combers" a novel plan will be adopted. Parties of four, six or eight will organize for winter operations by securing a large tent, spreading it on the beach over the ground they propose to work in, and there they will set up housekeeping. The canvas will be protected on the outside from the weather in every way possible, and stoves will be kept going on the inside, so that the tent will not only be com-fortable to live and to work in, but it will never freeze in there, and the mining can go on quite as satisfactorily as if balmy spring were the only season known in the Cape Nome district. A great rush is expected in the spring, but, as has been stated, there are no claims unstaked anywhere within thirty or forty miles of Anvil City, and what lies beyond those limits is practically unknown. But according to the tales of prospectors as far beyond as Cape Prince of Wales, 235 miles, gold has been found along the creeks in quantities that would pay from $10 to $50 per man per day if panned by an expert. Claims are offered for sale—a claim being twenty acres—prices from $50,000 to $150,000, and there are, of course, this time not many takers at those figures, but they are expected in the spring with the rush.

Thirty Square Miles Staked Out.

Over one thousand claims-covering 20,000 acres, about thirty square miles of territory—have been recorded, and it is generally believed that each claim represents a suit at law, so hasty and haphazard have been the methods of procedure in securing claims.

The claims of this entire section are of the placer variety, and so far no quartz has been discovered, which means that what is a busy mining camp with millions this year may be a deserted village twelve months later. Nome gold is much darker in color than the gold of the Yukon River country, assaying $19 an ounce, though the current trading price is $16 an ounce. Gold dust and nuggets constitute the bulk of the currency, and gold scales are as necessary in the stores as the ordinary grocer's scales. And gold dust as a circulating medium is not as popular as it might be, for coin or paper money com-mands a premium of 7 per cent. in many localities. Such money is known as "chechako," or "newcomer," as only the

The Easiest Mining on Record.

Never had such easy mining been heard of, never had it been found so unexpectedly and so opportunely, and it was not long before everything else was deserted for the seashore, and even women and boys of 10 or 12 years were to be found as busy in the sand as the men were. Since the discovery the number of "beach combers," as they are called, has steadily increased, and today is presented the strange sight of hundreds of miners of both sexes and all ages and conditions strung out along the beach for a dozen miles or more.

For miles to the west of Cape Nome the beach runs straight away in a strip of tide land, varying from forty to sixty feet in width between high and low water mark, extending up to the "tundra" or black alluvial soil, which and rivers east and west for thirty or forty miles and back into the mountains for ten or twelve miles had been staked, but on the long strip of tide lands no man had staked, but on the long strip of the lands no man had a better claim than another, or could have, under the tide-land laws, and here the grand army of gold seekers camped, and in very short order had converted the barren strand into a site of tremendous and enthusiastic industime business of respond to the boom from the beach, and the usual collection of gambling hells, saloons and dance halls went into operation. At present it is estimated that 1000 to 1200 miners are at work on the beach, extending west for twenty miles. All these work with rockers, and they occupy just as much territory to the man or group as can work it. It is not unusual for one small square bit of beach to pan out $10 to $15 an hour, but, of course, the space is soon exhausted and the lucky digger must move to another spot.

Where Does it Come From!

This beach deposit of gold is as yet an unsolved probthemselves. As the days in summer are from eighteen to twenty-four hours long, a carpenter can put in a lot of spare time. Everybody has money, and as many who have it are not used to it, they are lavishing their earn-ings by day on gambling, liquor and dance halls at night. Gambling takes the bulk of the dust, and every species of game is represented in Anvil City.

A Thousand Dollars an Hour.

As to what amount of gold is being taken out there is no means of determining. It is known that not more than $200,000 in all have been shipped by steamer, and $100,000 of that has gone out within the past week. The beach mining is reported to be turning out about $30,000 a day, but this in the nature of things cannot continue, and when it is exhausted these men will go to work on the numerous claims lying back from the sea and along the creeks. Here the gold is found in very rich deposits, the claim of Lindeburg & Co., on Anvil Creek, turning out over $1000 an hour ($25,000 in twenty-four hours,) one nugget recently found being worth $312. Another claim owned by Dr. Kettlesen, in one day cleared up $9000, and so the stories go. One may hear almost any kind of a fairy tale, and while many of them are exaggerated, the fact remains that just now every man in the district has a pocket full of dust and a heart full of hope, and there are no "dead-brokes" in Anvil City. What the conditions will be a year hence will not be known until then, and cannot be predicted.

November 1 communication with the outside world will be completely shut off for seven months at least, and only a few of the people now in the Cape Nome district are fixed with either food or shelter for the severity of the climate, though those who are prepared with houses to live in and sufficient food and fuel can not only pass the winter comfortably, but can do more or less work winter comfortably, but can do more or less work.

Advice to Prospective Miners

To the prospective miner in "the States" expecting to try his luck in the Cape Nome rush next spring, or rather next season, it may be said, that he should keep his attention fixed on weather reports from the Northwest, and be in San Francisco or Seattle in June, to catch the first boat out, as Norton Bay usually opens in June. What the fare will be cannot be told this year, but now it is $60 and $75, according to accommodation, to St. Michaels, and $20 on to Nome by the small steamers crossing the bay— The distance direct to Nome from San Francisco is about two thousand eight hundred miles, and from Seattle or Tacoma 2300 miles, and competition has made the fare to St. Michaels the same. What changes the rush of gold seekers next year will make remains to be seen. It is merely an ordinary and agreeable sea trip, and the miner arriving at Nome is practically in the midst of his field of labor as soon as he goes ashore, and there is little to do except to become a millionaire as soon as convenient. At the same time it may be remarked truth that if he is comfortable at home and is doing fairly well, he had better stay right where he is and thank the Lord for a contented spirit. W. J. LAMPTON. To Mine in Tents This Winter.

By a Special Contributor.

HIS is not an interview with Bourke Cockran. It is a statement of what he stands for and what he is, based on talks with him and those who know him bestpolitical friends and political opponents. The man seems to be without personal enemies He has few intimates. His best friends, he told me, are ex-Speaker Thomas Brackett Reed and Gen. Lloyd Bryce. There is something in what follows of what was said by Mr. Reed, by Gen. Bryce, by members of Tammany Hall. Some of the latter feel that he has deserted the organization, and are likely to say harsh things in consequence, but all of them find something to commend in the man's character as well. It is a tribute to the man to admit that all his friends see points in him for criticism, and that all his opponents find points in him for praise.

Bourke Cockran is a man whose forty-five years have filled his face with those furrows which write the story of strong characteristics. Physically he is magnificent. Tall, broad-shouldered and with a splendid chest, his looks on a public platform help his wonderful oratory to sway his audiences. His body is the body of an athlete, and in each of its motions it shows the trained strong man, just as in each of his words he shows the trained speaker. He dresses carefully but simply. Mentally he is both a giant in strength and a gymnast in quickness. His mind is thoroughly stored with information on almost every topic under the sun. He is a great reader. His faculty for earnest and eloquent speech is recognized to be greater than that of any other man of this time. The nation has produced few greater orators. He is always intensely wrapped up in whatever he undertakes and is capable of doing easily what to almost any other man would require prodigious effort. His mind is ever active. He is always discussing to himself all kinds of problems from every point of view, and this is what makes him in a measure ready for all occa-

Born in Ireland and Educated in France.

It is his marvelous eloquence and his impressive manner of handling his body on a platform which have made him important, but if he had not gained prominence in that way his keenly analytical mind would have carried him to success in any event. He is essentially fair, and always honest. He does not care for office, although he has served in Congress and may very likely serve again. He is a rich man, and has made his money himself. As a lawyer he is in great demand, and some of the largest fees on record have been paid to him. He was born in the county of Sligo, Ireland, in 1854, and was educated largely in France. He came to America in 1871 and began by teaching French and Latin. As he taught he studied law, and for a time after his admission to the bar practiced his profession in Westchester county. He began to make a repu-tation in New York City with the first word he uttered in tation in New York City with the first word he uttered in arguing his first case. It was not an important one, but the eloquence of the advocate set the town talking. He has been connected with many famous cases in the courts, among them the Jacob Sharp boodle Alderman affair, and the defense of Kemmler, the murderer who was the first man to be killed legally by electricity. He entered politics in 1881 and went to Congress in 1886. His law practice became so great that it was difficult for him to attend to his Congressional duties and he wanted to resign, but was persuaded not to. After that he decided never to accept a political office again, but returned to Congress in 1891 in order to prevent a split in Tammany Hall, of which he was then one of the most prominent members. Indeed it is said that it was largely owing to the advice and assistance of Cockran that Richard Croker achieved his power.

His Ability to Rise to All Occasions. confronts him that is his most marked and valuable characteristic," ex-Speaker Reed said to me.

The two occasions which he rose to most magnificently were the Chicago conventions in 1884 and 1892. At the latter he opposed the nomination of Grover Cleveland in a speech of thrilling power. Although he did not convince the convention that Cleveland was the wrong man to nominate, he won a tremendous personal triumph. In this recent argument at the trust conference in Chicago, he achieved another oratorical victory. He is a Democrat first, last and all the time, yet his best friends are Republicans.

He Pays a Tribute to Bryan.

Mr. Bryan has had no such opponent as Bourke Cockran. Circumstances are ever putting the two men in opposition But Mr. Bryan has never questioned Mr. Cockran's complete integrity of purpose. Earnestly, continually and ably, Mr. Cockran has opposed Mr. Bryan, yet the other day he said to me, when I asked him his opinion of the great freesilver leader, that he was glad of the opportunity to pay a tribute to him.

"I knew Bryan well," he said. "I served with him for four years in the Ways and Means Committee of the House and we met almost every day in what might be called the intimacy of political association. Bryan personally is one of the purest men I ever met in politics or out. His devotion to public welfare, as he understands it, is more like the love of a woman for her child or for her husband, than it is the expression of a politician's mind. I do not believe that after many years of active participation in politics and three years of leadership, his moral nature has become colored by even the shadow of a selfish motive, or that in order to be elected President tomorrow he would consent to temporize with his belief or evade the expres-

"But I regard the platform of 1896 as almost revolutionary. My high regard for Bryan's personal virtues, far from modifying my opinion of his political views, intensifies it. We need have no fear of vicious principles advocated by vicious men. It is only when they succeed in enlisting the championship of misguided but enthusiastic virtue that I think there is any danger that they will prevail."

I asked him about Mr. McKinley.

"I have only the slightest acquaintance with him. We both served in the Fiftieth Congress, but we rarely met. My support of him in 1896 was in no way induced by his personality, but came about because I felt that his election was absolutely necessary in size of what I cameidated the was absolutely necessary in view of what I considered the dangerous tendencies of the Chicago platform."

What He Considers Our Greatest Problems.

I asked him what he considered the greatest problem before the country now.

"It is the preservation of our republican form of government. This will be affected by what we do in the matter of territorial expansion. First of all we must preserve and govern well the territory which we have already. I am willing to see annexed to the United States any land in which our present form of government can be established and maintained. That cannot be done in the Philippines. We have races enough already."

He explained his monetary views.
"I am not necessarily a 'gold man,' but a single standard man. I stand for one piece of metal as a money unit. Let it be silver or let it be gold. It matters little which it is. But let us have one standard—a 'double standard' is as absurd an expression as a 'double single.'

Considering the Nicaragua Canal he said:

"I am not prepared to say whether the Nicaragua route should be followed or not. But I believe absolutely in the building of a canal. We must connect the two oceans at the point of greatest possible proximity to the center of American commerce—the United States. I will say further that I am convinced that this canal should be constructed by the consequences."

structed by the government."

Finally, in summing up his political opinions, he said: Finally, in summing up his political opinions, in and the "I stand for the impartiality of government, and the minimizing of government. The more civilized man becomes the less he needs government. Government must favor neither side. If capital is arrayed against labor, government must be strictly fair to both sides. The relations between employer and employed are not service, but part-nership, and should be so regarded. Trade unions, for instance, do not raise wages directly, but they affect production favorably by enabling employer and employee in fixing the basis of distribution of their joint product. Wages cannot be raised or lowered by anything, but the volume of production."

The men who did not agree with what Bourke Cockran said about trusts at Chicago—even Mr. Bryan himself— were the first to express admiration of the way in which he said it. And so it is with the man; the men who do not agree with him are the first to praise his honesty of pur-pose, his strength of character and the fineness of his

What Gen. Lloyd Says of Cockran.

Lloyd Bryce has been Bourke Cockran's friend for a years. It would be hard to imagine two men apparently more widely differing. Cockran is tall, stalwart, commanding in his carriage and his expression. Gen. Bryce is of middle height, slight of build and has the nervousof the man who reads and studies continually, forgetting that he has a body. It is easy to believe from his looks that Bourke Cockran was once a leader in Tammany Hall; it would be impossible to think such a thing of Bryce. The massive strength, deep voice and rugged lined face of Cockran contrast strongly with the slender frame, The massive strength, deep voice and rugged lined cultured tones and delicately-featured countenance of the author of such novels as "Friends in Exile," "Lady Blanche's Salon," and the ex-editor of the North American Yet they regard each other with the affection of "Bourke Cockran's strongest points, I think," said Gen. "are his acumen in forecasting political events and his adaptability to circumstances. The man is extraornary, too, in having achieved so great a success while making so few enemies. This is a key to his nature. He is one of the few really strong men I have met who have almost no personal antagonists. I might almost go so far as to say the only weak point in his character is his incapacity to bear a grudge. He is a strong friend, but a poor hater. Indeed, the fancied enmity of any one wounds him to a degree that is hardly realizable, and on one occasion at least I remember his going far out of his w conciliate a person who bore him an unreasonable dislike, simply because, as he told me, the enmity of any one hurt him beyond measure. His power over his mind, his adaptability, and his faculty of rising to whatever occasion may confront him are illustrated by two events in my ac quaintance with him. He was visiting with me the district which I then represented in Congress and was called on to address a body of school children. Instantly he had their sympathy and friendship. Every word he said was a word which they could understand, which interested them, and yet, instead of 'talking down' to them, he seemed to bring them up to his own level. He held those children enthralled from the beginning of his address until its finish, and to this day. I can see their little faces turned up to and to this day, I can see their little faces turned up to him in wrapt wonderment.

Quelling a Riotous Meeting.

"The other occasion to which I allude, and in forcible "The other occasion to which I allude, and in forcible contrast, was at Omaha during the campaign of 1896. At the request of some of the prominent members of the Republican party. I took charge of Mr. Cockran's campaign, realizing that by relieving him of the details of the campaign, such as the arrangement of meetings, etc., etc., that his extraordinary powers could be better focused on the questions at stake, and I would thus myself be contributing my most effective service to the cause of sound money and d government. Of course, the feeling of hostility to the stand Cockran had taken was bitter among the Democrats, and especially so in Omaha, the stronghold of Mr. Bryan. Indeed, before we reached there, a deputation joined us at a way station and told us that threats of violence were in the air. Some hours later, on our arrival, when in front of the hotel, and as we were forcing our way through a dense mass of people, a rough-looking man signed that he would like to speak with me. I followed him out of the crowd, when he informed me that Mr. Cock-ran would never be allowed to address the inhabitants of Mr. Bryan's State, and that if he attempted to do so 5000 people from the slaughter-houses had bound themselves to break up the meeting at any cost. I never knew that the town boasted such a large proportion of abattors to make credible so extensive a conspiracy, but I confess the nature of the conspirators' employment had a disagreeably significant sound and a depressing effect on me,

When a Panic Was Imminent.

"The meeting was held in a great disused bicycle hall, and there were over twenty thousand people present. I had seen tempestuous public meetings in different parts of the world before, but never one equal to that. At the extreme left some 5000 or 6000 men were gathered, shouting and waving red flags. The confusion grew with each moment, the derisive cries of the hostile crowds swelling into absolute pandemonium. In the very midst of it a skylight fell, and the hubbub was increased by several women going into hysterics. A panic which might result in a serious loss of life was imminent.

"It was at this moment Mr. Cockran stepped to the front of the platform. He paused for an instant. The noise and confusion rather augmented than subsided. It was as if we were standing on a frail dock extending out into the sea during a storm, with the breakers accentuating in force, until they promised to submerge all in a vast gulf of anarchy.

"At last he raised his hand, and in a temporary lull attracted the crowd by an unexpected allusion to the virtues of Mr. Bryan. Then, while their curiosity was excited, he enlarged upon these virtues, and expressed the opinion that there was only one good quality in which Mr. Bryan was lacking, a quality too little appreciated in this world, but nevertheless important, namely, common sense.

A Howl of Protestation Turned into Applause

"The effect was electrical. The howl of protestation gave way to a burst of amused applause. From that time on Mr. Cockran had the audience in the hollow of his hand. At the end of the meeting the wave which had promised to break over him with destructive force rose again, swelling onward, and carried him off the platform victorious and

"I dwell on these two occasions, the first when he addressed the school-the second when he controlled the mob, because they illustrate the man's character. In the firstwhere simplicity and gentleness could count—he was in-stinctively simple, and he was gentle. In the second, where a great emergency arose, he rose to the emergency. That is what I wish to emphasize. Bourke Cockran always rises to the emergency which is before him.

Indeed, the measure of the emergency is the measure of his display of ability to master it-Mr. Cockran's opportunity is in tempestuous times. It is the storm, the opposition, that brings him out. There is something in his very physical appearance that seems made to ride the storm. He does not fascinate the crowd like Gladstone-he dominates it like Gambetta-like Mirabeau-like Danton-I might almost say. Of course, I am speaking more of his personal domination than of his political opinions—for these I think are strangely conservative, and if revolutionary times should ever come, I can see him in my mind's eye, dominating the hosts of disorder, as he did at Omaha, impressing them with his lionesque personality and bringimpressing them with his lionesque personality and bringing them back to reason and to common sense.

"Mr. Cockran has an extraordinary fondness for country life and rural sports. Surrounded by his dogs, he leads in the country the life of the idealist that he is. 'I have often been troubled over some question,' he has frequently ob-served to me, 'and I found the answer in the placid eyes of a cow as I stopped in the field to scratch her forehead.'

A Deely Religious Man.

"Mr. Cockran is a deeply religious man-I think the most sincerely religious man I have ever known. In his curious make-up, too, there is much of the simplicity of the child, and I think he is never quite so genuinely happy as when rolling over the grass with some little playfellow of 5 or 6 eart-ren But, as I have already said, the children's school meeting in the crowded tenement district of this great congested city, and that uproarious meeting at Omaha must be taken together to understand the man.

"In closing, allow me to state that this tribute to my friend may receive enhanced value by the fact that in many of Mr. Cockran's political and economic views, I have found myself in absolute disagreement with him.

"I have spoken of his incapacity of hate. This incapacity is strictly confined to individuals. His capacity to hate concentrates itself upon what he deems unjust. Injustice, wrong, outrage, bloodshed, he hates with the force of his entire nature, and this hate, I think, might sometimes cloud his indement." cloud his judgment."

The thoughtful newspaper correspondent whose constant business it is to watch men and affairs gains a birdseye view of public events and characters. Such a one is E. J. Edwards, the famous "Holland." He has closely observed Mr. Cockran's career since he first became prominent, and speaks with knowledge. He also is a political opponent of Mr. Cockran, but an earnest admirer.

"Bourke Cockran," he said, "has the nature of a true orator, which must be almost that of a poet. Roscoe Conkrator, which must be almost that of a poet. ling was full of the tricks of extemporaneous declamation; Cockran has none of them. He does not write first what he afterward talks from the platform. Of course, he prepares for his speeches; but his preparation is without manual work. He has an ability which few speakers have possessed. After reading up whatever references he needs, as Wendell Phillips did, he lies on a sofa, turning them over in his mind until he is full of his subject. But that is all.
What is to be done with this material depends on the inspiration of the first moment on the platform, as it also did with Phillips.

"I have heard him speak many times. He has a higher oratorical inspiration even than John R. Fellows had, and the man that has that rarely has executive ability. He would not be a good man to appoint to the place recently given to Elihu Root, for instance. He lacks the capacity for executive detail necessary to a Secretary of War. Cockran must be a leader on the moral and intellectual side, and Cockran prefers being that kind of a leader to holding He has certainly achieved such leadership in Nev York. Cockran is always right on moral issues. The tariff, in which the Republican extremists oppose Cockran, has no moral side. I know of not one single case involving a matter of absolute right and wrong where Cockran has failed to see clearly. With his qualities of sympathy, elo-quence and clear insight into affairs and public sentiment, he could have done whatever he liked with Tammany Hall if he had been willing to let himself down; but he not. Cockran's tendency, since the days when, by one of the most magnificent efforts of will power I have ever heard of, he overcame an unfortunate turning toward stimulants—it amounted to a disease that gripped and held him—has been steadily upward. When I first saw him he was striking in appearance, but shabby in his dress. His change into the clear-eyed, strong-featured, well-groomed man of today, has been remarkable.

"He is now a man of the highest culture and of striking capacity for highest social relations. His case has been an who would be accepted by the best. He must give for what he gets, to be sure, and Cockran gives of an infinite social charm. Cockran is a stimulator. He is a gentleman by nature and by cultivation. This was illustrated. When his wife died, her considerable property would have gone to him, but he turned it over to her sister. He is not a wit, nor is his sense of humor keen, but in conversation as well as on the platform, his poetry, imagery and flow of diction are remarkable. His memory is not less than wonderful. This is an advantage few orators have possessed. Seward and Chase had good memories. Blaine's was less perfect; Depew has none." So, to wind up with, it is easy to find Bourke Cockran's friends, and they talk of him most pleasantly. It is hard to find his enemies, and they criticize not the man, but his epinions. The man's honesty and integrity of purpose are never questioned. It is hard to believe that a man so regarded by important people in a great community is other than worthy of high respect, no matter how earnestly one may oppose his political and economic views. EDWARD MARSHALL.

A KISSING-BUG PANIC.

WHOLE STREET CAR UPSET BY THE ADVENT OF A DARNING NEEDLE.

[Philadelphia Inquirer:] It happened on a trolley car on which the Saunterer was a passenger an evening or o ago. Whether it was the result of an intentional attempt to play a practical joke or whether it all came about as the result of a natural mistake was not apparent at the time, nor has it become so since. But whatever may have been the cause it was successful, just the same.

The car was coming in from one of the nearby summer resorts. It was crowded from one end to the other, and a lot of people were hanging on the side footboards. Sud-denly something flew into the car with a whizzing and a whirring of wings.

rear seat, "there's a kissing bug."

It was impossible for everybody to look out in the literal sense of the phrase. But everybody did his or her best to dodge the attack of the dreaded "bug," Such a ducking of heads and a throwing up of hands, forearms and elbows as face guards was never before seen, not even in a prize ring. The chorus of feminine shrieks that went up could have been heard three squares away.

"Don't let it bite me!" "Take him off o-o-h-h,
-l-e-a-s-e take him!" "Look out, he's right behind you!" p-I-e-a-s-e take him!" "Look out, he stight believed and let me get "Let me get out, conductor; stop the car and let me get

These were fair samples of the cries that went up. Th car was finally stopped. If it hadn't been there is no tellwhat might have happened, for half a dozen women were on the verge of throwing themselves off without waiting for a stoppage. When the wheels ceased rolling some young fellow, braver than the rest, saw the bug within reaching distance and made a grab for it.

He got the insect and held it up triumphantly for inspec

"Here he is," he shouted, "reg'lar kissing bug, but you needn't be afraid, girls. I've got him fast."

Then some one crowded over for a closer look.

"Huh," the latter exclaimed, "kissing bug nothing.

"That's a darning needle and nothing else. He wouldn't kiss a Venus, let alone some of the people I see in this car. Let the wheels roll, Mr. Conductor."

And the wheels did roll to the accompaniment of hearty hughter from the passengers.

SOMETHING ABOUT THE LATEST OF OUR GREAT BATTLESHIPS.

By a Special Contributor.

HE battleship Kearsarge has proved, by official trial, that she is essentially a success in points of speed and facility of handling, and only a brief time now will be needed to put her in shape for active service, for she was more advanced toward commissioning than any of our heavy craft heretofore have been at the time of their governmental speed tests.

The Kearsarge and her sister ship the Kentucky are the nearest of kin to that magnificent craft, the Tregon, which we have among our new ships, but bettered in those points of speed and destructive power where rare prescience foresaw the consequence of a modern conflict like that at Santiago de Cuba.

Most of us are pretty familiar with the Kearsarge by this time, but it is well that all should know that she is 368 feet long, 72 feet wide at maximum beam, has a mean draft demanding only 23 feet 6 inches of water on a dis-placement of 11,525 tons. To uphold the honor of the flag, she carries a fighting force of four ponderous 13-inch and four effective 8-inch rifles, housed in pairs in four stout turrets of hardened steel, and in a broadside—ad-ditionally, she is able to confront an enemy with the un-pleasant greeting of seven rapid-fire, 5-inch rifles and ten pretty destructive quick-firing 6-pounders. This force of guns is so disposed that it may maintain a complete circle of fire about the ship, and the craft that ventures within the reach of that halo will find it glittering with

As far as skill and a limit of weight has made it posmanded in dividing the burden of moving the dead weight of those big parts with the generation of driving power enough to turn the two large screws over a hundred times a minute in the water without the ship.

How well this has been accomplished in the Kearsarge may be summed up in saying that the performance of nearly seventeen knots—one more than officially called for—is not a real variance of more than a single per centum or two beyond the true original estimate of the designers. It is, indeed, a wonderful example of end-of-the-century cursing and a construction of the contract of t the-century cunning, and a great contrast to the old Con-stitution, which was our pride when the present cycle dawned. FASCINATING CAIRO.

PRONOUNCED THE MOST PICTURESQUE AND IN-TERESTING OF ORIENTAL CITIES.

Frederic Courtland Penfield, former United States Dipmatic Agent and Consul-General in Egypt, describes the October Century the picturesque features of the African metropolis. He says:

"From its founding in 969 by the Fatimite califs, as an offshoot of the tented settlement of Fostat, to the present rule of Abbas Pasha, seventh khedive, or viceroy, of the dynasty of Mehemit Ali, Cairo—capital of Egypt, me-tropolis of the African continent, and chief seat of Mohammedan teaching—has had a romantic history. Scene of famous exploits of great personages, from Saladin to Napoleon, of sanguinary conflicts between Christianity and Islamism, and the memorable massacre of the Mamelukes; cradle of religion and cults; home of the "Arabian Nights" tales; the place where lasting principles of philosophy and science were conceived, and where Bible scenes were laid, Cairo has become the meeting-ground of winter idlers from every clime.

"Cairo looks old, but comparatively is not; Alexandria has the appearance of newness, but was twelve hundred sible, heavy armor, ranging from one inch to seventeen, stands between the men behind our guns and the foe that would face them, and to gain admission at the stout-that would face them, and to gain admission at the stourest front, the enemy must rap with a blow of 13,000 tons and then be able to speak with the voice of bursting shell.

To drive the great ship along in the face of storm and sea, has required that she be engined with the might of 10,000-horse power, and to fill the veins of the great double organ, six big boilers of stout steel, will generate the life flood of steam at a working pressure of 175 pounds to the square inch.

Coal, to the amount of 1600 tons can be carried, and this will form the tissue with which to generate energy of every sort, save human, for all the departments of the complex get-up of such a fabrication. By the burning of coal—which, by the way, at a cruising speed, should last her for nearly a month—ice and heat will be furnished in turn, electricity generated, light produced, fresh air drawn into the extensive byways of the ship, foul air forced out, and no less than minety auxiliary engines supplied with power by which to do their manifold services of movement, direction, and preparation.

Besides being an efficient fighting machine, in which we of her flag may take pleasure, she is the comfortable and healthful habitation for half a thousand exacting persons—for the modern Jacky, with his daily supply of soft bread, shore food, and a-plenty of the purest water, has become a man of comparative luxury, and he fights shy of the ship that does not meet his requirements down to a needle bath and airy accommodations. He knows he is there to fight against appalling forces when the time of strife comes, and he wants to be sure of a foretaste, at least, of heaven, before his future is hastily settled by a steel-clad shot from his foe.

In the Kearsarge we realize the fruit of man's highest ematics and fine judgment. There is not one bit of that monster fabrication, with its ribs and flesh of steel and its thews, muscles, arteries, and veins of as many different metals, that can be coaxed into response beyond that determined by abstruse formulae and the obdurate nature of the material. Each line of that great hull means either hinderance or help, and they are so nicely balanced that, as far as human foresight are so nicely balanced that, as far as numan recognican fix, a harmonious compromise is made between the form which will carry that load and the water which stands in the way of its advance.

In the motive engines, the same great skill is de-years old before the first stone of the present capital was laid. But the Cairo of today is only the development of Fostat, Old Cairo, New Babylon, and Heliopolis, probably. There has always been a great city there or thereabouts, changing in appellation with its locale.

"The visit to Egypt has become almost as essential to Americans—and fully half of the eight thousand winter visitors are from the States—as the pilgrimage of good Mohammedans to Mecca. The Mohammedans' religion takes them but once to the sacred city of the prophet, but pleasure draws those favored by fortune to the Nile capital time after time. Cairo is more than interesting; it is fascinating. The antiquarian, the student, and the savant have always been at home there; and the invalid, real or imaginary, seeking a climate, finds in and about the khedival city, the superlative of air and temperature.

"Artists never weary of reproducing Cairo's picturesque scenes and vivid colorings. The blue of the skies, the splendor of the setting sun, the Turneresque afterglow, and the delicate browns of the desert, seem to be best suggested in water-colors. Like Venice, Egypt demands a master hand in oils.

traveler of impressionable nature yields to the fascination of Cairo's quaint eastern life, as perfect as if met far beyond the Orient's threshold, and doubly satisfying, because found within a half-hour of the creature comforts of hotels conspicuously modern. To walk the streets of an oriental capital wherein history has been made, between meals, as it were, and delve by day in museums and mosques perpetuating a mysterious past, and dine de rigueur in the evening, with the best music in Europe at hand, explains a charm that Cairo has for mortals liking to witness eastern life provided they are not compelled to become a part of it. If Egypt disap-points, the indecisive idler can in four or five days be back at Paris or the Riviera.

TRAPPING PRAIRIE DOGS.

The prairie dogs in Texas are being destroyed by means of a new device for catching them, which has been adopted by a large number of the ranchmen and farmers. On one large ranch over twelve thousand were captured and killed last week. The trap is placed over the animal's mound, and makes it a prisoner when it emerges from the hole. This pest has been destroying over 50 per cent. of the growing crops and grass in Texas annually.—[Kansas

NOTE:—This character sketch of President Diaz becomes especially interesting in view of his recent intention to visit this country. The illness of Senora Diaz, to whom Mr. Lummis refers as the idol of the Mexican people, to whom she is affectionately known as "Carmelita," prevented President Diaz from carrying out his plan, and necessitated the sending of representatives instead of a personal visit.—[Editor McClure Syndicate.

HE arithmetic has such an overwhelming majority in its following that it would doubtless be unwise to question it. Yet one may sometimes be pardoned for a silent incredulity. But 1830 from 1899 seems, according to the best text books at my command, to "leave" sixty-nine; and I do not believe any man will see Porfirio Diaz without running over the figures again and make sure there is no mistake. It seems incredible that this fateful figure should be on the verge of three-score and ten. Yet he was born in 1830—appropriately enough on the eve of the birthday of Mexican independence (September 16)— and this is generally taken to be 1899.

A man of 55, with speech as compelling, capillaries as free, eyes as eagle-clear, is envied; and I have never known a man of any age whose step was younger.

The recent expectation that this undimmed veteran greatest soldier and the greatest statesman that Spanish-America has ever produced, and one of the large names in both rosters for all history—was to revisit the United States (he was here in 1883, on a supplemental bridal tour,) gives the interest of the day to a brief summary of one of the wast asternative execution. one of the most astounding careers of record.

Like a Hero of Romance.

A strangely romantic mixture, surely, is this soldiery figure who has wrought such miracles in Mexico. The chief drawback to him as a subject for literature is that no chief drawback to him as a subject for interactive that he fictionist would dare invent anything so "improbable" as his established history. An orphan nobody in a backwoods corner of Mexico; a callow theologue; a green law student, earning his way through a little Mexican instituto civil; a boy Mayor of an Indian hamlet, wheedling his aborigi-nal constituents into drilling for fun—and then drilling hal constituents into drilling for run—and then drilling them for business enough to capture the capital of the State when a usurper held it; a guerrilla chief in the wasting wars of the Reforms, when stolid, stubborn, sound but tactless Juarez was trying to put the church between fences and keep it there; the Sheridan and Grant in one through that unequal war in which Mexico protested against the usurpation of the little Napoleon; political opponent at last, of his friend and patron the great Indian President; and for nineteen years himself President of the country he first gave fair title to call itself a republic; a field officer as dashing as our Funston, and of as phenomenal exploits, but in half a hundred battles; a commanding general whose grasp of a whole campaign has never been surpassed on this side of the world; a man as self-made as our rail-splitter, and fortuned to wreak a far more vital change in his native land than even the extinguishment of slavery was in ours-here is certainly enough material for And I deeply believe that if there is such a thing at all, if mankind has a call to be proud of any special flower of manhood, for its own sake and not for racial vanity, Porfirio Diaz is entitled to whatever love and esmanhood can give to manhood. And from whatever point of view.

A Man Among Men.

With a good deal of the Napoleonic insight and in-evitableness, there is no suspicion of the selfishness, the coldness, or that certain atrophy of humanity which marked the greatest soldier of all time. Diaz is always human, always of that untranslatable quality his people call simpatico, for which we have no nearer approach than "winning" and "magnetic." A cool egotist might have whipped the armies of Maximilian, but he never could have fused Mexico into the nation it is today—and it is doubt-ful if he could even have made the same record in war. It is always to be remembered as a sheer historic truth that no man ever before on any considerable scale conquered disciplined armies with so small and so unlicked an array of peons. Lexington is not parallel, nor any other battle wherein the raw recruits were our American yeomen. Diaz won his campaigns with material at which the most sanguine of our frontier campaigners would simply gasp. I do not despise the Mexican pelado; only I would not like to have to fight a battle with him for backing. And while the Mexican rural is a fighter of serious accountability, there were no rurales till Diaz made them, out of next to nothing. A man is judged in war and state-craft, by the material with which he has to work as well as by the gross result. In relatively modern history the only synonyms of Diaz's military career (as of the class where the ranks show for numbers, indeed, but the leader is really the army) are Cortez and Pizarro. Our own history has no fair parallel, even among the Marions and Custers and Roosevelts; for the very palpable reason that none of these, our lions, were leaders of sheep. No men have ever led a charge better; but some as wild heroes have been worse followed. where the ranks show for numbers, indeed, but the leader aperb Physical Courage.

This is not the side of Diaz I care to dwell on. Splendid as personal heroism is, it is also (luckily for humanity) uncommon. It is significant here particularly, because without it and the direct hero-worship it aroused, Diaz very certainly could not have done his larger work. The who led so many forlorn hopes against superior numbers, discipline and arms; who was brevetted with so many scars; who could not only plan a complicated campaign, but win it inch by inch at the head of his tatterdemalions; who spiked the enemy's battery with his own hands, in the heat of the melee; who served his own guns when the last gunner had fallen or run away; who dazzled his men and his people as well by his personal in-fighting as by the endless ingenuity and almost devilish inspirations by which he befooled or shattered the enemy—that sort of man, among any sort of men who love red blood and a steady hand, can get listeners after the fight when he speaks quietly as to citizens, telling them of national "righteousness, mercy and a judgment to come."

What He Has Done for Mexico

No one would be more grateful for scientific demonstra-tion that somewhere else in human history so radical a change has come over the political, social and commercial circumstance of a nation in so short a time as has be-fallen Mexico since Diaz wound the reins round his hands. I have not been able to find it for myself, with a fairly primate knowledge of what Mexico was and in and con-intimate knowledge of what Mexico was and is, and considerable attempt to learn something of other history.

Fifteen years ago, Mexico was a byword among the nations; unsettled by revolutions, moth-eaten with brigandage, Tweedian in local politics, remote, uneasy, ignorant, inaccessible, unsafe and beggared. Today it is as law-phiding as age as clearly administered as any State in abiding, as safe, as cleanly administered, as any State in our Union, bar none; as easily traversed as any of our States west of the Missouri; as compact and national in spirit, and, in fact, as I could wish some better countries to be, of sound business prosperity in every line that in-genuity could question, and of a mental awakening as genuity courd question, and of a mental awarening honorable as it is overwhelming.

Diaz not only crushed revolution—and the way to crush is to crush—and weeded out corruption in office, and cured the thieves and brigands and agitators who were curable and wiped out those that were not. He fetched into Mexico the largest railroad building that has been seen since our transcontinental lines, and supplemented them with the telegraph and a very good postal service. He slaughtered the obstructive interstate and intertown tariffs, multiplied manufactures, by an enormous figure, through judicious legislation, turned the balance of trade and changed revenue from a cavity to an eminence. He set a limit to the church, and began to make prisons we can justly envy. He greatly empowered colleges; and from the medieval suppression of women to domestic ignorance, subverted that whole immemorial fabric and began (for the verted that whole immemorial rabric and began (for the first time on a large scale, I believe, in any Spanish-speaking country) to provide liberally for women's real education. Long before he became a national figure he established a girl's school in Oaxaca; and now any bright girl in the republic can get a modern and practical education if she will.

The Father of the Public School.

Above all, he is the father of the public school in Mexico; a system to which he gives not only the due turn of the reins, but his earnest personal care. There is not a village in Mexico, even in the remote Indian districts, which has not its free public school; and the Normal schools of the republic are turning out yearly a little army of earnest and pretty well equipped teachers for these schools. Manual training schools, professional schools, all are taking a rank in "poor old Mexico" which no one will disparage who fairly knows the facts.

Peace, security, communication, commerce, education—these are in Mexico the children of one patriot. They are, these are in Mexico the children or one partiot. They are, to speak generically, and only of proportions large enough to count in history, modern inventions there, and the inventions of Diaz. Mexico had taste of all of them hefore, at times and by unsatisfying bites, but now they are on the regular bill of fare. I do not deem it too much to call the man who could do this, so soon and from so little, one of the world's great figures, the man who did do it, one of the great patriots. And no one fully grounded in the chronicles and in the visible facts of the field will call in question these apparently large statements. There some-times are big men.

The President's Wife.

A factor not to be forgotten in the estimate of this great success is the present Senora Diaz, the President's young and lovely second wife. His first died in his years of and lovely second wife. His first died in his years of stress, leaving him three good children. In 1883 he remarried, taking Carmen Rubio, the daughter of an old opponent, then not 20, but already a woman of the rarest charms. Not one of ten in Mexico would know who "la Senora Diar" might be; everyone in Mexico old enough to talk, man, woman or child, Indian or mestizo or don, knows and reveres and loves "Carmelita," with a devotion as deep as it is patriarchal. Beautiful, gracious, highly-educated, a type of the very highest womanhood, not alone the actual charities to which she devotes so much time, money and hard work, but her every relationship, have endeared her to her nation. It will be a fairly wise historian who shall be able to say how much of Mexican progress has been due to this lovely personality, winning hearts for the strong man at the helm.

Mexico a Safe Country.

Mexico today is as unemotional as New England. The most offensive tourist can go anywhere with as perfect safety as is found in this mortal sphere. He can say things that would get him knocked down in any New Eng-land village, and wear manners such as we never saw. It is quietly amusing to those who have any real knowledge of the country when he ascribes his safety to the "fact" that Mexico is a despotism; that Diaz is a czar, and the little policias at the corner his spies, and that no one dares be bad. The great secret is now that no one seriously wishes to. A good, serious man could go out any morning in any Mexican town under 20,000 and strangle all the soldiers in it, for a constitutional. He would not have prolonged need of a constitution, it is true; for there is law in Mexico, and it "goes." But the idea that the country is a will transport of the description of the description. try is a military camp, or a close corporation of the desp or a nursery of spies and passports is so grotesquely false and foolish that those who entertain it are proper forwarders of our gayety. Mexico is pretty thoroughly governed, but absolutely without a trace of Caesarism. The "hard hand" (and those are his own words to me) "was used when need was to throttle brigandage and revolution and uplift willful sullawing. But the mechicary is attorney and uplift willful wallowing. But the machinery is aston-ishingly simple and small and untyranous, as great minds devise. And, strangest of all, it is not so much to carry, deadheads and "make places" as it is to get effective public service. The service is not perfect, Mexico being still populous with human beings and not much invaded by angels (in spite of much immigration from the North.)

Not Governed by the Machine.

But there is no "machine," no aggregation for purposes of plunder; and the civil service of Mexico, by and large, is not anything we can fully afford to sneeze at. Despite our proper distrust of everything we do not know, the time has come when to despise Mexico is to confess scant enlightenment. And for what he has done for a republic which took its inspiration from us, after ours drew its models ill as it has followed that models, ill as it long followed them; as well as for his gallant figure as a man such as brave men love everywhere and every when, President Diaz is likely to receive at or hands a memorable welcome. Behold this form, labor personified In Man-a reincarnate Grecian god Clothed in the Olympian attributes, Wisdom and power and immortality. While bowed in reverential mien, he leans Upon his hoe and upward looks to God; The glory of the ages in his face And in his heart the rapture of the world. Proud Man-the climax of creative thought, Jehovah's vivid dream-can never be A brother to the ox that drags the plow, With stolid, brutal head and drooling jaw. The Lord God, who in wisdom created The universe, shaped that brow and planted The light of reason in the human brain, Gave him earthly dominion, and power to Read the hieroglyphics of the stars

And hear the voiceless music of the spheres. He is the hope of Him who formed the suns Circling through the immensity of space; That flash their light to dim revolving worlds, Through the unfathomed orbit of the skies. There is no form more noble or divin More tuned with praises of the world's progress; More fraught with joy for the soul immortal; More filled with lofty hope for all mankind. Labor—God's universal law—has bridged The gulf between Man and the archangels, And opened wide the codex of knowledge. Arctum's swift eternal flight through space, The fiery comet circling round the sun, Are symbols of his wondrous Jove-like powers, Not mysteries of the Stygian shore. Through this form all the fleeting ages seek For time's fulfillment of a prophecy. The upward look and the light of glory Are set to sacred music in his dreams. O minstrels, who with fingers deft and skilled Touch lyric chords of poetry and song, Ye cannot make humanity believe This image of Divinity has been Defrauded of its ancient heritage!
He bears the stamp of immortality,

INTERESTING DISCOVERÍES MADE BY A WASHINGTON SCIENTIST.

By a Special Correspondent.

ASHINGTON (D. C.,) Sept. 25.-You have never heard of electrography. It is a brand new art. The first electrograph was made two weeks ago. I have just had an extensive interview with Prof. Elmer Gates of this city, who made it. He was at work on the one hunded and fifty-second print during my visit. This new art was discovered in the course of experiments being made in Prof. Gates's laboratory in connection with an extended study of the influence of electricity upon meteorological and astronomical conditions—upon the weather and the planets.

An electrograph is an autograph written by an electric An electrograph is an autograph written by an electric discharge upon striking a sensitive plate. It is interesting to know just what path the particles of a bolt of lightning will follow upon coming in contact with a human being or any obstacle in its path. Hitherto, there has been no definite knowledge as to this, and the fantastic and indelible marks made upon the skin, upon window panes and other surfaces, have given rise to extravagant

In imitation of nature, Prof. Gates is producing artificial lightning discharges by a very large "influence machine," lately installed in his laboratory. It is a frictional or static machine on a very large scale, actuated by an electric motor, rather than by hand power. In studying lightning flashes by these means, a brass knob, emitting a spark can be reasonably substituted in the emitting a spark, can be reasonably substituted in the imagination for a thunder-head, another knob for the point on the earth receiving it and a body interposed between for the object struck.

How it is Accomplished.

I witnessed the complete manufacture of several electrographs. In each case an ordinary dry plate, such as used in photography, was placed in an inside envelope of black paper, and an outer one of orange paper, insuring the total absence of light. The motor of the influence machine was then started, and soon a succession of huge taphy. Electrographs upset the two conflicting theories regarding the distribution of an electric current in a conductor, one of which is that it equally invades all parts of the mass of the conductor. The other theory is that the current distributes itself wholly through the "dielectric medium," i.e., the ether directly surrounding the con-

But here, in the electrograph, the experimenter has obtained the accurately-written diary of the current's travels while electrifying a conductor made up of salts of silver capable of being decomposed, as in the case of photography—in other words, the sensitive coating of the negative. The electricity shows itself not to have equally invaded this conductor, otherwise the coating would remain a homogenous mass of uniform color.

"After making over one hundred and fifty electrographs," said the professor, "I find that neither of these laws is correct. In traversing a conductor, electricity selects a number of separate and mutually divergent paths, and is not distributed wholly through the ether medium directly surrounding it, as here shown by the autobiography of the current electrifying this plate."

The Markings on the Human Skin.

And this is how electrographs give the hitherto hidden And this is how electrographs give the hitherto hidden explanation of electric markings on human skin and other bodies: "During a recent thunderstorm here in Washington," the professor explained, "several men took shelter near some trees, and the bench upon which they were sitting was struck by lightning. One of these men afterward found upon his body what he called 'the picture of a tree.' People speaking about it, and newspapers writing about it, described the mark as a photograph of a nearby tree made on his body by the lightning. An examination of the electrographs will make it evident that it was not a picture of a tree. but a picture of the path taken by the of the electrographs will make it evident that it was not a picture of a tree, but a picture of the path taken by the current in spreading over the surface and through the skin. This popular belief in "lightning photographs' upon the body must consequently be abandoned."

The electrograph, therefore, is a chart showing the distribution of a thunderbolt or smaller electric spark on striking a man or other body. In cases where amally striking a man or other body. In cases where small figures, such as these contained on an ordinary photographic plate, are burned upon the skin, the bolt is very probably but a small spark jumping from the parent flash. Prof. Gates estimates that a one-inch spark of his artificial lightning will make an electrograph of one inch area, films or coating of each plate be made homogenous in thickness and resisting power. In other words, were all these conditions favorable, the result would be a beautiful design, formed of lines coming from a common center, a segment of which would be an exact tracing of each of the other segments.

"These electrographs surprise me by their multitudinous branchings in every direction," Prof. Gates explained, picking up a well-developed print. "The current seems to try to get farther away from every part of itself. It would appear that the branches are mutually repelled, but this is not the case, as proved by the law that currents flowing in the same direction mutually attract. The separation is produced in conformity with the well-known law aration is produced in conformity with the well-known law that electricity travels in the direction of least resistance. The sensitive film is quite thin, but has appreciable thickness, and from any given point where it is struck the direction of least resistance must be radically outward." Electrography is expected to prove of great value to students of electricity, who, for the first time, will have pictorial means of studying the difference between quantity of current and potential, or power of current to come from a distance against a repellant force. When the influence machine is run so slowly as to give only a one-inch sparkmachine is run so slowly as to give only a one-inch spark—therefore one of low potential—the electrograph printed thereby will cover only about one square inch, and will appear like a cluster of soft bird-feathers, broad, round and spreading at the ends. But when by running the machine faster it will emit a seven-inch, high-potential spark, the resulting electrograph will resemble a cluster of longer and more slender feathers, covering about one hundred square inches, as intimated. Sparks from currents of small quantity imprint these same feathers forms of small quantity imprint these same feathery forms, while those emitted from induction coils, which increase while those emitted from induction coils, which increase the quantity, give greater detail, the feathery appearance giving way to the sea-moss appearance noticed in the plate developed while I was in the darkroom. In other words, the greater the potential, the larger the area of the electrograph, and the greater the quantity, the greater the detail of its lines and branchings.

Some Strange Phenomena.

In some of the professor's experiments his miniature thunderbolts have played strange pranks and left queer tracings upon the plates. In one case a flash punctured the light-proof envelopes, struck one film within and then jumped through the air over the side of the plate, taking a direct path to the other knob of the influence machine. The electrograph, when developed, showed that the course of the spark while leaving the center of the plate was through the air, and not on the surface of the film, and consequently not an electrograph of the spark, but a photograph of the light emitted thereby was obtained. In another experiment the sensitive film was placed between two shellac-covered non-conductors. A spark admitted through a hole produced an electrograph in which there were no branchings, but a decided frosted or marbled effect. In another case, a carpet-tack was placed through the envelopes, with the head inside resting against the negaby the tack, as expected, punctured the envelope a short distance from it. Only a side spark was transmitted by way of the tack, and then spread.

When in the darkened laboratory a piece of ordinary, ancovered glass is substituted for the sensitive plate and held between the knobs of the machine, the luminous current is seen to travel in a branching path, like that traced in the electrographs, but only the main stems of the branches are then visible. Sparks emitted straight downward into a vessel of water, separate on reaching the liquid, and circulate through it, definitely showing this same branching. Prof. Gates is now engaged in making cylindrical rods of transparent gelatine, containing silver salts, similar in composition to the film coatings of his sensitive plates. He will allow his manufactured thundersensitive plates. He will allow his manufactured thunder-bolts to pass through these as through the vessel of water, and if the same branching effect is repeated the decomposi-tion and discoloration of the salts, wherever reached by the current, will give the effect of moss or fern inside of translucent agate.

flashes, making reports like rifle shots, began to jump from one knob to the other. The machine was regulated to emit flashes in slow succession, and the photographic plate, in its orange and black envelopes, was attached to a clasp with a long handle, made to protect the fingers of a clasp with a long handle, made to protect the fingers of the assistant manipulating it. By this means the plate was thrust in the path of the flashes, and was held at right angles to their direction. A blazing flash struck it in the center, leaving a pin hole burnt in the envelopes. The plate was then taken to a dark room, to which I was admitted, and was immediately developed. Gradually there appeared thereon a succession of lines forming themselves into a figure comparable only to a beautiful spray of sea moss, with delicate branches radiating in all direcor sea moss, with deficate transfers radiating in all directions and covering the entire plate, which was 8x10 inches in dimensions. When printed upon ordinary photographic paper these lines showed in pure white against a dead-black ground. The pin hole burned in the envelopes repnted the normal path of the miniature before striking the sensitive plate. This strangely branching figure, covering about eighty square inches, represented its path immediately afterward. The chemistry of the experiment was simple enough. Striking its obstacle, the widely-distributed branches of the flash had precipitated the sensitive coating of the negative, leaving the lines, afterward printing white, wherever it ran. Many Mysteries Unraveled.

Now, these simple experiments have aided in revealing many of the laws which that subtle fluid known as elec-tricity has hidden from science since a century and a half ago, when Ben Franklin first gathered the lightning from the clouds. They also unravel many of the tangled mysteries of lightning marks and so-called lightning photogdred inches area. He says that he would need a photophic plate of many acres area to receive the complete electrograph of a lightning-flash a mile long. To obtain this, of course, would be a difficult matter, granting the possibility of making such a plate, because it would be a task perhaps of centuries to finally obtain a flash happening to strike the exact center at right angles. But if we could get behind such a plate, made transparent, on a dark night, and could see the lightning strike it, head on, in the center, the effect would be a beautiful enlargement of these small electrographs.

No Camera Needed for the Electrograph.

The electrograph resembles the X-ray print, in that no camera is needed in its production. The camera has been used in the course of the experiments, but for a different purpose. Artificial lightning-flashes sixteen inches long have been produced by the influence machine. Side-view camera photographs of the entire lengths of these have been made by a 12x15 anastigmatic lens. When printed they show in white against a black-ground, jagged, irregularly and the production of the producti lar lines such as are noticed in long chains or forks of lightning during severe storms. Speaking of these, the professor said: "We sometimes hear it asserted that the course of lightning is not crooked, but straight, and that the crooked appearance is due to the irregular background of clouds. That such is probably not the case is shown by these camera photographs, which, however, are not elec-

According to Prof. Gates, each electrograph would show white lines spreading radially in all directions with geo-metric symmetry could the plates be held at exact right angles to the sparks, could the sparks be made to strike them precisely in their centers, and could the conducting

MAN WITH BRAIN OF A CALF.

About three months ago at Harmon, W. V., Jay Lents, foreman in the mines of the Great Western Company, was caught under a fall of slate in the mines.

His skull was crushed, and Dr. E. C. Harman and two other surgeons gave him up to die. A piece of his brain was broken away from the main body of the brain struc-ture, and the skull covering it was broken away.

After a few days the doctors decided to take heroic measures. The shattered brain was cut away neatly and dressed. A healthy yearling calf was tied down, her skull cut away, and a lobe of brain removed and fitted into the cavity in Lentz's head. The wound was dressed and trephined, and the results awaited. The calf's head was fixed up with half a brain in it. fixed up with half a brain in it.

Both the miner and the calf have progressed satisfactorily, and the man is nearly as well as before the oper-ation, though his mental vigor is not entirely restored. The calf stands as though asleep till started, when it moves, till interrupted, in a direct line. It will not eat till its jaws are started, and then its jaws must be stopped by force, as it continues chewing when food is removed.—[Chicago Inter-Ocean.

SHIRTS GROWING ON TREES.

[New York World:] Humboldt states that during his travels he saw shirts growing on trees. To quote his own language: "We saw on the slope of the Cerra Dinida shirt trees fifty feet high. The Indians cut off cylindrical pieces two feet in diameter from which they peel the red and fibrous bark without making longitudinal incisions. This bark affords them a garment which resembles a sack of coarse texture without a seam.

"As in this climate the riches of nature are regarded as the primary cause of indolence, missionaries do not fail to say in showing the shirts of Marina: In the forests of Orinoco garments are found ready made upon the trees,"

GOLDEN LOCKS,

THE MINISTER'S CHILD.

By a Special Contributor. MRS. CHARLES STEWART DAGGETT, Author of "Mariposilla" and other works.

The bonnet, the bonnet, the old-fashioned bonnet,

The bonnet that bleached and did up in the spring. OLDEN LOCKS bloomed like an old-fashioned garden flower before the time of orchids and kindergartens. Her active mind opened up gradually and naturally. Each day actual impressions unfolded fresh intelligence. She used her eyes, and ears, and hands instinctively, and later drew wise conclusions deportment and conversation of her elders. The eager, soul-stirring period furnished abundant material for unconscious mental growth. Conflicting theories in regard child development were not then in vogue. Golden Locks had reached the age which demands a judicious arrangement of time, a suggestion of work from a serious standpoint, she was taught her letters. Afterward she learned to spell words in the good, old-fashioned She commenced with the first letter and way. spelled through to the end, like an enlightened Christian She knew nothing of the series of little gasps and clucks which are now supposed to represent the cat and dog of modern times. Perhaps Golden Locks missed a great deal, but of this she was unaware. She could not k into the future, or forestall the wise makeshifts for reading without tears, and spelling without memory. She knew nothing of the dear children who now acquire knowledge through the happy medium of nice little games. The minister's daughter wept sadly from the very beginning of her orthographical career. She wept in the middle of it as well, and if she's alive I trust she's weeping still. Doubtless she believes that tears and resolution are the sole recourse of the ambitious scholar, would master the erratic gambols of the English language. And so in the very beginning Golden Locks cried above her spelling-book-she did worse; in a fit of desabove ner speining-book—she did worse; in a fit of desperation she flung the arbitrary volume upon the floor and stamped upon it. For years her highest ambition for the future was to grow big enough to boldly repudiate the tyranny of Webster. "Some day I'll write a spelling-book of my own, see if I don't," she often wailed. However, as time advanced the little girl grow more to However, as time advanced the little girl grew more resigned to her long hour of daily study. Her mother was patient, and soon Golden Locks could print a very neat Composition had always been easy for her, when once she had mastered the short primary words of the spelling-book she launched into story writing and Her juvenile tales were always inspired by actual circumstance. She was a born realist, as her first poem will attest. The lines were written upon a little Hebrew boy who resided next door. The children had de-veloped a romantic attachment for each other by reason of a large and conveniently-low knot hole, discovered in the high, closely-boarded division fence of the adjoining back yards. Flitting visions passed and repassed before this magic peep-hole. Finally, one day, a soft blue eye and a very big brown one met unexpectedly. The introduction was mutually cordial. From this time on the sociable knot hole became a delighful medium for tender Often very original gifts passed through from both sides, and cherished treasures were displayed each day. Golden Locks once carried a lovely white chicken from the coop, and held it for a moment in front of the peep-hole. The young Hebrew, not wishing to be outdone by a girl, lugged a great fat goose to the scene of observation. Then he kindly explained the bird's especial calling to the back yard. The goose, doomed to an early death, was destined to supply the Jewish fryingpan with authorized grease. The unhallowed hog, the young man proudly declared, took no part in the domesof his household. Golden Locks was trenomy mendously impressed with this Hebrew legend. She forthwith composed a poem, based upon its realistic facts. She repeated the lines to her father with great pride.

He goes to the synagog, And never eats hog.

Thus the child's education advanced. The winter, with its disappointments and military hardships, passed. For the contending armies of the North and South there was no rest. Spring smiled again amid blood and bitter car-The issue of the great rebellion was still uncertain. Hearts were heavy, and times were hard. The formal demands of society had abated. Few women in dulged in unnecessary finery. Feminine economies were generally and patiently practiced. One bright spring morning the minister's wife drew forth her fine white Manila straw bonnet from its sheltering bandbox. She ripped away the trimming of the previous season, then carefully pinned the despoiled "Sunday-go-to-meeting" bonnet into four plies of the New York Observer, the most country. It was Monday morning, the minister's holiday. For this reason his wife suggested that he should take his young daughter for a spring airing. An additional reason for the projected outing was the Manila straw bonnet. The lady explained that this very important matter must have immediate attention. She gave her matter must have immediate attention. She gave her husband full directions for finding the shop in which past creations were born again, bleached and "done up" in economical and approved fashion. Golden Locks was charmed with the prospect of an excursion. She also felt very important to be sent out upon such responsible busi-ness. She fully realized her father's shortcomings, and when her mother cautioned her to observe the clergyman's movements, and see that he retained a reliable grip upon the bonnet, she decided to carry it herself. To be sure, her father lost things frequently. They were going part of the way in the street car, which was an additional reason for marked vigilance. The minister had an unconscious way of sitting down upon things which were not at all intended for cushions. His daughter wisely remembered his absent-minded tendencies. Forthwith she assumed the responsibilities of the expedition. "I shall be very careful and carry the bonnet in my own hand," she told her mother, proudly, as she sallied forth. "Well," laughed the lady, "perhaps it will be the safest

For the first half of the journey Golden Locks attended strictly to business; then she became interested in other matters. By the time she left the horse car she had grown tired of her responsibilities. As she crossed the street she dragged the unwieldy bundle upon the ground. The little shop was three blocks away, and when the clergyman and his daughter arrived, Miss Golden Locks was unconsciously hauling an empty New York Observer behind her. The Manila straw bonnet was gone. She looked with consternation at the grave columns of the accusing paper. What would her mother say? The child's blank misery touched her father. He smiled in spite of his own chagrin. The ripples about his eyes betrayed a humorous appreciation of the absurd catastrophe. Immediately Golden Locks partook of his reckless spirit, and laughed wildly.
"We'll both catch it," she cried, through smiles and tears.

The minister agreed that the sin of carelessness had been a partnership affair.
"I should have carried the thing myself," he owned, dejectedly.

"But," interrupted his daughter, "you might have sat upon it in the horse car, and that would have been almost as bad. Besides, you have lost many more things than I have."

Such logic was convincing. The poor clargyman said no more. In silence the unhappy pair retraced their steps. For several blocks they searched diligently, but found no clew to the lost bonnet. Even the New Observer had refused to assist the trail. No bits of convincing paper strewed the ground. Poor Golden Locks was getting cross and tired. She was upon the verge of tears, and her father had decided to abandon the chase, and return home in confusion, when a handsome coupe drove close to the pavement where the dejected couple now stood. A kind, rosy-cheeked gentleman leaned from the open window and invited the minister and his young daughter to ride. The invitation was gratefully accepted and soon the story of the lost bonnet became a graphic theme for the child's artless prattle. Her Scotch friend, Andrew McDonald, roared with merriment when the rich denouement of the catastrophe had been graphically

"And you see," the little girl wisely declared, "my father is just as much to blame as I am. Of course, the New York Observer ought not to have breaked, but pins are dreadful slippy things. My mother ought to have tied the bundle with a good strong string." "Undoubtedly," the Scotchman agreed.

continued Golden Locks, "I suppose she'll have to wear her old gray straw all summer, because the times are so hard."

"I trust not," said her friend, with a knowing smile.
"Oh! but she will," persisted Golden Locks. "I kno her. She's the most economicalest woman in the city, even Miss Purple Jenkins thinks so."

Fun-loving Mr. McDonald was ablaze with curiosity.

He desired to draw the child out fully in regard to ine arbitrary opinions of the spinster, who governed a board-ing-house in royal purple. But the clergyman put a gentle quietus upon his daughter's voluble conversation. The little girl understood a certain look which she occasionally saw in her father's eyes. This one decided expression admonished her without words; in the present instance she speedily subsided. In vain the Scotchman endeavored to start her afresh upon Miss Purple Jenkins. His wiles were useless. She was a dutiful child, and quickly understood that she had done wrong to criticize ner father's parishioner. She had, also, often been cautioned not to divulge the necessary family economies For a moment she sat, pink and humble, upon the small seat in front of the two gentlemen. She was a sensi-tive little creature, and shrank from reproof. However, it was impossible for her to remain cast down. Fortunately, her father remembered an errand at the bookstore, and shortly left the coupe. The Scotchman seemed ,leased with the circumstance. He told the clergyman to tak: his time among the books, and then explained that he wished to take Miss Golden Locks upon a little chopping expedition. He further declared that the young lady's good taste was absolutely necessary for a purchase he was about to make. The little girl felt delighted. Of all things in the world, shopping with plenty of money semed the most charming. The coupe moved gayly down the street, and soon stopped in front of the largest fashionable milliner's establishment of the city. The gentleman alighted, and then gravely assisted his small companion. When the curious couple entered the grand shop, three polite French girls approached them at once, while the overpowering madame, dressed in a splendid trailing black silk, bowed and smiled, as she revealed her will in French. She would herself, attend to these guileless customers. When the Scotchman made known his wish to purchase a handsome spring bonnet, the doors of at least half a dozen glass cases flew open like nagic. Golden Locks stood overcome and bewildered before a maze of lace, ribbons and flowers. Then her friend explained that she was to select a bonnet for her mother, in place of the one she had lost. The child's gratitude knew no bounds. Her bright eyes sparkled with joy, and forth-with she embarked upon the undertaking with true feminine spirit.

"Well," she exclaimed, "now that she's to have an entirely new bonnet, it seems providential that the New York Observer tore."

He decided, mentally, that the quaint little creature should indulge her own fancy, even to the last his fat wallet. Then began an animated discussion be-tween madame and the child.

"You see," explained Golden Locks, "my mother is a minister's wife. It won't do to have her bonnet too fine for church. Still I think it would be nice to have it a ittle gay, because the one we lost was very plain. My mother thinks if she wears nicer things than the poor people they will think she is proud."

"Never mind," said the Scotchman. "This bonnet is to be a corker; the very finest in the congregation," he de-

The child looked dubious, then her face brightened. "She can tell the poor people that the bonnet was a present, and say she was obliged to be polite and wear it, for fear of hurting your feelings," she explained, joyfully. "Exactly!" said her friend.

"And I think it would be very nice to have the trimming red, white and blue, on account of the war," decided, reflectively. She pointed, as she spoke, to a Frenchy affair in the show-window. The madame reached for the sweet creation of white lace, pale-blue ribbons and beautiful red roses.

"It's the very one I want!" exclaimed the child. just lovely! and red, white and blue besides. my mother be glad when she sees her own prettiness in

"I dare say," replied Mr. McDonald. He produced his leather wallet, and paid without further comment the outrageous price which the French woman demanded. Then the delighted couple drove back to the bookstore. The unconscious clergyman had about forgotten their existence, together with his late misfortune. Manila straw had become a vague memory. His daughter was radiant with smiles, for the purchase of the French bonnet was to be a complete surprise. She had been instructed to keep the secret until she reached home. Of course this was hard to do, but the little girl was very honorable. During the return drive she shut her lips tightly, while inside she fluttered wildly. Her eyes and her fancy pictured vividly the surprise of mother. Her father had not noticed the box upon the driver's perch. When it was handed down to him at the end of the short journey, he took it with polite bewilder-ment. Then the Scotchman said good morning, and the coupe rolled away. Golden Locks was delighted. She flew up the three long flights of stairs and burst upon her mother like a young whirlwind.

"He's coming," she cried. "He's coming, but he walks slower than ever." She ran back to the head of the highest staircase, and waited impatiently. Her father's deliberate tread resounded upon the steps of the second flight. "Do come faster," she pleaded, in eager treble. Meanwhile the clergyman's wife had grown alarmed.

Her daughter's wild entrance had startled her. She hastened to the door with vague foreboding. Fortunately, at this moment, the minister's head hove to from the last landing.

"Well," cried Golden Locks, "you've come at last." She sprang for the box, and carried it triumphantly before her. "Shut your eyes till I tell you to look," she com-

Her parents obeyed, while with tremoung angulation tore away the string. Then she caught the patriotic, Frenchy creation from its nest of dainty, white tissue triumphantly, "Look!" The minister of the minis paper, and cried, triumphantly, "Look!" The and his wife gazed in speechless astonishment. the child's mother found her voice. She turned to her husband with frightened, questioning eyes.

"Where on earth did you buy that bonnet?" said she.

"It must have cost at least $30."

"It did," said Golden Locks, "I saw him pay the money."

"I am astonished," cried the poor woman, turning excitedly to her husband. Judicious wrath lit her face while she spoke. "To think of your doing a thing like this," she said, severely. "Thirty dollars! for a bonnet to wear one season. A little shower would c.mpletely ruin it."

The clergyman was now enjoying the joke hugely, but Golden Locks refused to be longer silent. She burst forth in peals of laughter.

"He didn't buy the bonnet at all," she explained. "It was me and Mr. McDonald. We picked it out all by our-selves. It was just because the New York Observer tore on purpose for the old straw bonnet to lose that Mr. Mc-Donald felt sorry and bought you a new one. He says you mustn't think it is a bit too fine for a minister's wife. And please don't let Miss Purple Jenkins see it, for if you do, she'll make you change it for an ugly one," the child implored eagerly.
"Well!" said the minister's wife, "you do seem to have been deeply engaged during the morning.

"Yes," answered Golden Locks. "We were very busy.

all the time," she added, importantly. Her father smiled, and the young wife stood before the mirror and placed the charming bonnet above the rica coils of her sunny hair.

"I said you'd be proud of your own prettiness," the little girl cried, admiringly. The looking-guass had revealed the young mother's pleasure.

And now, before we say farewell to Golden Locks and which happened some two years later.

The war had waged during all this time, and with the approach of the spring of 1865, the nation waited breathlessly for the beginning of the end. It came one night in early April. Golden Locks was fast asleep, and for several hours the great smoky city had been silent with the hush that falls after midnight. The night was mild, and the windows of the houses were lowered to admit the first soft breath of spring. Suddenly the bells of the city burst into joyous revelry. Ding, dong! dong! Ding, dong! they sounded far and wide. ork Observer tore."

"Yes," said the Scotchman, "it was very providential."

stately church bells, the merry factory bells, the school bells, and all the stray bells of the city proclaimed good

Then from the lofty spire of the cathedral silver chimes. Golden Locks awoke from a long, dream to listen. In her white nightgown, her earnest little face upturned to the open window, where quiet stars shone above her in the sky, she heard with breathless wonder the story of the beils. Wafted upon the night came glad tones, struck by the cathedral chaines. Like the benediction of peace fell the sweet measures of the old hymn,

"Come - thou - fount - of - ev' - ry - blessing,
Tune - my - heart - to - joy - ful - lays;
Streams - of - mercy - nev - er - ceasing,
Call - for - songs - of - loud - est - praise."
Again and again the chimes pealed out their song, then a long wave of human beings burst upon the streets. Men ran in all directions, and every voice shouted the same wild message. Gen. Lee had surrendered to Grant! same wild message. Gen. Lee had surrendered to Grant! The great and terrible war was over. When daylight broke the earth awoke to a grand carnival. Before noon the city was a blaze of red, white and blue. Flags streamed, bands played, triumphant cannon boomed, and men cheered until their throats ached, and their voices failed to respond to the joy of their hearts. For five wild, happy days the demonstration continued, then—the nation wept and prayed. The old flag and the bright buntings blent with the sable folds of mourning, and Golden Locks knew that her dear President had fallen before the hand of a cowardly assassin. Lincoln was dead! The great, good, tender, simple-hearted man was dead! The great, good, tender, simple-hearted man was gone! Little Tad had lost his father, little Golden Locks had lost her friend. Tears streamed over the child's young cheeks. When she looked about her she saw with vful wonder the terrible grief of strong men. Then she understood the meaning of tears. Her calm father, Capt. Jack's aged mother, the darky chore boy. and the housemaids were all weeping. The child asked no questions. She understood the sacred tragedy which had torn the hearts of her countrymen.

THE BICYCLE FOOT.

ALLEGED DANGER TO WOMEN WHO WEAR THIN-SOLED, HIGH-HEELED BOOTS.

[New York Sun:] The bicycle foot is a new disease that has been developed by women riders this summer. Its surgical name is traumatic flatfoot, and it is caused by wearing the thin-soled, French-heeled boots which are fashionable for wheeling this season, and also from careless or incorrect dismounting.

As a rule women do not know how to jump. They have not learned, and seem to be without the instinct which men possess to land on their feet with a spring, bending their knees and escaping the jolt which follows if the knees are kept rigid. As a consequence, most women get a headache from jumping, and the bicycling women, who give slight attention to the way they get off their wheels, get the bicycle foot. They alight on the hard pavements with unnecessary energy. The force of the blow strains with unnecessary energy. The force of the blow strains the tendons to such a degree that the proper arch of the foot is lost. It is not done at once, but the foot is sometimes months in getting out of shape. The ligaments are gradually stretched until they cease to hold up the arch. Thin-soled boots increase the trouble. They afford too little support for the curved instep and do not protect the ball from the concussion when the rider jumps to the ground. Physicians recommend only calf-skin boots with low heels and heavy soles for wheeling. The high heels irritate the nerves of the feet and cause an additional shock, as the heel reaches the ground at the same moment as the ball, which is not the case when the foot is in normal position.

Traumatic flatfoot is so called in distinction from congenital flatfoot. It is frequently treated as rheumatism. with unnecessary energy. The force of the ble

Traumatic flatfoot is so called in distinction from congenital flatfoot. It is frequently treated as rheumatism, which it somewhat resembles. Inflammation of the muscles is one of the results of the sagging ligaments. The delicate bones, thus relieved of their natural support, press upon the nerves, causing intense pain.

The treatment for bicycle foot is prolonged rest and an artificial arch. The X-rays show whether the bones are displaced. If they are, a plaster cast of the foot is made, and from this the manufacturers of surgical instruments construct a steel brace to fit the instep. This is placed inside a thick-soled boot, and must be worn until the strained tendons become strong and assume their natural place.

Men are seldom afflicted with the bicycle foot for the reason that they are more generally careful in the matter of footwear and in dismounting.

ZIONISM,

IT IS TO BE PROMOTED ONLY BY A DETERMINA-TION TO MAKE IT SELF-SUSTAINING.

II. Zangwill, in New Lippincott for October:] There are nearly thirty colonies in Palestine and Syria, and if the majority do not pay, they will. If the Rothschild and Hirsch colonies have made such little headway, it is the majority do not pay, they will. If the Rothschild and Hirsch colonies have made such little headway, it is because they have been philanthropic schemes, not the outcome of self-sustaining enthusiasm. "I started colonies, not to promote Zionism," Baron Edmond de Rothschild told me, "but to give work to the Jews I saw starving in Palestine, and also to disprove the notion that Jews could not be agriculturists." All honor to the noble pioneer, but his millions have naturally impeded the work they have made possible, and, sustained and weakened by this boundless reservoir, his colonies have had more officials than laborers, while rumor hums with far graver instances of maladministration. Baron Hirsch was even less a Zionist. His object was that to integrate Israel, but to disintegrate it; to break up the vast congestions of Jews in Galicia and Russia. He was less Moses than the Destroying Angel, who, according to the Talmud, is also a messenger of love. The report of the Hirsch Colonization Association—with its beneficent activities diffused all the world over—is a pathetic record of a heroic effort to roll a rock up a mountain. It may be prophesied that whatever portion of the Herzl two millions goes to persuade Jews to be what they are naturally inclined to be, will be as profitless in the first generations at least. It is a waste of force to yoke a winged creature to the plow; and if twenty centuries of artificial selection have made of the Jew an organizing and impatient brain, one must await the equally slow processes of reversion to the rural temperament by force of the new life in the open air, life in the open air.

MOSQUITO FLEET.

By a Special Contributor.

DOPTING for the Philippines the policy so successfully executed in the case of Cuba during the war with Spain, Rear-Admiral Watson has organized a quito fleet to assist in enforcing a strict blockade of the island of Luzon.

This fleet does not consist of ferryboats and the like, which early in the Spanish war the Navy Department was compelled to transform into mirth-provoking menof-war, but of real little spitfires—gunboats purchased from Spain by Gen. Otis and turned over to the navy to assist in the important operations of the coming dry

Since the beginning of the insurrection efforts have een made to prevent filibustering, but they have not been attended with overwhelming success. Information which has reached the authorities has made it evident that Aguinaldo has been able to obtain ample supplies of arms and ammunition. These purchases were made with moneys obtained through forced loans upon wealthy Chinamen and Filipinos and from the sale of hemp, rice, and tobacco raised in the interior of Luzon under the control of the insurgents and shipped to China through ports not under our control. The value of the traffic in these articles will be understood when it is known that Rear-Admiral Watson has officially estimated to the Navy Department that the two products of rice and hemp alone have risen in value quite 300 per cent. In view of this advance, he has earnestly recommended that a formal blockade of the islands be established to prevent exports being made by the Filipinos. The administration has sincerely regretted imposing the hardships of war upon non-combatants, but it has been decided to adopt Rear-Admiral Watson's recommendation. This blockade will be robbed of its international character by being termed a "municipal blockade," though it will be none the less

The determination of the administration to institute this blockade as one other means to the suppression of the insurrection is due, in part, to the recollection of the value of cotton to the Confederate cause during the rebellion-in the case of the Filipinos augmented by the will Comprise Thirty-six Vessels.

Rear-Admiral Watson's fleet is not so large as that about Cuba, but it is a good-sized one, consisting of thirty-three vessels now at his disposal, and with the promise of three others in a few weeks, namely, the Isla de Cuba, Isla de Luzon and the Don Juan de Austria, now nearing completion at Hongkong. The army has a number of small vessels, which have been transformed into gunboats, and these will be used to assist the navy.

The twelve turned over by Gen. Otis after their purchase from Spain, bear the pleasing names of Pampanga, Paragua, Samar, Albay, Calamaines, Panay, Manileno, Mariveles, Mindoro, Basco, Gardoqui, and Urdaneta, the latter having recently fallen a prey to the insurgents through the overzealous bravery of her young commander. By a recent order of Rear-Admiral Watson these small boats are assigned to the various big vessels of the squadron as military ducklings, and, as far as possible, draw their complements, equipments, arms, provisions, and the like from the parent ship. To further distinguish them, each gunboat has a number in addition to its name, and for convenience of detection, these numbers in the shape of large black numerals, are painted near the top of the little boats' smokestacks.

Excellent results are expected to follow the employment of these small vessels. In fact, some of them have already rendered good service. Early in August, the Pampanga assisted the gunboats Concord, Yorktown and Callao in destroying the town of San Fernando, because of the action of the insurgents at Lingayen in burning the steamer Saturnus of the Compania Maritima. The Paragua engaged in a duel with the insurgents at Balemao, lasting twenty minutes. The vessel was struck a number of times, fortunately without suffering damage or having any of her crew wounded, but her retaliatory fire caused the entire destruction of the enemy's defenses. The Samar made a trip around the island of Panay and cap-tured and destroyed thirteen vessels laden with supplies for the enemy. The latest exploits are those performed by the Panay and the Meriveles, which captured the steamers Mundaca and Taalenoa, respectively. The latter is of 100 tons displacement and will be armed and equipped as a gunboat for service with the blockading fleet.

The Vessels Described.

It is evident from these instances, that the small vessels are able not only to take care of themselves, but to do a great deal of damage to the enemy. The Pampanga, Paragua and the Samar, like the Callao, which is an independent command and which was captured by Admiral Dewey a few days after the battle of Manila Bay, are small steel gunboats of fore-and-aft rigcommonly called schooner-114 feet in length, 17 feet of six feet of water. Their light draft is highly advantageous, as it enables them to enter the shallow waters of the archipelago. They have a nominal speed of ten knots an hour and their armaments consist of four small guns apiece of a rapid-fire type, with a maximum caliber of 6-pounders. The Albay is larger, being of 251 tons displacement, is constructed of wood, and carries a battery of only three guns. She is rated as a nine-knot boat. When in the Spanish service she carried one 3.5 Hontoria breech-loading rifle, one 3-pounder, and a couple of ma-chine guns. The Calamaines is of iron, fitted with two screws, which drive her at a speed of eight knots. She is any portion thereof.

91 feet long, has a beam of 16 feet, draws 61-2 feet of of feet long, has a beam of 15 feet, draws 51-2 feet of water, and has a displacement of 151 tons. She now has three fine rapid-fire guns for a battery. The Manileno is of wood and has a single screw. She has a displacement of 142 tons and can make nine knots. She carries a fighting force of four 3-pounder guns. The Panay is three tons heavier, has two screws, can go ten knots, and has a battery of four a panadays also. The Writingles, and has a battery of four 3-pounders also. The Mariveles and Mindoro are of 142 tons displacement, iron built, have single screws and a rated speed of ten knots, and are each armed with four extended of the latest time. The each armed with four 3-pounders of the latest type. Gardoqui is of forty-one tons and has a speed of eight knots. Her battery consists of two 1-pounders. The Gardoqui and the Basco are the emallest of the mosquito floor. The Urdaneta was a sister ship of these latter vessels The Larger Boats.

So much for these miniature fighting craft. In addition to these vessels, Rear-Admiral Watson will have under his command the three cruisers raised by Naval Constructor Capps—the Isla de Cuba, Isla de Luzon, and Constructor Capps—the Isla de Cuba, Isla de Luzon, and Don Juan de Austria; now completing under the supervision of Naval Constructor Hobson. These boats are of a trifle over a thousand tons displacement. They have been supplied with entirely new batteries. The Isla de Cuba and the Isla de Luzon being equipped with four 4-inch rapid-fire guns, four 6-pounders, four 1-pounders, and two Colt machine guns. The Don Juan de Austria will have four 5-inch rapid-fire guns, four 6-pounders, and four Colts.

It has been the duty of Rear-Admiral Watson to assign to the command of the vessels of the auxiliary fleet young officers of tried courage and ability, and such assignments have been made upon the recommendation of the com-manding officer of the vessel upon which each served. The officers and crew of these gunboats have also been selected from their parent ships. Thus the Pampanga is commanded by Lieut. W. C. Davidson, formerly of the Concord; the Samar has Lieut. H. G. McFarland as her commanding officer and Naval Cadet Guy W. Fallar as her engineer officer. Both of these officers are borne on the assignment to the Oregon. The Albay is commanded by Ensign W. H. Standley, while Naval Cadet J. L. Beckner is in charge of her engines. Ensign Standley was recommended for advancement by Admiral Dewey in recognition of his gallantry in making a survey of Baler, where Lieut. J. C. Gilmor and his boat's crew were captured by the Filipinos. The Manileno is under the com-mand of Lieut. DeWitt Blamer of the Charleston, and his engineer officer is Naval Cadet E. T. Constein. Lieut. Joseph W. Oman, navigator of the gunboat Helena, commands the Mariveles. The Mindoro is commanded by Ezsign W. J. McCormack, and her engineer officer is Naval Cadet J. E. Lewis of the Baltimore. Ensign Harris Laning and Naval Cadet A. N. Mitchell, both of the monitor Monadnock, are the detail to the Panay. Naval Cadet P. B. Dungan of the Baltimore commands the Basco. Ensign A. T. Chester of the Monterey commands the Gardoqui, while Naval Cadet W. C. Wood of the Oregon did command the Urdaneta.

Young Men in Command.

There is something very inspiring about the youthful There is something very inspiring about the youthful details to these small gunboats. These young men must assume all of the responsibility of independent command, be able to navigate their vessels for hundreds of miles, perhaps, and that in waters but little known, and, if charted, charted with that easy-going inconsequence common to the Spaniard. Future great leaders are made in this way, and the work cut out for the youngsters will make itself known in the years to come, when the fate of the Philippines will have long been settled. of the Philippines will have long been settled.

The regular squadron under Rear-Admiral Watson consists of the Oregon, the pride of the navy; the cruiser Baltimore, the cruiser Charleston, the monitors Monterey and Monadnock, and the gunboats Petrel, Concord, Helena, Princeton, Wheeling, Castine and Yorktown.

No additional vessels will be sent to participate in the blockade, for Rear-Admiral Watson believes he has ample force with which to hem in the insurgent coast line.

The work is arduous, for it is under cover of darkness or the gloom of fog that the blockade-runners will try to make their runs, and, in those treacherous waters where native pilots are an uncertain quantity, the task of grave responsibility, but it is the one effective way of overhauling a filibuster is one fraught with great risk and

THE "HELP" THAT HELPS.

[Bishop Potter, in Popular Science Monthly for October:] During some six weeks spent, a few years ago, in the most crowded ward in the world, among thousands of people who lived in the narrowest quarter and upon the most scanty wage, I gave six hours every day to receiving anybody and everybody who came to me. During that time I had visits from dilapidated gentlemen from Albany and Jersey City and Philadelphia and the like, who supposed that I was a credulous fool whose money and himself would be soon parted, and who gave me what they considered many excellent reasons for presenting them with $5 apiece. But, during that whole period, not one of the many thousands who lived in the crowded tenements all around me, and to hundreds of whom I preached three times a week, asked me for a penny. Not one! They came to me by day and by night, men and women, boys and girls, for counsel, courage, sympathy, admonition, reproof, guidance, and such light as I could give them—but never, one of them, for money. They are my friends today, and they know that I am theirs; and, little as that last may mean to the weakest and the worst of them, I believe that, in the case of any man or woman who tries to understand and hearten his fellow, it counts for a thousandfold more than doles, or bread, or institu-

ACROSS SIBERIA.

SOME OF THE STRANGE THINGS SEEN BY A CALIFORNIAN.

From a Special Correspondent.

ISTVENITCHAIA (Siberia) July 8, 1899 .- Mysoosk is the temporary terminus of the railroad ou the eastern shore of Lake Baika!. It is the western end of the road which will finally connect Russia with Port Arthur and Vladivestok. It stands on a low peninsula which projects far into the lake, and consists of car shops and other railroad buildings and log houses. Here travelers bound for Irkutsk and beyond usually leave or sell their privaet tarantasses. If Siberians are intending to return this way they leave their vehicles at the station, and if travelers simply crossing the country they sell to specula-tors always ready to trade. The freight charge on a tarantass taken across the lake is 8 roubles. As we were comfortable and did not want to break and chase our baggage, transferring from vehicle to boat, boat to vehicle, and vehicle to vehicle, we declined to leave our tarantass among the twenty or thirty in the station yard. The steamer for Listvenitchaia, the terminus on the western shore Baikal, near where the Angara River starts from the lake on its long and tortuous course to the Yenisei, leaves Mysovsk on Monday, Thursday and Saturday at 4 p.m. Our arrival at a late hour Friday night gave us a day at this place. It has been restful and entertaining to look over railroad shops and other railroad buildings. The builders of the road have anticipated the demands of the future and given the place a tremendous spread of track. of track-laying is still in progress, however, and the traveler who happens this way next year will be able to see many more tracks than we saw, and find the track-layers still at work. In arranging for the handling of many trains the Siberian railroad promoters show that they realize the road must do a large business in order to come anywhere near paying expenses. Hence all the preparations are for a large business. This idea strikes you time and again as you pass over or near the road and see the steady increase in buildings, side tracks and switches.

Greased the Wheels for the Last Time,

At 3 p.m. we had the wheels of our tarantass greased for the last time and rode from the station to the stout pier to which the lake steamer ties. The Baikal, the namesake of our Shilka River steamer, was due at 12 o'clock. Having had over six weeks of Siberia we knew she would be behind time. At 3 o'clock she came along, towing a barge and hurriedly landed mail and freight. By hurriedly I mean fuss and noise. An American steamer of the same size would have easily and quietly discharged the same amount of stuff in half the time. The deck hands worked in a go-as-you-please style and their work was mark by main strength and stupidity. The freight consisted of a tarantass, two carts, twenty or thirty bales and boxes, none too heavy for a hand truck, and twelve large leather pouches of mail. The mail was from Russia and Western Siberia, and under guard. The pouches filled four carts and these, with a tarantass, formed a procession that was to dash across the country to Stretzinsk. The mail train has the right-of-way on the road and the first call on

A Paper-cutter for a Sword.

At Stretzinsk the mail goes by steamer to river points and matter for Vladivostok and way stations is shipped by rail from Khabarovk. The steamer had few passemers, and, as usual, most of them were officers, soldiers and members of the telegraphic and engineer corps. These servants of the government and their families represent nine-tenths of the travelers on the post road. And as all the and boys in military and civil service are uniformed the man in civilian garb, except he be a peasant, looks very much out of place. Everybody who is anybody wears a sword. At Khabarovk we noticed a clerical-looking man in uniform with a paper cutter sword at his side, and on inquiry, learned he was the civil secretary of the Governor. The incongruity of the equipment made us smile, but our Rusian cicerone saw nothing amusing about it and elabor-ately explained that the sword was the insignia of office.

A few minutes before 4 o'clock our tarantass was run onto the deck of the steamer by half a dozen of the crew. the loading we were asked to pay 1 rouble. We had paid our freight bill for the tarantass, amounting to $4, and for our heavy baggage (weighing 180 pounds,) and our two tickets, we had paid $6.50. The demand for a rouble for doing regular work was therefore regarded as a deck-hand squeeze and treated accordingly. In talking with a Russian engineer officer who was also crossing the lake, I learned that the crew of the steamer are allowed to levy on tarandrinking fund. If the traveler declines to pay tribute, as I did, nothing more is said to him, except, perhaps, as in my case, a sympathetic fellow-traveler warns him to keep an eye on his vehicle and see that it is not looted in the pas-

The steamer Baikal is a side-wheeler, 150 feet long, of good beam, and heavily built. The lake is several hundred miles long, from thirty to fifty miles wide, and very treacherous. It is subject to sudden and violent storms. Its great depth makes anchoring impossible, and the craft caught in bad weather has a lively and dangerous time. Baikal was built to stand the shock of rough waters and ice and does good service in the season. In the winter months she is laid up, and the lake is crossed on sledges. The cabin is on the main deck and well forward and is added from the ceiling to the blue-velvet-cushioned seats in tufted silk, once a delicate blue and now faded white.

Cigarette Smoking Among Russians.

The air was damp and cool and we were glad to view the encircling mountains through the cabin windows. The vast expanse of smooth water and the dense forests recalled Lake Tahoe of aClifornia and Nevada. We saw nothing of the seals and sea gulls which are found in and about the lake and looked in vain for coral reefs. We had to take on trust the statement of a passenger that these things really do exist in the northern part of the lake and that sealing is a profitable calling. The comfort of the cabin was not long for us. Two Russians lit their cigarettes and in less than an hour the air was a deep blue, thick and cickening. The Russian is an inveterate smoker and smoking is so common among Russian women that it is allowed as a matter of course in all public places save churches. The Russian carries a case of cigarettes and smokes one after another in rapid succession. One who has not seen a Russian smoke has no idea what cigarette smoking is. Fortunately for Russian nerves the cigarettes are made of light Turkish tobacco. To have asked these men to stop smoking or go outside would have been regarded by them and the two Russian women as absurd, although, from our experience with Russian courtesy, I am certain both men would have smilingly assented to a request from us. We were finally smoked out of our cabin and first-class seats and took refuge in the warm and comfortable engine-room. A Big Ice-breaking Steamer.

At Listvenitchaia a big ice-breaking steamer is being built by English and Russian workmen. She will carry an entire train and must be used as a connecting link of the road for several years. The gap between Irkutsk along the shore of Lake Baikal to Mysoosk is the toughest problem of the whole enterprise. The bad country is south of the lake and on the eastern side. The track from Irkutsk to the lake is already laid. The line passes through frequently flooded valleys, where dykes, retaining walls, tunnels and high embankments are necessary, then skirts a mountain ous region, where rock cuts from seventy to one hundred feet deep must be made, and finally runs along the southern and eastern shores of the lake. The crib work, bridges and culverts required are beyond ordinary conception. I think the builders have not fixed the time for filling this gap and rely on the Baikal ice-breaker to keep the line

Listvenitchaia looks light and lively on a dark night. The rush is so great that men work from daylight to dark and dark to daylight. As our steamer neared the town we saw long lines of lights on the shore and heard hammering in directions. The activity mainly related to the icebreaker in process of construction and which may not be finished for eighteen months. It was 10 o'clock when our tarantass was rolled from steamer to wharf. With Irkutsk and hot baths only forty-two miles away we inclined to a cheerful view of life.

Courteous, but Exacting Customs Officers.

IRKUTSK (Siberia,) July 12.—At 10 o'clock on the night of July 8 we landed at Listvenitchaia, on the western shore of Lake Baikal, and in anticipation were in Irkutsk, forty-two miles away. In a few moments we were reminded that one is never actually out of the woods in Siberia. dapper young officer came forward, touched his hat and said he would inspect our traps. With him was a burly soldier, wearing an ax in his belt. It took a solid hour to unchain, untie, unlock, unstrap and repack our things. The search was as rigid as if we were passing from one country to another, instead of merely crossing a district line. The officer was extremely courteous, and as we looked through a window into the baggage-room and saw other people's things tumbled about we though ourselves lucky. Now and then an obstinate lock or tough knot yielded to a soldier's ready ax, and it struck us that the authorities were looking for some special thing.

The pier has a gate opening onto the main street and here was an array of carriages and carts. We had sent to the tarantass station for horses, and by the time the in-spection was over the team was hitched. We rode along the river road for half a mile—Listvenitchaia stretches along the Angara—coming to a gate, where we showed the clearance paper given us by the inspecting officer. This paper was large and filmsy, after the manner of official papers and tickets in the Russian empire, where pasteboard is rarely used. We drove through a long, shambling, wooden a, lighted by flickering oil lamps, to emerge into a ing fog. The night was cold and gave us our first and only touch of chilling weather in Siberia. At each station we took copious draughts of hot tea. As day broke at 2 o'clock, the air grew milder, and at 6, when we were within eighteen miles of Irkutsk, the sun was in a melting

Signs of Godliness, but not of Cleanliness

As we neared the city we passed through three gates in the space of a mile. The soldiers were in evidence, and we not asked for our papers. The gatemen were old and had the look of pensioners. As a rule elderly men perform this service in Siberia. At last we caught sight of church this service in Siberia. At last we caught sight of church towers by the dozen and their size and style told us we were about over the rough part of our Siberian journey. There are two leading hotels in Irkutsk, the Deko and Russia. We had been told by Siberians that one was as bad as the other. That one is thoroughly bad we can testing. We doze to the Deko secured rooms and after the We drove to the Deko, secured rooms and, after the Siberian fashion, unloded our tarantass in the courtyard and left it there. A man in a dirty blouse escorted us up and a flight of dirty stairs into a dirty hall and to a room flooded with sunshine. Every ray of light assented the uncleanliness of the apartment. The floor was unswept, uncleanliness of the apartment. The floor was unswept, scattered with paper and dust, the tables bore water, beer and food marks, and the chairs, three of which were un-usable, because of broken legs, were thick with dust. The lookingglass was fly-specked and grimy and the curtains hung out of reach, were for ornament, not use. The single bed had its broken wire mattress replaced by two boards, these supporting a thin, dirty, hard mattress. No pillows or bed clothes, for which we gave our usual thanks. In one corner a wooden stool that had never known cleansing cloth since the day of its installation, held a big tin basin and pitcher, both much the worse for wear. A tin slop bucket that an American stable would not own was a side feature of this toilet outfit. But seven weeks of Siberia had rubbed off our outer layer of fastidiousness. We had to accept the situation or stay in the street. We were at the best hotel in Irkutsk, and it was offering us its best. But, alas, it could not give us what we craved most, a hot bath. The American woman to the rescue. Two of the largest samovars were ordered, to the amazement of the four dirty servants about us, and two extra pitchers of cold water. From the time if took to get all this it was evident there had been no such call for water at the leading hostelry of Irkutsk for many a day. Our order was finally filled and with our own soap, towels and brushes we man-aged our first samovar bath.

Irkutsk not Equal to Its Reputation.

Irkutsk has disappointed us. We expected too much. We had read that it was really a European city, wealthy, cultured and refined. To our view the word pretentious sizes it up. Seen from afar, churches, chapels and white buildings and the swift and gleaming Angara give the city an alluring aspect—another illustration of distance lending enchantment. The broad, unpaved streets are dusty in dry weather, dusty in a dense sense, and in wet a series of mud puddles. The sidewalks are wooden and badly kept. The buildings, aside from log houses, are built of brick, plastered and painted white. The day after painting one of these buildings attracts and holds the eye. A few weeks later it is an example of shabby gentility. There is every reason why Irkutsk should be attractive. It has a natursite on the banks of a beautiful river, and with a moderate display of public spirit could be made charm-ing. Despite the fact that the broad and deep river flows its doors, and water is to be had for the taking, water is a dear and scarce article, and is still hauled to the houses in the primitive methods of bygone days. The pub-lic baths are twenty minutes' ride from the main street and unclean, and otherwise unsatisfactory. As a resident of Irkutak advised me not to try them it is fair to assume that they are pretty bad. Still Irkutsk has no city debt, and judging by the proud bearing of the Irkutskian who gave me this fact, I imagine it will be some years before Irkutsk becomes clean and comfortable. Many of the buildings are of brick and three stories. The log houses are unusually large and one gets an idea that the 60,000 inhabitants have come to stay.

Well Supplied With Churches and Schools.

Irkutsk is the accepted capital of Oriental Siberia, and was founded in 1652. Here the Governor of the district lives and here are the central bureaus of the administration. The city has over twenty Russian churches, a Catholic and a Lutheran church, and two synagogues. In the suburbs are two cloisters. The forty city schools include military and technical institutions. There are many benevolent societies, a hospital, several hotels, an astronomical observatory, a library, club, bicycle association, a theater, open in winter, a geographical and medical society, an ordinary museum and a literary tri-weekly newspaper. Since the great Amur region became officially independent of Irknak, owing to the became officially independent of Irkutsk, owing to the business done with Vladivostok, Odessa and America, Irkutsk has lost much of its official and commercial prestige. As the American phrase runs it has seen its best days. On account of its tea business and as the government depot for Siberian gold, the city is still important in a commercial way. The custom receipts principally for duties on tea and Chinese silks, amount to $1,-125,000 a year.

The Pudlock the Main Stay of the Town.

Irkutsk is a city of padlocks. There are more padlocks on the shutters and doors of an Irkutsk store than can be found in an American city of 200,000. There are as many as three padlocks on some store doors and every lower story shutter bears from one to five. The padlock weighs from one to fifteen pounds. The popular size is five pounds and two and a half inches thick. The closing of a store is an affair of consequence. The heavy shutters are swung derous iron bars are put in place, the padlock is adjusted and locked and then comes the final and serious ceremony of locking the door. The door is shut, the bars are placed, the padlock is fixed and locked, and the verdant stranger thinks the closing operation is over. It is not. A piece of cord is drawn through the hasp of the padlock and the two ends are held against the door by a clerk or boy, while the proprietor melts a piece of sealing wax and sticks the ends of the string to the door. On the hot wax he places his private stamp.

A promenade on an Irkutsk business street after closing time shows the huge padlocks, the two lines of string and a fat dab of red wax as big as a silver dollar. In case sealing wax is dispensed with, the padlock is tied in a rag, the string being knotted in a peculiar way. The business man of Irkutsk has no faith in a stringless padlock. I learn that through the wax and rag medium the owner of a store knew if his lock had been tampered with in the

We had seen carriage drivers in all sorts of costumes and in skirts of varying lengths. Until we reached the city we had never met the limit in masculine petticoats. Here the skirts trail on the ground. But with all this style these knights of the whip are as conscienceless as their fel-low-drivers farther east. We rode several times, always with Russian acquaintances, and in all save one instance the driver sulked over his fare and demanded more. The satisfied man was a Christianized Buriat. NAMING THE BABY IN PERSIA

[Cincinnati Enquirer:] The naming of the child in Persia is made an event of great rejoicing and a time for th egathering of relatives. When the guests are assembled sweetmeats are eaten, and then the infant, in its swad-dling clothes, is brought in and laid on the carpet in the center of the room by one of the priests. Five names are written on as many slips of paper and placed between the leaves of the Koran; a chapter is read from this book, and then one of the slips is drawn at random. The name on the slip is the one the child has to bear through life, and the priest takes up the slip, pronounces the name in the child's ear and places the piece of paper in its clothes, child's ear and places the piece of paper in its clothes, Gifts and congratulations follow.

The custom in Japan is for the parents on the thirteenth day after its birth to take the child to the temple they attend, and the father gives three names to the priest, who writes each on a piece of paper. These are then shuffled about with certain incantations and thrown up in the air. The first that falls is the one chosen. This is then written by the priest on a consecrated piece of paper and given to the child's parents to preserve. The child then receives certain gifts, two of which are important. If a boy, two fans are presented; and if a girl, a pot of pomade, and in each case a packet of flax thread is added, which signifies good wishes and a long life.

Toothache Made Him Brave.

T WAS the toothache," said the veteran, according to the Cincinnati Enquirer, "that won me a reputation for daring at the battle of Bull Run. That was the only fight I was ever in where I didn't wish I could find a hole battle is nonsense, invented by people who have never been there, or old soldiers whose tongues get away with their memories. Our men and officers were as brave as any in the war, and made good records, but they all had the ague and longed for sick leave just about the time the bullets began to fly. But I had the toothache for two days before that battle, and if there is an aggravation on earth that will make a man want to bat his best friend in the face that is it.

"On the night before the fight I did not sleep a wink The old tooth got to jumping like a goat, and I couldn't have suffered more from an amputated leg. I was also furiously mad. I felt that I'd either got to bolt for the rear in search of relief or encourage some rebel to put a ball through my head.

"We'd been waiting in battle line for an hour, and the "We'd been waiting in battle line for an hour, and the boys had grown white and were all choked up. I had been entirely occupied with the old tooth, and the first thing I knew the fight was on. We were holding them in check, but that didn't suffice me. As I got hold of my gun and pulled the handkerchief off of my jaw I yelled out for the boys to follow, and we struck a whole brigade and whirled it around and sent it back half a mile. I felt that I could lick the whole of Lee's army for an hour or two. They told me that I yelled and cheered and dodged death a thousand times, but I remember nothing but the jumps of that tooth. When they stopped, or for what particular reason, I could never say, but after a couple of hours I came to myself, as it were, and was being complimented on all sides myself, as it were, and was being complimented or all sides and the jumps had ceased."

All the Pie He Wanted.

THE most unique reception tendered a returning volunteer was that which Mulvane, Kan., put up on the 11th inst. Private E. W. Phillips of Co. H. Tenth Pensylvania, had written home from the Philippines that he would give a month's salary for a piece of mother's pie. He said all the other boys in his regiment were in the same fix. Just before Phillips reached Mulvane the women of the town joined together and cooked a pie six feet in length and four feet wide. It was placed on a table in the center of the operahouse and all the people in town gathered to meet the returning soldier. The condition was made that he eat the whele pie that night. On threatening to re-enlist if the conditions of the contest were insisted upon, the town relented and volunteered to help him out.—[Omaha Bee.

Captured a Gun Single-handed.

The crews of these guns, numbering sixteen men, had been killed. He reached one of the cannon, turned it with terrific force upon the enemy, pulled the lanyard, and in the discharge of the piece there followed fearful slaughter. brave act inspired our men to such a degree that we were able to drive back the 'rebs' and save our two guns and 'Old Glory,' which waved above them."—[J. The Man Who Sunk the Alabama.

J AMES HEALY, an illiterate Irishman, fired the shot off Cherbourg, France, that sunk the Alabama. I was cook on the Kearsarge, the attacking vessel, at the time, and remember the instructions given Healy as well as though they had been uttered today. We got within range of the rebel, and Capt. Wińslow, our officer, surveyed the crew for a minute. He was meditating, I learned afterward, as to who should open the firing. He picked out Healy, an eld-time man-of-war's man, who was known to have a mighty trusty aim when not in his cups.

"Healy, fire the gun," he said. "Don't waste your shot,

"Healy, fire the gun," he said. "Don't waste your shot, but hit the rebsi under the starboard bow."

Healy murmured something like "To — wid yer instructions," but fired. The ball from an 11-inch gun, at a distance of a quarter of a mile, struck directly at the point where it was aimed. That was the shot that sunk the

At Hastings the vessel on the first day was besieged by visitors, all of whom wanted to see the man that fired the shot. He was missing. I was detailed to locate him, and found him hid in the forecastle, peacefully smoking his pipe. No amount of coaxing could induce him to come out. Even whisky failed. "I sin't no hero," he said, and refused to budge.—[Thomas J. Lynch in Philadelphia North American.

Business Progress in Manila.

S INCE the occupation of Manila by American soldiery there has been a manifest change in business methods for the better. This change is notable in municipal as well as individual matters of business interest, and with distinct city government it will be even more pronounced. License taxes, personal or otherwise, are collected without discrimination or favor and they have been extended to subjects hitherto unknown. Officials have acted upon the just proposition that the dog is a nuisance unless his owner helps to bear the tax burden.—[Manila Freedom.

An Effective Shot.

WITHOUT doubt the best shot that I saw fired during W the war—a shot that should go down in history—was fired from the Monitor into the Merrimac in their memorable battle off the coast of Virginia. For some time after the vessels met the Merrimac had been keeping up a persistent firing. The Monitor kept perfectly still until she got within good range, about 300 yards. Then the chief officer ordered her gunner to fire at the starboard bow of the Merrimac, the intention being to cripple the gun crew. Better aim was never made. The entire gun crew were killed. My brother was a member of that crew.—[J. W. McFarland in Philadelphia North American.

A Good Shot at Fort Moultrie.

C. L. WEEDEN, Past Captain, Cumberland Naval Veterans' Association, New Bedford, Mass.:

During the attack on Fort Moultrie, when I was an ensign on the monitor Weehawken, I saw a shot fired that saved our vessel and our lives, and did terrible havoc within the fort. During the night the Weehawken ran ashore. We lightened her as much as possible, but still she would not float. When morning came we were in a terrible pre-dicament, with the guns of Fourt Moultrie frowning on us half a mile away. Our only hope was that our gunner could hit some vital place in the fort, and by this means save us, or protect us from total destruction. He trained the 50-pound gun on the fort, and at the first shot reached her magazine, blowing it up and destroying all the enemy's ammunition. It was our salvation.—[C. L. ANIMAL STORIES.

Jamooz or Buffalo of Turkey.

O ANIMAL in Turkey or the Balkans, save possibly the sheep, holds so important a place in the econ of daily living as the buffalo.

This clumsy, uncouth beast, its dingy black hide almost destitute of hair and its ponderous horns low lying on neck and shoulders, is everywhere in evidence and everywhere highly respected. Buffaloes are particularly valuable in all swampy districts which the malaria renders almost uninhabitable even to animals. Indeed, buffaloes cannot live without the opportunity of frequently plunging and wal-lowing in mud and water. When not employed they may always be seen feeding in the swamps and lying in the muddy streams with barely their noses above the surface

Their great strength is turned to valuable account both for the purpose of plowing and dragging the ponderous home-made carts which no beast of lighter weight could possibly draw. They are usually driven or dragged by a rope attached to the horns or drawn through a ring in the nose, while their steps are guided by a goad—a long stick armed with a pointed piece of iron sharpened with a file.

They are good-humored beasts, and are frequently, in the Balkans especially, driven by young women, who the bankans especially, divided by an and plying the goad ahead carrying the rope in their hands and plying the goad with vigor and discretion.

A Remarkable Dog.

O NE of the summer residents of Bala has a dog that is the endless wonder of himself, his servants and all the countryside. It is a Chinese dog, but it looks like a pig t how of species. Its snout, its bristling, wiry hair, its carriage and voice are alike porcine; only its tiny tail does not curve laterally, as a pig's does, but vertically, like a pug's. It is strange to see the dog open its mouth to yawn, for this Proud of the strange creature, the man's butler takes it out for a walk every day. He is halted by any one who happens along, and then a dialogue like this takes place: "Yes, sir; that's a ay, what do you call that-a dog?" Chinese dog—very rare—only one of its kind in this country, sir." "Well, I'm glad of that. What is it worth." "Money couldn't buy this dog, sir." "Come here, Towser! Why, heavens and earth, it's got a black mouth, hasn't it?" "Yes, sir; pure black mouth and tongue—sign of breeding, sir." "Well, keep it chained up or some of the farmers around here will be making pork out of it. You wouldn't catch me owning such an animal." "No, sir; you couldn't own it. You couldn't buy it for $5000."

Then the dog's critic goes one way with a laugh of derision, and the butler and his charge go the other in great anger. The dog is particularly fond of Chinamen; it never hesitates to desert its kind master and follow them.—[Philadelphia Record.

DID you ever see a horse cry?" asked Herbert Tennent of a St. Louis Globe-Democrat reporter. "Many peole believe that horses do not weep, but those who have had much to do with these faithful creatures know that on several occasions they will shed tears, as well as express sorrow in the most heart-breaking manner. In the West, where the hardiness of the ponies causes the riders to almost overlook the necessity of providing for their needs, it is quite common when the weather is extremely cold to leave an unblanketed pony tied up for two or three hours when the temperature is nearly zero, and while its owner is transacting business or getting drunk. In this case the suffering is evidenced by the cries which are almost like sobs, and unmistakable tears freeze on to the cheeks like sobs, and unmistakable tears freeze on to the cheeks like icicles. When a horse falls in the street and gets injured the shock generally numbs the senses so much that it does not either cry or groan, but under some conditions an injured horse will solicit sympathy in the most distinct manner. I remember a favorite horse of my own which trod on a nail long enough to pierce its foot. The poor thing hobbled up to me on three legs and cried as nearly like a child in trouble as anything I can describe. The sight was a very touching one, as was also the crippled animal's gratitude when the nail was pulled out and the wound dressed."

A WOMAN residing in the West End had a remarkable experience with fourteen baby mice.

She went into the cellar to a secluded corner, where no one had been for some time, in search of an ice-cream freezer. She found it, and inside was a nest containing fourteen mice. One good-sized mouse was in with them, and, although frightened, would not leave the little ones. An old piece of tape reached from the bottom of the freezer An old piece or tape reached from the bottom of the freezer over the top and down to the ground. Mrs. B. went upstairs to look for some of the boys to help her take them out, but none of them was home, and so she mustered courage and determined to go down herself and turn them out. When she reached the freezer the light of the lamp she held in her hand shone directly on it, and she saw two big mice, each carrying a baby mouse. One was coming up on the inside and the other was going down on the outside. She was held spellbound at the curious sight, and did not offer to disturb them. She watched until every one of the fourteen babies had been carried to a place of safety.

Mrs. B. had a large mousetrap on the other side of the cellar, and so touched was she by the scene she had just witnessed that she took the trap upstairs and threw it into the fire.-[Albany Times-Union.

Bad Habit of a London Cat.

N A STRAND tavern, well known among members of the theatrical profession, is to be seen a cat which is habitually in an intoxicated condition. Music Kills a Horse.

M USIC caused the death of a beautiful three-year-old filly at Florence, Ala., the other day. A farmer drove his valuable young mare into town, and as he was driving up the principal street a brass band suddenly struck up its blatant music. The mare had never heard any sound like that before, and so startled was she that she dropped dead in the shafts of the trap. A veterinary surgeon who examined the carcass declared that the mare had died of heart failure, due to excitement, caused by the sound of the unaccustomed music of the brass band.—[Roanoke

SOME THINGS WESTERN SEEN THROUGH ? THE JAPANESE EYE.

By a Special Contributor.

UCH a queer picture I had of the United States! I am sure I do not know the why or how. Where there was not the eternal stretch of red brick, making sore the eye of the sun, there I saw-all this in my imagination, before I came to this land, you understand-a monstrous geographical blister, plastered all over with advertisements. And where I failed to see the advertisements I saw the atmosphere taking unto itself the tinge of a blue haze because of the wealth of profanity. When I saw that the houses of San Francisco were not arranged to spell out, in capitals, "CHEW PLUG TOBACCO," amazed. I knew, because I was told so, and read and studied "Murray's Physical Geography"—ahem!—that America was not wihtout natural scenery. But my understanding of it was that it was one of those things which would scare a fellow out of life, and make him treruble and blue, as in the very presence of an awful god, and which are called by the sophomores sublime.

The fault of it all, it may be, lies with some Americans themselves—those good friends of mine whom I had the pleasure of piloting through the places we love and very proud of at home and through the mazes of ruins which ald centuries, now quite dead and as pic-turesque as the dismantled castle, forgot to take along with them when they left us in a hurry. I remember once upon a happy, sunny day of spring, I took a party of five Americans, concerning whom I could not quite make up my mind, because they seemed to care a good deal for money, and at the same time they had the gentle mark of culture—these two things, the culture and the octopus-twining on money, do not go together in our country. I took them to a cascade behind the shrine of the guardian god of the Castle Town. A rather pretty waterfall, to be sure, slender as the grace of the young American lady of the party, and silvery white as if it fell straight out of the moon. . Wild flowers fringed both of its mossy banks with colors, and many of them were nodding their fragrant heads into the downward, hurrying You ought to have heard those people rave about water. Myou ought to have neard those people tave about it all. Naturally, I concluded that they had never seen a single flower in all their lives, nor a single waterfall. I was rather young then, and never thought that a set of gentlemen and ladies could fall in love with their own rhetoric till truth goes begging.

I was thinking of all these things, when, not many days ago, I stood on the bluff overlooking the Santa Monica Bay. Before me a stretch of mirth-mad ripples, and the sun of the Southern California, which knows so litle of the blindfolding clouds, was kissing it into a gilded brocade. Away, and very far, it swept till it was lost in that circular dream, which is called horizon, and which really is nothing at all but a cheat—but what a delicious fraud! Closer, below my feet, the sea charged upon the sun-yellow sands in a phalanx of white steeds; and there was a mighty scattering of jewels into the air. The atmosphere was, as it happens so often here, a perfect miracle of color. To my right, and where the foothills, like a gauze-veiled silhouette of a crouching tiger, threatened the sea, it seemed as if some angels were melting all the known gems and stars in a transparent furnace. Near the horizon, the tints were intense, warm, rich; toward the zenith they faded—not like your old coat at the elbow, but like the melting away of a dazgling vision of a fairy. And the superb sweep of the purple gray of the coast-line curving in like a crescent! Why, really, neither the Southern Pacific wharf—the most excellent thing, no doubt, for everything that makes money is excellent here—is it not, my good American? but as devoid of taste or humor as a black serpent crawling on your lady's silver plate-neither the Southern Pacific wharf nor that architectural nightmare, the bathhouse, did seem to be able to spoil the charms, at once dainty and sublime, of that evening at Santa Monica my innocent vision of the huge America of the days behind! Naturally, I smiled. I fancy that a Bostonian would smile somewhat like that in the gorgeous surprise of the kingdom of heaven-if he ever gets there, I mean. To be sure, the beauty that I saw belonged more, perhaps, to that evening than to the place; to the atmosphere than to the land and sea, and came upon me with such a keen emphasis because of the sharp contrast be-tween that old dream of America which I recalled and the sight which was before me. But still-

Not that it could in any way compare with, say the Inland Sea of Japan, or even the now-blasphemed Harbor of Hagi-no cameo-work of nature on the grim rocks, no handwriting of the ever-mourning, wailing ocean on the precipice, no rock-ribbed harp whereon the waves may play the anthem, no baby isles capped with a fan-tasy of pines, breaking the persistent blue, the white dots the picturesque junks-none of those things. But still! And then the people!

After all they are the most interesting sight—that is to say, to a Philistine like me.

"I do not see how a girl could go in bathing with her sweetheart. Have you ever seen a more ridiculous cos-tume? Anything as hideous as those suits? They are the invention of an imp, these bathing suits. Don't they exaggerate the slightest defect of figure monstrously?" said my companion. (As you see, then, I do not add any adjectives to her; some women become too charming for adjectives, just as some men become too great for "Hon." or even for simple "Mr." You don't think of saying Mr. Sakespeare, do you?)
"My understanding is," said I, "that they are here to bathe, and not exactly on a dress parade."

"How deliciously naive of you!" And her smile becoming very superior because of the world-wisdom which was in her, and which was so woefuly lacking in me, wandering over the far-away water; and, after a little while, as if for an anchorage, it came back to the sands of the shore, and the human flies who were sunning their laziness upon them.

All of a sudden, her eves halted. They became brighter, her eyes—I could see that—were full of piquancy as they dwelt upon the details of a bather not far from us.

"What do you think of her?" You must not think that the nonchalance of my tone cost me nothing, for that is not true. I could not keep my eyes from narrowing on the superb lines of her figure. I can never look at the works of Delacroix or Okyo with wide, open eyes. Doubtless—at least that was my thought—because of the an-cestors of such a girl as that dainty bather there came to be that famous declaration of the Bible: "The sons God saw the daughters of men that they were fair."

"Oh," said my companion, "she is quite an exception." "It seems that your bathing suit is a thing of con-science; it shows the beautiful in a girl—if there is any beauty in her at all—much better than Worth can hide the defect of the homely."

She shook her head-many things she has taught me; among them, how much meaning could be crammed into a single shake of the dainty head of a woman. "Ah! but a woman alone knows what a multitude of sins M. Worth

I watched—absorbingly, if you insist on my confes-ion—the girl bather. A woman, cursed with that ridiculous brake called common sense, would generally put abominable oil sack upside down on and over her hair. The young bather in question was gloriously crowned with that glory, at once silk, gold and gems, and it was curled into many a tendril, airy in its floating grace, but strong enough to throttle a male heart any time. With all that, my hand itched to pull her bald; for you see my blood, on things artistic, was thoroughly up, and those curls were the only thing that could possibly suggest anything artificial about her. At the time, heaven knows, I could not say that she used a curling iron; it might have been all natural—but still there was a little recound for that districtions of a marginizar to interest the state of the state of a marginizar to interest the state of a marginizar to interest the state of a marginizar to the state of a marginizar to the state of the state o ground for that dirty imp of a suspicion to tip-toe upon, and that was making me mad. I wished myself heartily that I were in Japan, where no woman or man is guilty of that atrocity, the curling iron. You may not understand all my enthusiasm. I will tell you the reason. Sir Edwin Arnold, while he was in our country, made a very shrewd remark. Said he, "We never take anything 'au grand serieux'—religion, life, death, or anything." Now he is not quite correct in that. There is one thing that we take seriously, much more seriously than this English word "serious" could mean. And that one thing is the Beautiful. All our national activity converges and di-verges to and from that center; it is the sun of which our ambitions are so many planets. When we say God, we mean the Beautiful. The time was when one who could immortalize a really beautiful bit of scenery, or the beautiful curve of a bird's flight, or the nod of a flower on a canvas, or cut in a piece of ivory a beautiful dream of a poet, or chisel out of bronze the image of a heaven-maid, was greater than the wealthiest man or he who taketh a walled city. That, then, is the reason why my heart beat so fast and strong at the sight of that objet d'art from God's own workshop.

She stepped off and on, heron fashion, on the chilly edge of the water, which kept up its silver race, up and away. She grinned at her two companions, and that timid audacity of hers—a pretty defiance flung between the teeth of the vast sea. Evidently she must have taken two, perhaps three, swimming lessons; and her friends, her mother and her aunts included, must have assured with a confidence of a prophet, that she was a superb swimmer-perhaps the champion swimmer-the champion lady swimmer of course, my dear, of the Coast.

A merry little shriek—the water flirted up to her knee. The little lady was desperate; and the foam arm was de-lighted to fling itself around her curve-rich waist. Her companions did not seem as bold as she. They screamed after her:

seems that that was the note of encouragement which was the only thing that was lacking to her reck-Why, the water swelled almost to her bosom.

"Look, look at her now-oh, dear!" An alarm of distress from my companion. To be sure, there was an alarming sight. It was the moment when the pretty face of the girl was turned shoreward to her companions. At her back, not far away, I saw a proud column of water, half white with foam and half reddish from seaweeds, tower itself, then calmly bend itself over like an enormous jaw. A second, and with that indescribable wail of the sea, it swallowed the pretty head of golden curls. Of course, there was a mighty upraising of the arms of her companions, and shrieks as well. All too late, The sea evidently took her to be a pretty top, so it spun her round a few times, just to see how beautifully she worked, and then, with a stately and graceful wave of compliment it ushered her upon the wet sands

What made me so ill at heart was that woe-begone ex-pression on her face. One might have said that she found herself all of a sudden forsaken of all the sweet dreams of love and forever. She might have walked out of the pages of Dante, and none would have seen any humor

"In the name of heaven!" exclaimed I, without really knowing what I said.

"But you seem to take a profound interest in her!" And my excellent companion found a huge humor in it all. explained I to my companion, "Well, I tell you," were a simple daughter of Japan sea! proud she would be, and how merry—thus with water streaming from her cascading hair! They cannot conceive of any grace more coquettish than those of a mer-maid. But it would seem that yonder young lady would die of shame because her hair is a little wet! Look!

how beautiful she would look if she would hold her pretty head high and become radiant after that caress of the

"She is unhappy"-still humorous at the girl's predicament—"because, don't you see, all her pretty curls are washed away, poor dear? Think what a long, tedious hour she must have spent upon them! It's enough to give anybody blues!"

"But see how her bathing suit clings to her figure much more faithfully than before. Upon my soul, she ought to be upon the canvas of Henner, or among the pages of Gautier; this Santa Monica is no frame for that marvel-ous complexion of hers, and that almost mythological perfection of her figure. I wonder if she takes no delight in all the superb gifts of Nature. Is she not aware, even,

of them, do you think?"
"I rather think not," was the wise comment. "Why it is very plain. You have seen it, as well as I. The only thing she was proud of was her curls. She lost now. Naturally she is not the happiest girl alive."

When the full meaning of my companion dispersed the haze of my brain, I was too tired to sigh.

Such, then, is the girl nature; such also is human na-

What the kingdoms of the world cannot buy; that for which queens would give all their jewels in exchange, is nothing to a girl to whom heaven was partial.

Not only a girl-but a man is a fool. Silk-hatted and white-kid-gloved civilization has taught us to be proud of a silk hat and kid gloves and the chic in every fold of our ladies' dresses. Talk about the coronation of the mental worth of man. It seems very much as if we do not seem to have even that Greek appreciation of the human form divine.

We walked through the crowd-as heterogenous a chaos as my vagabondage has ever witnessed. From the proof an European university to a digger in a gutter; from the queen of a drawing-room, upon whom Baden and Spa, as well as Tokio and Calcutta, might have smiled more than once, to the waitress in a restaurant with "popular prices." For those whose chief study is manpainters, movelists, statesmen, philosophers, poets and lovers—there can hardly be a better university than the summer beach at Santa Monica.

Good also for a physical wreck of a wealthy merchant, for the investor of money with much imagination, for the fool, whose other name is "good-catch;" for women, old and young, good and indifferent—but all this is what they and young, good and indicated told me; a mere hearsay, therefore.

The Price Went Up As the Wine Went Down

GOOD STORY is being told about a popular operatic tener, who was "approached" by certain gentlemen relative to a tour in Australia.

The colonials thought a bargain could better be struck at a time when the soul of the artist was joyful, and con-sequently a little dinner was arranged. It passed off in the pleasantest possible fashion, and after another bottle of Clos de Vougeet and a good cigar, business was resumed.

The artist suggested £ 100 a week for four representations weekly. The management, however, imagined they might do something better with another bottle, and Romanee Conti of 1870 was uncorked.

This, however, served to widen the views of the tenor, who thought £200 and three appearances a week about the mark. Another bottle brought the figure up to £300 and two representations a week, until at last, as it is wickedly reported, the meeting broke up at 1 o'clock in the morning upon the proposition by the vocalist that he should re-ceive £500 a week and not sing at all.—[Tid-Bits.

HOW TO MAKE THEM AMERICANS. VIEWS AND INTERVIEWS ON THE EDUCATION AND GOVERNMENT OF PORTO RICANS.

From Our Own Correspondent.

ASHINGTON, Oct. 3, 1899 .- With this letter I close my series on Porto Rico. I have found Uncle Sam's new island one of the most interesting parts of his possessions, and I believe in the end it will, in proportion to its size, be one of the most profitable. During my travels I have interviewed the leading Americans who have visited Porto Rico as to whether the island will pay or not as a part of our territory. So far I have not found one answer in the negative. Gen. Fred Grant, with whom I talked just before he left San Juan for the Philippines, was enthusiastic eyer Porto Rico, and he knew as much about the country and its inhabitants as any man who has ever visited. it. During his stay he rode over every part of the island on horseback, going from town to town and village to village. He visited every plantation of any size, and made the personal acquaintance of almost every prominent Porto Rican. sonal acquaintance of almost every prominent Porto Rican.

Some of his rides were extraordinary. At one time he made eighty-two miles in one night on horseback, his only com-

Stealings in All Departments

The stealings extended to all branches, and the people were worked in every possible way. In some of the towns I found the policemen going about the markets and laying assessments, of their own or the mayor's, I suppose, on the amount of vegetables and fruit which the peons had brought in for sale. The jailers in many of the towns have been found to have charged 20 cents apiece for the rations they have given the prisoners, whereas it is known that the rations thus itemized have cost each 15 cents or iess. School teachers have been allowed to charge certain classes of pupils, and they have, as a usual thing, sub-let their living-rooms to the government for school-rooms, making, in some cases, as much out of their rent as their salaries. The Normal School at San Juan, which has chiefly small children, and which is not a normal school in our sense of the word, has seventeen professors $3000 for recording a will. In fact, until Uncle Sam took possession of the government, it is doubtful whether there was an official in Porto Rico who was not making more or less more outside of his work. for a navy yard. As a station of this kind, it is important that the island should be essentially American in all of its interests. Its people should be made Americans as far as heart, head and pocket are concerned. The heart and pocket will go somewhat together, but the head will have to be a matter of education. Before we can make the Porto Ricans Americans in our sense of the word, we have got to give them our language and ideas. They must be taught to give them our language and teas. They must be taught the next generation, and that by American education. At present 90 per cent. of the Porto Ricans cannot read and write. They are densely ignorant, and having been so oppressed by the Spaniards, they have an antipathy to everything Spanish, and from now on will naturally lean toward every-thing American. These go per cent. form the working thing American. These 90 per cent. form the working classes. The other 10 per cent. are the property-owners and the governing class. They are Spanish in feeling and education, and it is they who wish to keep the Spanish language in the schools. I think this is a mistake. The Spanish language and literature are the key to Spanish thought and ideas, the very things we want to get rid of. Nothing but English should be taught, and English should be made the language of the people just as soon as possible. If Spanish were kept out of the schools, this would be accomplished in a very few years. The young Porto Ricans would become Americans in spirit and ideas; they would feed upon our literature and would probably be the most intensely patriotic of our people.

New Schools Very Important.

One of the brightest men I met in San Juan was the American Consul, Mr. Hanna. He told me that the only hope of Porto Rico was in the children and in English education. Gen. Kennedy has the same opinion. He believes in the organization of night schools as well as day ols, and says the island should be divided up into small school districts, and that the English language should be taught. He found the same condition of education existing as that I have described in a former letter. He visited schoolhouses everywhere, but nowhere found deaks nor any kind of school conveniences. I do not think a proper representation has been given as to the backward condition of education in Porto Rico. The reports of the Bureau of Education have been full of large words con-veying the idea that much more than the reality has been veying the idea that much more than the reality has been accompliahed. The Porto Ricans themselves, of course, are anxious to make as good a showing as possible. They put their best foot forward at all times, and when Secretary Alger was here, some time ago, they had the school children of San Juan come out to meet him. I don't know that the Secretary knew it, but the assembly included in fact all the school children who could be scraped together from all the schools, both public and private, in San Juan and also the surrounding towns. A photograph made of the review was quite impressive.

Carpet Baggers not Wanted. I doubt whether Uncle Sam can do much with the edu-cated Porto Rican, especially those who have been of the official class. The tax collectors and other political leeches who have been fattening off of the people for years cannot be taught to govern honestly. The keeping them in office, as has been done in some cases, is only changing the name of the government and not its character. In time the people will be educated up to our idea of a government, but until then we should consider that we have panion being his son, a boy of 17. He had traveled 115 miles by rail and horse the day before, but pushed right on in order to get through quickly. Gen. Grant told me he thought the island would be the garden patch of the United States, and that it would eventually be divided up united States, and that it would eventually be divided up into small plantations, owned by individuals and syndicates and by rich people who desire a delightful winter residence. He was enthusiastic over the climate and fertility of the soil. He liked the people, and told me he thought they would make good American citizens. He believes, I think, in a civil rather than military government, but does not think the Porto Ricans are as yet fit to govern them-

Gen. Robert P. Kennedy, the head of the Insular Com-mission, has the same opinion, although I do not know that he expresses it in his report. He, together with many others, thinks the island should have a government some-what like that of the District of Columbia, the chief officials to be Americans, appointed by the President. sistant Postmaster-General Heath, who has visited all parts of the island, expressed a similar opinion in a conversation with me, as have also many other prominent men.

Americans Should Handle the Money.

There is one thing very evident, and that is that Americans should handle all public funds and hold the chief offices of trust for some years to come. The Porto Ricans have been educated according to Spanish ideas of honor and financial responsibility. They have been taught that every public official can be bribed and can be moved by bribes. With them, in the past, justice has always been bought and sold. Judges and justices are still considered open to purchase, and the courts cannot be respected as long as natives are at the head of them. It is so with the other native officials. Nearly every one of them expects to charge for doing his duty when the doing it benefits any one out of whom he can squeeze money. The notaries public, for instance, so managed their offices in times past that many of them made as much as $10,000 a year. Gen. Kennedy tells of one who made more than $50,000 per an num, and says he heard of some who made more. According to law, the notaries have to draw up all real estate papers. They charge not only for their services, but also a percentage on the amount of the sales. Having mawill not deliver the original to the purchaser, but make him pay for a certified copy. They then hand the original deed over to the recorder, who charges for entering it, but who will not let any one look at the entry, rill charge for telling whether it is there and just what it is. Fees of this kind are common in all such transactions. A recent transfer of real estate cost the purchaser over $2000 for notarial and recorder fees. Another transfer, the amount of which was only $2000, cost in fees alone over $500. The recorders charge proportionate fees for all kinds of work, one recently demanding more than

and draw their salaries. The Department of Public Works has been costing Porto Rico in salaries alone $58,000 in Porto Rican currency, the courts and Department of Justice have been receiving $160,000, and other things in proportion. The priests, up to the beginning of the American occupation, were paid out of the government treasury, annually receiving $92,000 from that source, and this notwithstanding they charged such high (see for marriages that many people were unable to afford the ceremony.

"AMERICAN SOLDIERS EVERYWHERE

our possession of Porto Rico. Some co not realize that it is now and for all time a part of the United States. It is as much a part of the Union as Massachusetts or California, and the time may come when it will be one of the along lines contrary to ours. The children of these people ple to care for, and that their interests are above the 50,000 or 75,000 property-owners who have been molded along lines contrary to ours. The children of these people may be educated so that they will become Americans; it most important parts of the country. We should consider the island as an outlying defense or fortification. It will be one of the bases of operations in the defense of the last the bases of operations in the defense of the last they will be consider may be educated so that they will become Americans; it is doubtful whether the old will ever be so. At the same time the men sent down to take charge of the offices should not be of the carpet-bag class. The more important officials should be honest American business men—not broken-down, out-of-job politicians—and to them should be given the charge of all money-producing offices. I know such a policy would not be popular in Porto Rico, but it will undoubtedly tend to bring order out of the financial chaos which has prevailed there for years.

Among the most important things is the reorganization of the courts and of the laws. The laws should be adapted to those of the United States, and the system of justice should be the same. English should be the official language of the courts, and a jury system should be established.

English as the Porto Ricans Teach It.

I believe the Porto Ricans are anxious to become good American citizens. I think many of the better classes are already so in spirit, and if the tariff can be so arranged as to give the island mercantile advantages they will be more patriotic still. I saw American flags everywhere over the island. They are hung up in many of the parlors and sitting-rooms, and also in many of the storas. The Porto Ricans are trying to learn the English language, and every young man who has a smattering of it is teaching his friends. Some of the methods of teaching are peculiar, books having been published showing how the language may be learned with-out a teacher in thirty lessons. From one of these comes the following, from which you may see what the pronunciation of these future Yankees of the tropics may be if t it. I quote:

English.	Pronunciation.	Spanish.
What is your name?	Uat iz iua neim?	Como se llama Vd?
How old are you?	Ion ould aa iu?	Que edad tiene of this?	Uat iz ze prais ov zis?	de esto?
It is very dear.	It iz veri dia.	Es muy caro.
I will give you a	Ei uli giv iu el	Yo la dare un enough.	dola. Zat iz natt inaf.	TO I THE REAL PROPERTY.
Speak slowly.	Spik slouli.	Habla despacio.
You speak too fast.	Iu spik tu fast.	Vd habla muy lingere.
This is a fine	Zis iz ei fain	Esta es una casa bonita.

They will find few discomforts, and will see more curious things in a four weeks' trip than they can see in Europe in six months. The steamers now take you from New York to San Juan in about five days. The distance is about fourteen hundred miles, and the sea, after you pass Cape Hatteras, is remarkably smooth. At San Juan you find a fairly good hotel, and there are places where you can stop comfortably over night at almost any town on the island. If you are a good horseman you can get a native pony and go from place to place in the saddle. Your steed will carry you along as gently as though you were on a rocking-horse. It will take you through avenues of cocoanut palms; it will carry you through miles of coffee plantations and into regions where you will see a luxuriance of vegetation not visible outside the tropics.

If you are an amateur photographer you will find snap shots of all kinds at every turn and on every road, but you will have to be careful of your lights. The air in Porto Rico is full of moisture. It has what is technically called light interference, and there is a peculiar haze which makes photography difficult. During my travels I met ane of the photographers of the War Department, and got the benefit of his experience. He told me that he had made thousands of exposures, and that it was some time before he discovered the exact stops and times to get the best result. He says that the light is so strong that the glare spoils the photograph if it is not carefully made. It is best to use a small diaphragm and expose slowly. The best stops are thirty-two and sixty-four, and the best time from one-twenty-fifth to one-fourth of a second. One must be very careful of his plates. They should be wrapped in tinfoil and not left long in the plate holder. Users of films should buy tropical films, and keep them wrapped in oiled silk. I have used films and have had good results. Porto Rico is a good place for moonlight photography. The moon is very bright, and beautiful effects are to be had by night, the photos showing the outfines of the hills and roadways.

A Word as to Outfits.

The traveler need not worry much about his outfit. He can wear almost the same clothes that he wears in the summer at home, although it is well to bring an overcoat, for the nights in the mountains are often cold. The man who intends to ride much on horseback had best bring his own saddle and bridle. The average Porto Rican of the country sits upon his pony as upon a chair, with saddle baskets on each side and with his legs around the neck of the pony. He uses no stirrups, but notwith-standing this his method of sitting is quite as comfortable as ours. One needs a good waterproof, rubber leggings and an umbrella. He should have a blanket for interior trips, and insect powder will often help his slumbers. As to food, he can get anything in San Juan that he can get in the United States, and this is so also as to wines and liquors. He will never be out of reach of Porto Rican rum, which will serve in case of an attack of cold, and which will cost him about one-tenth what he would pay for it at home. Good bread is to be had everywhere. is made by the town bakers and sold at so much a loaf. The meats of the interior are tough, the chickens are small, but the eggs are generally good.

As to the language, if you do not understand Spanish, it is well to take along a phrase book of Spanish and English, although this is not essential. You will meet American soldiers everywhere, and you cannot find a town where you will not be welcomed by the postal officials. In most places the Americans will put themselves at your disposal and guide you about the country, showing you the sights.

The best way to do it is to take everything you think you may want on the ship with you to San Juan. There is no extra baggage to be paid on the steamer, and a couple of porters will carry your trunks and bags on their heads from the ship to the hotel, where you can leave them while you make your trips through the interior. Bicycles can be used in many parts of the country, especially on the military road and its branches. The weather, however, is somewhat hot for wheeling, and the bicyclists I have seen have generally seemed pretty well tuckered out.

Travel is everywhere safe for American men, and I think women could travel alone without danger on any of the public roads of the island. As to health, the countries in the countries of the cou try is quite as salubrious as any part of North America, the only warnings necessary being to avoid the night air and overexertion under the tropical sun. Those who wish may make the trip cheaply. In addition to the steamship fare, it need not cost them more than $5 per day, while parties by traveling together could make the average rate still less. Altogether, I doubt whether there is a place where the American can get more pleasure, health and profit from a trip than in Porto Rico.

F222-2-22 THE TRAINED NURSE. WHAT A PATIENT IN A HOSPITAL SEES HER DO. By a Special Contributor.

HAVE seen a fluffy-haired blonde, pretty to look at, and in all the innocence of young maidenhood, gently running her hands through the kinky hair of as dark an African as I ever saw.

I have seen a brunette, through whose dusky eyes streamed the light of purity, with her arm around the neck of an out-and-out "hobo," smiling sweetly in his acc and uttering words of sympathy.

Both blonde and brunette were young, handsome, and of fine figure, yet one glance in their faces showed them to be pure and modest.

This is no pipe dream. Listen.

Not long ago, through some mishap or other, I got tangled up in my anatomy some Joaquin Valley weather.

My temperature rose like a Fresno thermometer on a July day until it registered roc. I was ill, and knew it. With no money, and unable to work, I was in despair. Finally, through the intercession of a friend, I was taken to the through the intercession of a friend, I was taken to the County Hospital, where my troubles began.

"Fever," said the doctor; "take him to Ward 6."

I was ushered into a clean and neat hospital ward, the first I had ever been in, and introduced to the nurse, a very pretty girl of about 25, dark eyes, finely feathered, and the figure of a Diana. She stuck a little glass thing in my mouth, and after a few minutes looked at it, made a mark on the chart, and told me to follow a colored attendant into the hathroom. Here I was stripped put into the hathroom. tendant into the bathroom. Here I was stripped, put into hot water, and given such a scrubbing that for once I be-lieve I was actually clean. After being thoroughly dried in the tub and the water drained off, a folded sheet was loosely thrown over me, and the attendant disappeared. In a few moments the door opened, and Miss Brunette stepped in. I drew up my limbs, ducked my head as low as I could, and said, in frozen horror:

"Madam, what are you doing here? Don't you know it's

"Madam, what are you doing here? Don't you know it's the fever I have—not the chills?"

"Oh, that's all right," in silvery tones, accompanied by a winning smite. "Your temperature is quite high, and it must be brought down by a cold bath. They only allow the nurses to give them; you'll get used to it."

And then she turned on the cold-water tap.

With a towel she rubbed me—limbs, breast and back.

Cha put chunks of ice on my head, and threw the water

She said it was. But it was warmer than new milk to me. My head was getting so hot that the ice on it melted as though it had been in an oven. I know that first bath increased my temperature 10 deg., sure. However, it was soon over, and I found out that a fever ward in a hospital is no fit abiding place for Mrs. Grundy.

I got used to it. That first experience was enough. I came to worship that nurse for her many kind attentions, and determined when I got up and about to let the pe ple know what angels of mercy these nurses are, the arduous labors, and the many petty annoyances they have to put up with, and all the time with face serene and a sympathetic smile on their lips. Now, let us see what they really do, what I have actually seen them do. Off to the north, and in the same beautiful grounds as is the hospital, stands a large, airy, red-stone building. This is the Nurses' Home, where for two years, the length of their training and study, they must sleep and eat. The rules governing them while there I know nothing of, but they are probably severe and stringent. I do know, however, the rules governing them in the fever ward of the hospital, and I presume the same regime is followed in the other wards.

She must report for duty at 6 a.m., and her first work. is to examine the charts kept by the night nurse (one man to several wards) to see how her patients rested during the night. She then takes the temperature and pulse of all the patients, entering it upon the charts, gives them their liquid nourishment, and administers the medicine prescribed by the physician in charge. Here is a patient convalescing, and mutton broth must be prepared for him. The ice-caps are now looked after, two to each patient, on head and abdomen, and all through the day ice must be chopped for their refilling, which averages, perhaps, each hour and a half, over a hundred pounds being broken in the course of the day. Then comes the changing of the the course of the day. Then comes the changing of the bed clothes from the heavy night blankets to the lighter clothing of the day. Sheets, pillow slips, all are changed daily. Dextrous? Why that fever nurse could take a sheet from under a man, put a fresh one in its place, change all the other bedding and fold and put away the blankets quicker than Star Pointer ever dared pace a mile. The bed freshened, so must it be with the patient. With basin, wash-rags and towels, each patient's face and hands are carefuly washed and dried. Some of the patients an far recovered as to be able to be about are tients, so far recovered as to be able to be about, are already up and out in the grounds. Their beds must be made, and Miss Nurse goes at it with a will. I have slept in the luxurious couch of the wealthy and in the beds of the cheaper lodging-houses of the country. I have seen chambermaids galore putting bumps and lumps into mattresses of all makes and patterns, but I never saw the deftness, the neatness, the aptness which a hospital nurse puts into the simple process of making a bed. Not a wrinkle, a crease, nor a lump. And all this time there are calls for the use of from two to five bed-pans, which the nurse must put in place, empty and disinfect.

Do you want her job? Wait. It is now 7:15 o'clock.

Breakfast. Miss Nurse is off duty for three-quarters of an Eight o'clock a.m.

Eight o'clock a.m.

A screen is thrown around the patient in the further bed. Sponge and bottle and towel are brought from the pantry, and the sick one is given a thorough, refreshing, alcohol sponge bath. Massage must be used on the parts most in contact with the bed, to prevent bed sores. The entire body is gone over, and the patient generally falls into refreshing sleep. Each patient is treated in the same way, temperature and pulse taken and recorded, and, nearly always, one or two are found with temperature as nearly always, one or two are found with temperature so high that a tub bath in water filled with cracked ice is necessary. The patient is carried to the bath, already prepared, by two male attendants, with the customary folded sheet around him, and for fifteen minutes the nurse must rub him, keep ice to himhead, and pour water in his face. He is then wrapped in blankets, given a hot drink, and nature does the rest.

Every two hours temperature and pulse must be re-corded, and liquid nourishment and medicine given. Every two hours some one must have a bath. All this time the nurse is flitting here and there, a smile on her face, talking pleasantly and sympathetically to all, and incidentally blazing for herself a sure path to the sweet hereafter.

So it goes. The dull monotony of the work is most irksome, and anything but pleasant, yet the smile is just as sweet and winning, the cool touch of the hand on brow as refreshing, the words spoken as pleasant, toward the gathering of darkness as at break of day.
Six o'clock p.m. Off for the night.
But this is not all. Now comes study. During the terms of the Medical College, nine months in the year, each nurse must attend at least one lecture a week, besides lectures at the home. Materia Medica and Nursing sides lectures at the home. Materia Medica and Nursing are taken up and studied during the evening hours, class are held the same as in schools, and examinations held the subjects studied.

In the hospital are fourteen wards, but some are grouped, so that each nurse must serve four weeks each year in each ward or group. There is the contagious ward, where the nurse must take even more pains in personal cleanli-ness than the physician in charge; the consumptive ward, where the filth from the lungs must be cleaned and disinfected; the insane ward; the surgical ward, where the nurse must be in attendance on all operations performed, no matter of what nature, and lend assistance to the surgeons at any time, too; the ravings of the delirious, some-times most horrible, must be listened to with equanimity; times most horrible, must be listened to with equanimity; there are the petty complaints of the patients, aye, a thousand and one mischievous annoyances, which must be met and warded off with pleasant words.

And what is their salary?

From what I saw I though they must get at least $100 a month. Heaven knows they are worth it. But during their first year they get the princely sum of $5 a month, and the second year their wages are doubled. Think of it. Out of a salary that Croesus might envy they must furnish their hospital uniforms and all their wearing apparel. One Sunday off a month and a half day off each week. Twenty-seven days of drudgery, twelve hours to the day, 324 hours, for $5 to $10—less than 1 1-2 to 3 cents an hour. Do you want to be a nurse?

I am told, in spite of all this sickening work, that after

Do you want to be a nurse?

I am told, in spite of all this sickening work, that after the first month the girls like their work. I know that there are more applicants than positions. It is the future they look forward to. At the end of two years they are graduated as experienced nurses. Nurses from this hospital, I learn, are in great demand for private nursing, as their course embraces more fully all branches of nursing, as being the only hospital handling infectious diseases. After graduation they receive their earthly reward, being nearly always employed at a salary of from $20 to $25 a week?

graduation they receive their earthly reward, being nearly always employed at a salary of from $20 to $35 a week. When I heard this I felt better.

I am an old man now. I have one regret. I am sorry I am not married, with an unmarried boy of about 25. Knowing what I do of these angels of mercy, I would get my boy sent to this hospital on some pretext or other. I would wish him exceedingly fascinating, a regular lady-killer. I know he would get "stuck," and it might happen that I would have one of these bright-eyed, strong-limbed, steady-nerved girls for a daughter. Ah, me! My heart palpitates with such foolish air castles.

All hail, the nurse-girls. WILL R. PHILIPS.

rrett's Sketch of Admiral Dewey.

HE Hon. John Barrett, whose lecture in this city last week gave to the people of Los Angeles ample evidence of his knowledge of American interests in the Far East, has presented a sketch of Admiral George Dewey which is based upon his long association at Manila with the victorious fleet commander. He disclaims for his work any pretense of its being an extended biography of the foremost man of the recent war, and says that it is merely an attempt to give an adequate presentation of his char-acter and personality. Mr. Barrett hastened to Manila as soon as he was relieved from his diplomatic duties at Bangkok and reached the Philippine capital soon after the naval battle. He remained there as correspondent for a number of American newspapers until last March, and during the whole of the ten months' time talked with Admiral Dawey almost every day. He explains in the preface that the book is based upon the notebook which he kept during all the time of his stay in Manila, and that, although most of it is new, some portions have already appeared in printed articles over his name and in addresses and interviews which have been quoted in the

In Mr. Barrett's book his expressions of praise of Admiral Dewey seem to have been inspired by sincere admiration and affection, but they have not always been controlled by good taste. Admiral Dewey's personality seems to have called forth invariably the friendship and the loyalty of the men who have been intimately associated with him, and it was a part of Mr. Barrett's task to portray this side of the admiral's character, as it was a graceful thing also to express his own evident leal affection and admiration. But with a little more care devoted to his work he certainly ought to have been able to do this without bestrewing his sentences with superfluous adjectives whose effect is to cheapen the sentiment which he wishes to express. And also, if he had given a little more critical cafe to his task he might have been able to prevent the reader from feeling that he was anxious to make his ma-terial fill a book as large as his publishers wanted.

Aside from its blemishes of form and finish, Mr. Barrett's sketch presents much that is timely and of interest and value. It is a book that would be of especial benefit to those people who either openly say or privately think that Admiral Dewey won his great victory mainly by virtue of the weakness of his enemies, and that he does not deserve so much credit for it after all. Mr. Barrett shows that in his preparations for the conflict-he quotes Admiral Dewey as saying that the battle was really fought in Hongkong Bay—in his previsions of all possible eventualities, in his courage, in his complete grasp of the situation, and in his ability to carry out his plans, he is worthy of all the credit which has been given to him. Mr. Barrett lays much emphasis also upon the great burden which was upon Admiral Dewey's shoulders during the long months of waiting after his signal victory. He ef-fectively answers the complaint which some have made that Admiral Dewey ought to have sailed away after the destruction of the fleet, by showing that such a course was utterly impossible, and in all human probability would have made of no use the battle he had won. The book's greatest value is in the light which it throws upon Admiral Dewey's occupations, as upon a rock of defense for his country, during the months which followed the destruchis country, during the months which followed the destruc-tion of Montojo's fleet, when he was keeping his ships in fighting trim and ready for whatever might happen, spending sleepless nights planning fights with Admiral Camara, winning the friendship and good will of the British captain, Chichester, of the Immortalite, managing the Germans by sending to Admiral von Diedrichs how a frozen leg of mutton and again a message that he is ready to fight.

Olive Schreiner on the South African Question

very timely book is a small volume by Olive Schreiner on the Transvaal trouble and the relations between South Africa and England. It, also, bears the signs of having been hastily written and sent out from the author's pen without any revision whatever. It is sadly marred by these flaws, which is a great pity, for it is a piece of moving eloquence, coming from a heart full of passion-ate protest and appeal, the sort of thing which, if delivered in the spoken word by an orator of personal magnetism, can work up vast audiences to a pitch of frenzy. It is written from the South African point of view, by one who feels that the Boers have much right on their side and that England, in pushing on to war, is committing as great a mistake as when she drove the American colonists to take up arms against her. The author looks at the matter also from the standpoint of South Africans of English birth who love their mother country and are bound to it by ties that appeal to much that is fine and high in the human heart. The little book does not aim to give much of that material information about the question at issue which is much hungered for nowadays on all matters. The author looks at it from the standpoint of human feeling, and its pages are one long, eloquent, and passionate cry against th the criminality of the impending conflict. Incidentally. one learns a good deal about South Africa that he might not get from books treating the subject in a more pracand hard-headed way. He sees through its pages the several States of South Africa are on the verge of experiencing, through the identity of their interests and the intertwining of their families, that solidarity of feeling which makes a nation, and between the lines he reads that she believes the threatened conflict will be likely to strike out that spark of national consciousness which would have its inevitable end in the setting up of a new nation. The book gives also a clear and concise view of the problem, from the South African standpoint, which the Boer republic has manfully tried to solve. And her treatment of it shows that the question has sunk deep in bitterness into the hearts of most South Africans who are not recently from England. The typographical appearance of the book has been very much marred by an attempt to break up the marred by the interval of the book has been very much marred by an attempt to break up the marred by the interval of the book in the book in the marred by the second of the book in the break up the marred by the second of the book in the book in the break up the marred by the break up the break up the break up the marred by the book in the boo attempt to break up the pages by the introduction of un-necessary and annoying subheads.

n and the Unicorn."

The initial tale in Richard Harding Davis's new book of short stories, and the one from which it takes its title, appeared last summer in Scribner's Magazine, and the appeared last summer in Scribner's magazine, and the other stories in the book have been published from time to time during the last three years in the same periodical. "The Lion and the Unicorn" is a pretty enough little love story, the sort of thing in which Mr. Davis is at his best, and the sort of thing which appeals to young girls and to very young men, who are not yet old enough in years and in knowledge of life to recognize, or to resent, the trail of melodrama which wanders all over Mr. Davis's work. To minds more grizzled the most interesting thing about his stories is a certain fascinating mystery in the way he always manages to make every sentiment which he touches into false no metter how true and sincere it may he always manages to make every septiment which he touches ring false, no matter how true and sincere it may be in real life. "The Lion and the Unicorn" is about a young American playwright who went to London to sell his plays, his lady-love, who went to London to paint miniatures, a young English actress, and the course of true love. "The Man With One Talent," which was first published in those seething days which preceded the war with Spain, sounded very much better before we knew as much about the Cubans as we learned during the summer months of last year, and, although it has in it some more subtle touches than Mr. Davis is wont to use, its essentially theatrical character is more glaring now than it was then. "On the Fever Ship" is an account of the hallucinations which filled the fever-crazed brain of a young officer while a transport slowly carried him from Cuba to New York. "The Vagrant" and "Their Last Cuba to New York. "The Vagrant" and "Their Last Ride Together," the former a love story whose scene is laid in the West Indies and the latter an incident of Dr. Jameson's raid on the Transvaal, complete the book. The Jameson's raid on the transval, complete the book. The illustrations are excellently done, by H. C. Christy, who has taken the place heretofore held by Charles Dana Gibson, because the latter's contract with Life obliges him to draw for that periodical only.

'A Short View of Great Questions.'

A very dainty little book of some seventy-five pages, by Orlando J. Smith, has to do with matters of such mighty import as the theory of creation, the claims of materialism, and the questions of whether or not man has an immortal soul, and, if he has, whether it was created at his birth or had been pre-existent through all the eternity went before. The author gives brief consideration to the theory of materialism, that man's life begins with this birth and ends with the death of his body, then to the theory of theology, that man's soul is created with his body, and then turns his attention to the theory of reincarnation, that man has an immortal soul, which existed before his birth and survives the death of his body, which has existed in many bodies, and will exist in many more. This last theory is his own belief and he argues in its favor with much dignity and force. Necessarily, he cannot bring for its establishment the sort of proof which the modern mind, trained in the modern scientific methods, alone finds convincing. His arguments are based on metaphysical grounds, and therefore do not carry the weight which arguments of that sort did a century ago. Nevertheless, his little book will be interesting to those people, and there are many of them, who would like to believe in the theory of the reincarnation if they could find any convincing proof of its truth.

It is a pretty and interesting comedy of the eighteenth century which J. C. Snaith, the author of "Mistress Doro-thy Marvin" and "Fierceheart, the Soldier," has written under the title of "Lady Barbarity." It is told in the first person by Lady Barbara Gossiter, a beauty, a toast, and a wit, nicknamed "Lady Barbarity" by all the London beaux because they said she was so cruel and had no heart. But she did have a heart, after all, and she the soldiers as they were taking him to London to be hanged for treason. Her efforts led through many exciting adventures and much comedy and a little tragedy, and the whole story makes a spirited and entertaining tale, which is well and delightfully written.

"Christian Selence."

A thin volume by J. M. Buckley bearing the title, "Christian Science, and Other Superstitions," is mainly a selection from his work, published some years ago on "Faith Heating, Christian Science and Kindred Phenomena," although it contains, also, a supplementary chapter prepared for this book in which he discusses some of the moral, scientific and legal phases of the subject which have recently arisen. He draws attention to the distinc-tion between "Faith Cure" and "Christian Science," which the ordinary reader is apt to overlook, and shows clearly in what each one consists and how they differ. He also devotes some attention to the relations of each of these forms of healing without medicine to the civil law and outlines the kinds of cases in which the law can step in and compel the attendance of regular practitioners. He treats very fully in one of the chapters the wonderful recoveries which the votaries of the two respective beliefs claim to have experienced and explains how they were brought shout.

The Steery of the Soldiers.

In their Home Reading Book Series, under the title of "Uncle Sam's Soldiers," the Appletons have published a book by Oscar Phelps Austin, which tells everything about the life of a soldier in the United States army, about the methods of feeding and clothing and teaching and drilling him, of transporting him by sea and by land, and of utilizing him in war, which the most inquiring mind need care to know. The story is all told in the conversations of the principal characters in the book, while they travel about and visit Washington and West Point and army camps, and all other places at which information on the subject can be gained. Hiustrations and diagrams of all manner of things, from the various uniforms used in the army to the manner of building of a pontoon bridge, add to the interest of the book.

His most recent book, "Snow on the Headlight," was recently reviewed in these columns. Before he began the writing of books and peems he was engaged in railroad work and for some years was an engineer on the Denver and Rio Grande Railroad. He has traveled extensively over nearly all of the western roads and his acquaintance with railroad affairs is wide and intimate.

Literary Life says that a certain American patent medicine firm offered Rudyard Kipling $1000 for a poem of eight stanzas, two lines, which it makes out was at the average rate of about $4 for each letter. Mr. Kipling positively refused to sing, even by implication, the praises of their cure-alls.

Ian Maclaren will contribute to the Ladies' Home Journal a series of articles upon modern church methods. His first article will be called "The Candy Pull System in the Church." He will afterward write on "The Mutineer in the Church," and later will ask and answer the important question, "Should the Old Minister Be Shot?"

Brown & Co., Boston, will publish immediately "Ralph Waldo Emerson," by Edward Everett Hale, a study of Emerson not simply as a philosopher, poet, reformer, but as a strong, simple, unaffected, all-round man. To this is added two early, almost unknown, essays of Emerson, "The Character of Socrates," and "The Present State of Ethical Philosophy."

The author of the famous "Mr. Dooley," Finley P. Dunne, has joined the literary forces of the Ladies' Home Journal, and will create this fall in that magazine a new character, called "Molly Donahue: who lives across the street from Mr. Dooley." "Mr. Dooley" is the family's most intimate friend and is called upon frequently to run across and set matters straight.

It is marvelous—the work which that boy has done; the more you read the "Jungle Books" the more wonderful they grow. But Kipling himself does not appreciate them as he ought; he read "Tom Sawyer" a couple of times when he was coming up out of his illness and said he would rather be author of that book than of any that has been published during its lifetime. nswers to Correspondents.

C. L.: You ask me first what color would be best for the outside of your cottage. As it is already white, I would undoubtedly leave it so. There is nothing more attractive for a country house, situated among trees in this climate, than a good, creamy, white. The blue, skimmed-milk-white, which is sometimes used, is another matter entirely. I am told that this secondrate looking white is the result of using a poor quality of paint, or a misplaced economy which grudges a sufficient number of coats to cover the redwood, and I imagine that this is the real secret of there not being more white houses in Southern California; it is the most expensive finish that can be given a frame house. In regard to awnings, I am inclined to say to you to use the green and white stripes. Given a white house, a green roof and green and white awnings, with the natural surroundings of green lawn and trees; the result is a picture for any one to exult in. But, alas! the greens seem to fade in our hot sun, and when their pristine freshness is gone they are anything but beautiful. In Los Angeles you can find a rather broad stripe of dark blue alternating with a clear white, that is, I mean, there are no blue threads running through the white. I know that this will stand a good deal of sun, as I have used it for porch chairs. It is very clean and stylish-looking and would be pretty with your white house. With these awnings I would carry out the blue and white idea in porch furniture as described in The Times of August 20, adding to this some of the adjustable porch chairs that are so simple and inexpensive, and yet so easy and artistic looking. Substitute your awning goods for whatever they may be covered with.

Could you not enlarge the opening between the parlor and front bedroom? Merely remove your door and make the opening twice the size it is at present. This could be done with very little expense and need not spoil your wall coloring in any way. When you have thus opened up this bedroom with its handsome bay window, into your parlor, fit it up as a library, and I think you will get a spacious and beautiful effect, especially as your dining-room opens into the parlor also with arch. The light blue walls will go with the terra cotta very effectively, unless you wish to recolor this room, making it terra cotta like the parlor.

For both of these rooms I would use full curtains of white muslin, or point d'esprit net, ruffled. Have hung outside of these str paint, or a misplaced economy which grudges a sufficient number of coats to cover the redwood, and I imagine that this is the real secret of there not being more white

Country House-A Chints Parlor.

Country House—A Chints Parlor.

G. L. T.: You tell me you have a large parlor with jutting bay window, an Axminster carpet in green, and some upholstered furniture—once very handsome; now somewhat worn. I can think of nothing more fascinating than such a room as you describe fitted up entirely in chintz. This chintz, when properly selected, gives an air of elegance to a room which is beyond anything else I have ever seen used, at the same time it imparts a look of coziness and comfort. The glaze upon its surface renders it extremely durable, and it is hard, too, on this account to soil it. I would curtain all of those large windows with chintz curtains lined with a plain color of sateen, and hang under them either full curtains ruffled of white muslin or sash curtains. Cut the chintz for the bay window to fall slightly below the sill. The curtains for the other windows I would let come to the floor, catching them all back with stitched bands a little more than an inch wide, of the chintz.

A piece of Turkish embroidery would look well on your polished table, which I would place near one end of the room. It should have a handsome reading lamp on it, with a shade which emphasizes or contrasts well with the color of your room. I have seen a chintz which has large yellow roses on a white ground, with a good deal the color of your room. I have seen a chintz which has large yellow roses on a white ground, with a good deal of green foliage. This would certainly carry out the scheme of your yellow cartridge paper and green carpet. Would your green corduroy couch not be much prettier without its cover, which has terra cotta in it?

Upholster your furniture with the chintz, picking it out here and there with a piece in dark wood or wicker, or a stool covered with plain green.

You realize, I suppose, how prettily it breaks the stiffness of a room to introduce here and there a wicker stool with a large, soft cushion of plush tied on it. The pretty little oriental taborette has now become so common that it must be used with discretion, but it always makes a it must be used with discretion, but it always makes a good stand for a palm. A stool, however, is its own ex-cuse for being, and is ever useful. To combine beauty with utility is one of the great secrets of artistic furnishing. I think I would cut my white muslin curtains slightly below the sill in the dining-room, and simply ruffle them down the front edge, not across the bottom. Of the length to make them I cannot give you reliable advice, however, as I do not know the style of your windows.

A Blue and White Bedroom.

A pretty scheme for a blue and white bedroom, if of pale blue, is to find an attractive paper with a white ground having blue figures or flowers on it. Paint the woodwork the exact color of this figure, and tint the frieze and ceiling a slightly paler blue. If the ceiling has once been papered you can use a plain paper in the tint you wish. Put matting or a blue filling on wour floor, with rugs of blue and white. Curtains of plain blue India silk hung over white muslin, at the windows, and white furniture, with perhaps a brass bed, would complete this room. I would keep the bed drapery all white, and would make a spread of white dotted muslin, like the curtains, having a deep ruffle around three sides of it.

A Rose Bed Chamber.

S. H.: You write that you wish me to give you a scheme for the "daintiest bedroom imaginable." I will therefore send you a design for a "rose room," which would, I think, have satisfied even Mme. de Pompadour. As you have a bay window which opens onto an upper balcony it will be easier to render this room completely charming. Medieval furnishings are grand and saggestive, and are well in their way; a room in delft blues is distinctly artistic, a Dutch bed chamber is quaint and attractive, but when a woman's boudoir is in question there is nothing, to my mind, which so suggests the very essence of femininity as a damask rose. I would therefore take this flower for my symbol in fitting up my room, and use its delicate pink bloom for my coloring. Beginning with your walls, have them tinted the pink of the sea shell. You know what a warm, soft, pale pink that is. You cannot secure this delicious shade in anything but the water color of calcimining. The most expensive papers all contain some tones that are deeper than you wish to use here. Have your white woodwork given an ivory finish and place your picture mold down far enough to secure a deep frieze. For this use a paper frieze of garlands of pale pink roses. If you have to send far and wide for it, it will be worth your while to send far and wide for it, it will be worth your while to send far and wide for it, it will be worth your while to send far and wide for it, it will be worth your while to send far and know that it is practicable and externely effective.

Next, curtain your windows with French cretone, leaving an ivory-white ground and pale pink roses scattered thickly upon it, line the curtains with pink sateen, leaving an ivory-white ground and pale pink roses scat-tered thickly upon it, line the curtains with pink sateen, in the same pale shade, and hang ruffled point d'esprit curtains under them. Tie all back together with pink cords and tassels. Cover one large Morris chair with the cretonne, also two smaller chairs and a footstool. Beside a white chiffenier I would have a dressing-table draped white point d'esprit net over pink sateen. Hang full curtains of the net on either side of the large square mirror, and put a full ruffle as a valance across the top. As a finishing touch to this dressing-table, I would set tall crystal candlesticks in front of the glass holding pink wax candles, and on these have French candleshades, made either of innumerable tiny pink roses or to represent a single rose.

Set your slender crystal night-lamp, placed on a white stand beside the bed, have also a shade of pink roses. You will find this mingling of white and pink and crystal very beautiful, and you will feel repaid for keeping every-thing alien to this scheme out of the way.

knew a woman who spent several years collecting for a rose room. Everything during that time which came in her way, and seemed formed to add to its beauty, she purchased and laid patiently aside. The result was an effect so complete and exquisite that she felt well repaid effect so complete and exquisite that she felt well repaid for her restraint. If you can afford a Royal Wilton car-pet of a white ground, with wreaths of pink roses, it would be very beautiful, but there are many cheaper floor coverings which would be appropriate. For your bed have a brass half canopy. Over a spread of pink sateen lay one of point d'esprit, having a ruffle eight inches wide on the edge. This must fall to within two inches of the floor all around the three sides. Above two inches of the floor all around the three sides. Above this ruffle set another, one foot deep, making both ruffles quite full. The effect is airy beyond description. At the head of the bedstead fill in with white net gathered over the sateen, and on the top of the canopy, cover first plainly with sateen, then draw the net in full plaits over this toward the center, finishing this with a rosette in the middle. From the sides of the canopy hang full diaphanous curtains of the net ruffled; catch them back half way with tiny white silk cords and tassels. These curtains should fall to a line with bottom of spread. Finish the edge of the canopy all around with a full valance of net about eight inches in width. A round bolster, covered first with the sateen and then the net, drawn to rosettes at the ends, makes the proper finish for this bed. On the balcony outside your window set pots with La France roses in bloom.

Annie L. Wheeler, the daughter of Gen. "Fighting or" Wheeler, was the heroine of a chapter of the history of the late war, which heretofore has been unrecorded. While the father was at the front she became a nurse and did heroic work. At length she broke down from overwork and exposure, and was ordered home on a transport. The ship also brought back several hundred sick soldiers. As soon as Miss Wheeler's health would permit; she resumed her work as nurse among her fellow-passengers, and she so endeared herself to them that when several dying men were told that they were mortally ill, they begged that the general's daughter should read the burial service over their bodies.—[Philadelphia Saturday Evening Post.,

Face to Face With Congo Cannibals.

T IS necessary to appreciate the fact that the large majority of the inhabitants of the Upper Congo regions are cannibals, and they eat human flesh for the simple reason that they prefer it to any other kind of meat. Our sympathies in this connection cannot be extended on the score of extenuating circumstances; they are not driven by any adverse conditions to practice cannibalism; human flesh is valued beyond all other food, and that, in a word, is all the explanation that can be given. It is in vain to reason with the natives against indulging in this abominable practice. Their reply is at once prompt and unanswera-ble, "We do as our people have always done." They plead we do as our people have always done." They plead with honest conviction that in eating human flesh they are doing nothing beyond fulfilling an ancient, and to them a perfectly natural, rite. Once, while traveling in the great forest region, some fifteen hundred miles from the seacoast, I entered a native village, composed of a collection of forlorn, conical-shaped grass huts, the inhabitants of which were previously in utter importance of the systems. of which were previously in utter ignorance of the existobserve and note any odd circumstance, my attention was attracted to quantities of meat, spitted upon long skewers, being smoke-dried over numerous smouldering fires; the nature of the meat was unmistakable, for portions of the human body were only too easily recognizable. "Do you people cat this dreadful food?" said I, speaking through the medium of a native interpreter. "Io; yo te?" (Yes; don't you?) was the instant reply.—[Herbert Ward in Cassell's Magazine.

Sanitary Conditions in Manila.

M ILITARY hospitals of Manila and the Philippine Islands have attained a standard of excellence that defies the sting of the critic; and because of it the common country is to be congratulated. The Oldest Town in the United States.

WE OFTEN speak of this or of that town as the oldest on the continent. But here we are in the streets of a YV on the continent. But here we are in the streets of a town which antedates all other cities of the United States—a pueblo which occupied this very spot when, in 1540, Coronado halted in Cibola and sent Don Pedro de Tobar on to the west to explore the then unknown desert. Imagine seven rather irregularly parallel streets about two hundred yards long, with here and there a more open spot or plaza, lined on each side with mud-plastered, rough-laid stone houses, and you have Oraibi. The houses rise in the form of terraces to a height of two or three stories. As a rule there is, no opening to the ground-floor dwellings save there is no opening to the ground-floor dwellings save through a small, square hatch in the roof: Leading up to through a small, square batch in the rook. Leading up to this roof are rude ladders, which in a few rare instances are simply steps cut in a solid log, differing in nowise from those found leading into the chambers of the old cliff ruins of Southern Colorado. The roof of the first row or terrace of houses forms a kind of balcony or poich for the second terrace, and so the roof of the second-story houses serves a similar useful purpose for the third-story houses—[George A. D. HUNTER, a special agent, has just reported to Dr. D. HUNTER, a special agent, has just reported to Dr. Howard, the entomologist of the Agricultural Department, in regard to a recent statement to the effect that it was considered by entomologists that the Turtle Mountain region, in North Dakota and Montana, probably was a permanent breeding ground of the destructive migratory grass-hopper, a statement which occasioned much alarm and indignation on the part of railroads and other land owners. The region, therefore, was carefully scrutinized by Mr. Hunter, who reports that the migratory grasshopper does not breed permanently in the Turtle Mountains nor in that vicinity. The ground is perfectly unsuited to breeding, and, moreover, swarms descending farther east have been traced from far to the northeast of that place. The probable breeding ground, he thinks, is on the Assiniboine River, north and east of Regina.—[Karsas City Journal.

A New Feature in Automobiles.

A CURIO among motor-carriages is now being constructed here. It is smaller and rather neater in design than many of its class now seen in use, for practically all of the steam engine that runs it is under, not behind, the seat. wheels are brought into play. So far as the driving is concerned, a doubling of sprocket chains allows power to be applied to front and rear axles at the same time. In the steering, a lever outside the body of the carriage, on the left, is connected underneath so that when the lever is pushed forward the axles pivot in unison.

This, in the case of a turn toward the left, brings the forward and rear wheels on the left-hand side of the vehicle ward and rear wheels on the left-hand side of the vehicle toward each other, spreads apart the forward and rear wheels on the other side, and makes the rear wheels assist in the work of changing the direction of the carriage. A push on the lever in the other direction makes the turn to the right. By this arrangement it is expected that some surprisingly short turns can be made. The advantage from having power exerted on both front and rear wheels is expected to be of great assistance in places where one pair of wheels are against some obstruction or unevenness, such as is found in country roads. The carriage is being such as is found in country roads. The carriage is being built after plans of a Hyde Park inventor named Shaw. It will require some time yet for its completion. It is intended to accommodate two persons.—[Boston Transcript.

A Tweive-year-old Trolley Magnate.

A TLANTA claims the youngest trolley-car magnate in Athe country. He is Cornelius Jerome Simmons, Jr., son and namesake of the president of the Collins Park and Belt Railroad Company, of the Georgia city. The boy, when much younger, had a trolley line of his own, with toy steel cars, schedules and everything else, on a miniature but perfect scale. It has been suggested that the boy—he bis just 12 years old—be elected second vice-president of his father's company, and the suggestion, it is now said, will be carried out. During a recent franchise hearing he did not miss a meeting of the committee. Every point was noted by him, and he made comments which would have done an older head credit. Many of his suggestions were acted upon by the company. Cornelius has always taken acted upon by the company. Cornelius has always taken a great interest in trolley cars and electricity, and the prediction that he will be at the head of a rapid-transit company a decade hence is regarded as a safe saying.—

The Big Demand for Rennes Souvenirs.

THERE is a keen competition among them for souvenirs of the trial at Rennes. The penholders used by the judges, pencils, scraps of paper, blotters, the chairs that the prisoner and the officers who tried him sat upon are being bargained for as if they were made of gold. Two thousand francs have been offered for the little bench upon which Dreyfus's guards sat, though the offer was made upon the condition that all the gendarmes wrote their names upon it. This condition, rightly enough, seemed too onerous to the men, who probably argued with a certain amount of reason that the signature of any gendarme who had been told of to guard Dreyfus was worth facco of itself. The matter is consequently hanging fire for the time self. The matter is consequently hanging fire for the time being, but it is thought the little stool is sure to find a

An Unknown Rembrandt Found.

Mme. Dreyfus.

THE most striking feature of this wonderful tale is that the long and arduous toil by which the triumph of justice and of love has been brought so near, like the initial service, the rescue of the despairing victim from self-in-flicted death, is and is seen to be simply and completely womanly. The swift recognition of what was really right in the first overwhelming visitation; the readiness right in the inst overwheiming visitation; the readiness to face the seemingly hopeless task; the patience, courage, intelligence, energy and fortitude of soul during the tedious years of fruitless effort; these are qualities which, though they deeply move the minds of men, do not surprise them. they deeply move the minds of men, do not surprise them. They are the qualities of the wife shown on a wide stage with the whole world looking on, but the daily life of myriads of human beings, generation after generation, has prepared us to accept them as readily as we deeply honor them. In the trials of common experience—in sickness, difficulty, affliction, in the troubles that come unjustly, even in the torment of actual guilt—the heroic part, unacknowledged, perhaps, but intimately known, is the woman's part.—[New York Times.

Her husband is employed at the Houk mine, a desolate spot near Stillwater, and not far from Newport. He lives in a shanty in the woods, and for the most part prepares his own meals. His wife and child, a bright little girl, went to remain a few days with him and cook for him. Some time during the night she was awakened by something lying across her face, and, thinking it was the baby's arm, pushed it away and went to sleep again. In the morning, when she awoke, she was horrised to see a large snake coiled around her baby's neck. Its head was elevated, and its tongue darted out viciously.

The mether was paralyzed with fright, but, believing that the reptile was about to strike the child, she grasped the snake with her hand near the head and threw it from her to the far end of the room. Then she screamed for help. Her husband came to the rescue and killed the reptile, which was of a brownish hue and very thick in pro-portion to its length. It is believed to be a copperhead.— [Canal Dover (0.) Correspondence Pittsburgh Dispatch.

Mme. Calve's Tomb Ordered.

MME. CALVE, the great singer, wants to live on in the public memory as Ophelia, and to this end she has recently ordered her tomb. She has commanded the scuiptor, Denys Puech, to carve her in marble as Ophelia. This caprice of a pretty woman ordering her own tombstone has furnished the gossip of Paris for several days past. The sculptor took it as a pleasantry, and was hard to persuade But the pretty woman insisted, wherein she is perhaps not only pretty but wise, for the singer's art dies with the generation that heard it; but Ophelia will live, and the generation that heard it; but Ophelia will live, and the sculptor's art will live for a time, and for a time will identify her with Ophelia.

MRS. HENRY J. GIELOW of Alabama, who is introduc-ling her sketches and monologues in English drawingrooms, is being enthusiastically received. An entertainment given recently at Stafford House, under the patronage of the Duchess of Sutherland, Lady Northcote, Mrs. Joseph Chamberlain and Mrs. Choate, was a great success. The programme consisted of sketches of plantation life. Mrs. Gielow's voice is musical and rich, her dialect fascinating. In addition she gave some humorous sketches of New England life, which included as well some selections from Eugene Field's poems. Aside from Mrs. Gielow's great gifts as a dramatic impersonator, dialect reader and lecturer, she is an accomplished writer, and many of her poems have been published, together with a volume called "Mammy's Reminiscences and Other Sketches," also an illustrated edition of her poem, "The Confederate's Farewell." Cost of Solomon's Temple.

A BIBLICAL student in Washington declares that if the descriptions of Solomon's temple are accurately given in the Bible and by secular authorities the total value of that edifice and its contents must have exceeded $50,000,000,000. In the first place, the value of the materials in rough is estimated at $12,500,000,000, and the labor at $3,000,000,000. According to Villalpandis, 10,000 men were engaged in dressing cedar lumber, 80,000 were engaged in cutting stone and 60,000 in bearing burdens, for a period of seven years, who, addition to their wages, received so cents a day for food.

According to the same authority, which is corroborated by Josephus, the vessels of gold were valued at 140,000 which, reduced to American money, is equal to 31,015. The vessels of silver are calculated at $2,326,481,015. The vessels of silver are calculated at $3,231,715,000, the vestments of the priests and the robes of the singers $10,050,000, and the value of the trumpets of gold was $1,000,000.—[Chicago Record.

Etymology of Jamboree.

THE question of the derivation of the word "jamboree" is becoming a burning one. J. W. Porter writes from Bangor, Me.: "Jamboree is a word that has been in common use on the Penobscot River for more than sixty-five years, to my certain knowledge, and before there were but few French-Canadians here. I am not so sure but the word was derived from the log jams on the river in driv And Alfred Hennequin returns to the charge thus: "Gamboler," used by Rabelais, and before him by Francois Villon, in 1440, in one of his 'rondeaux," became "gambader" about 1620. The word "gambader" is used in Piron, in the sense of "to frisk about." "Gambillard" (seldom in the sense of "to frisk about." "Gambillard" (seldom used in modern French,) exclusively meant "a restless person," "a fidget." The word "gambillard" came from gambiller," to "kick about," and especially "to dance."

"gambiller," to "kick about," and especially "to dance."

Now, the root of all thes words is "jambe," "leg." Take either "gamboler" or "gambader," and "jamboree" must have something to do with "legs." "To gambod" is certainly more or less a matter of "legs." Chaucer speaks of a man being "gamboled"—having his legs cut off. It was the beginning of the end. The work of restoration is being undertaken by two well-known ex-perts, both of whom have had great experience. The work begins with scratching off the varnish coat after coat with

The Vanderbilt Mausoleum Heavily Guarded.

THE Vanderbilt mausoleum at New Dorp is doubly guarded night and day since Cornelius Vanderbilt's burial. There have always, at all hours, been two men watching the tomb. They are relieved at regular intervals in such a manner as not to exlieved at regular intervals in such a manner as not to excite attention. In addition a gardener works at a seemingly endless job in the space around the tomb.

King Solomon a Pessimist and an Egotist.

A ND yet this King (Solomon) with his magnificence and unrivaled power, this shrewd judge, this skillful statesman, this scholar with his wide culture, became a pessimist, and stands forth one of the saddest figures in all the history of melancholy. But if we analyze his misery we find that he was a pessimist, not because men are disciplined by conflict and trouble, but because he was a confirmed egotist. Had men used printing-presses in those far-off days the first letter to be exhausted in setting up Solomon's copy would have been the capital letter "I." builded me houses, "I" got me soldiers, "I" wrote proverbs, "I" had man-servants, "I" had maid-servants. Women in Uncle Sam's Service.

WOMEN are eligible for appointment to many branches W of the government service upon precisely the same conditions as men. The question of sex does not enter into the matter when there are vacant positions which are open to women. At the present time there are one-sixth as many women as men in the service. The prejudice that formerly existed against the appointment of women is disappearing, and in 1898, of 418 persons appointed to positions in the departments at Washington, 190 were females. In addition to clerical capacities, women are appointed assistant microscopists, nurses, translators, teachers, matrons, telegraph operators, stenographers and typewriters, as well as to places requiring skilled and unskilled workers. As assistant microscopists they have the first chance of selec-tion, there being always a demand for capable women in this line.—[Barton Cheney in Ladies' Home Journal.

Royal Fisherwomen.

THE only "killing" form of sport indulged in by the ladies of the royal family is fishing, the Princess of Wales, the Duchess of Fife, and Princess Louise, Marchioness of Lorne, being all enthusiastic fisherwomen. When acting as Vice-Queen of Canada, the Princess Louise used to go out in a canoe with natives for guides, and on one oc-casion she dispatched three of her finest fish, of course securely packed in ice, to the Queen at Balmoral. The Princess of Wales and her daughters go out almost every day when staying with the Duchess of Fife at-New Mar Lodge, and some two years ago the Duchess landed the largest number of fish ever taken in one day on the Dee by a fisherwoman.

The Prince of Wales does not now own a single acre of land in Scotland. He was the owner some years ago of Birkhall, but he sold the property to the Queen in and though he always pays a long visit to Scotland each autumn, he invariably stays—with the exception, perhaps, of a flying visit to Balmoral—with the Duke and Duchess of Fife.-["Ignota," in New-Lippincott for October.

A Lake That Rises and Falls.

JOB'S pond, the remarkable lake in this town which has, since early history, puzzled scientific men by ita phenomenal actions, is again furnishing material for curi-ous speculation. It has no outlet, and in some places is from forty to sixty feet deep. Dr. Field, in his history, says it rises and falls as much as fifteen feet, but not from such causes as affect other ponds. It is often the highest in dry seasons and lowest in the wet season of the year.

When it begins to rise it rises regularly for six to twelve months, and then falls for about the same period. Those, however, who are most capable of judging, think there is nothing mysterious about it. It is probably fed by very deep springs that are not affected by the rainfall until after a considerable time. This beautiful sheet of water, deeply set between the hills, was once known as Waroona Lake. This appropriate name is the Australian word for solitude.

The pond for several years past has given no cause for comment, and by some had almost been forgotten. It now has again presented its claims for notoriety in a manne, which is certainly as astonishing as had ever been credited to it before. The water has been continually rising for several days, and has reached a mark over its natural height, and is still reaching out in an effort to cover more territory. The pond is now higher, it is reported by residents in the vicinity, than it has been since 1870.-[Middle-

What It Means to Start a Blast Furnace.

FEW people who have not actually run a blast furnace realize what it realize what it means to fill the capacious maw of one of those monsters. A stack of 200-tons daily capacity, running on 50 per cent. ore, must have delivered to it each day something more than 400 tons of ore, 250 to 300 tons of coke, and over roo tons of limestone, besides sand, coal, and minor supplies—say 900 tons raw materials. Add the 200 tons of pig iron product shipped out, and we have taking no note of the disposition of the slag. The mining of the ore requires the labor of 150 to 300 men; the coal mining, coke-making, quarrying of limestone, and transportation, at least 300 more. The furnace itself employs about 150 or more hands. Starting up a furnace of ordinary capacity, therefore, calls immediately for the labor of nearly a thousand men; for the use of at least a thousand railway cars and many locomotives; for perhaps several steamers and vessels on the lakes; for capital, from the mines to the pig iron, of one to two millions of dollars, and last, but not least, for a high order of managing ability.-[Engineering Magazine.

THE MORNING SERMON.

HAPPINESS.

By Rev. Marvin Hill Dana, LL. D., F.R.G.S.,

New York City.

"Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God."
-Matt. xxv.

AN has a right to happiness. Not one word in all the scriptures, not one word in all Christian the-ology, can be found that will contain any doctrine oldding man to seek and find every true pleasure forbidding man to seek and find every true which this life can afford him. On the contrary, our re-ligion is a reinforcement of that which nature teaches us, by this fact we are assured that those desires which are the dower given to us by our Creator are to be the

are the dower given to us by our Creator are to be the guide of our lives in seeking happiness.

But always we are to remember that the true pleasure is not to be confounded with the false. The secret sources of our conduct are always to be traced to some distinctive characteristic of our human being, either in body, or in soul, or in spirit. But, as we know that the desires of one part may oppose the desires of another part, so we know that the higher of those parts must in every conflict, if right be done, be the guide. We are, then, to distinguish between those pleasures which are a delight to the body and an offense to the soul, and those pleasures, only to be called true, which give to body and to soul alike, in due proportion, satisfac-tion and delight. Certain things we are apt to desire for our happiness are essentially to our injury, but others, while they give us delight in the present, prepare us for added delights to come.

What is pleasure? It is the appreciation of the beau-tiful. What is the beautiful? It is the expression of the good. Pleasure, then, is the realization of the expression of the good, and that good, which is God, is ever unchangeably the same. If, then, we would seek for the test which differentiates pure pleasures from false, we will find that test to depend upon the pleasure's constancy. The true pleasure is eternally a joy. The false pleasure

It is this which causes Solomon, the wisest of men, to ory out, after the years in which he had tested every delight which the skill of man or the subtlety of woman could devise: "All is vanity!" Of those false pleasures in which his fond and foolish fancies sought the fullness of life, not one remained to him at the end as more than a memory of shame. It was, then, with wisdom that the Great King cried woe upon all the lying delights in which he had destroyed happiness.

But whoever heard of the vanity of those nobler pleasures, which all the world reveres, the charm of unselfish love, the keen delights of kindness done, the dear joy that springs from deeds of charity, aye, the bliss of holy yearning for the sublime possibilities of Destiny, and most of all, the supreme exaltation of the spirit that tomes by communion with God? These give to us our dear-est delights, they are our true pleasures, for they are forceful at their every repetition. But one who yields himself-to brutal lusts, who finds at every pleasure's end a penance in an agony of shame, who feed within themselves fires that by their raging flames at last consume all of worth within the man, these realize that their pleasures are inconstant, fickle goddesses, to be sought for again and again, and at last, like Circe herself, hideous wallowing swine.

Nothing is more certain than that man is constituted for delights. Every function of body, soul and spirit, goes to the proving of man's capacity for pleasure. The holy man plunged in pious meditation realizes from the Joys of his communion with God that God has created him with a spirit, which should find its delight in such lofty aspirations. The man of intellect who feels the of triumph in the results which his mind's power The man of intellect who feels the joy been able to achieve, realizes that his Creator has be-stowed upon him a reasoning faculty, in the high exercise of which is a constant and unfailing delight. The man of sentiment, he whose soul goes forth in movements of affection toward those about him, who gives his life in Bervice to his dear ones, such a one realizes that the con-stitution of his being has so ordered it, that from out his loving sacrifice and toil there comes the best happi-ness of life. And in a lesser way, but no less surely, and perhaps more appealingly to many of us, the sound of melody, the scent of soft perfumes, the breath of balmy airs, all the thousand and one things which come to us for moment over and over again throughout our lives, these declare to us our capacity for enjoyment.

Oftentimes I have walked in the morning twilight on the Vermont hills, the grass on which I trod wet with its night draught of dew, behind me the primeval forest, all about me the song of birds, the shrill cry of the crickets, the chatter of loitering squirrels. Beneath lay the fertile valley of the Champlain, latticed by the green of meadows traced with many a dainty coil of water, and here and there the golden sheen of wheat fields. Far beyond to the west, the great line of the Adirondacks trended the horizon. Then, as I watched, suddenly the sleepy sun arose, slowly, loiteringly with languorous motion, until of a sudden, by a swift careening of golden bulk over the ing crests, the valley glowed sang more sweetly, more blithely, more tenderly; the flowers shook the tears of dew from their smiling faces;

Standing in such a scene, I seemed to realize the vision of creation which Moses saw, when the light first smote the darkness and destroyed it. To me the memory of such a scene brings fairest joys. It yields to me a pleasure ever dear, for it is ever pure, but he who degrades his manhood by vile passions finds in the memory of false joy naught but poignant pain.

Mark well this test and use it for your guide: If aught you sought as pleasure gives an evil memory, you know that pleasure to be false.

As by the constant use of brawn and muscle one gains a marvelous development, so for all things that in this world can give us joy, one may develop most amazing powers of perception. The one who picks his pleasures well, eschews the false and holds steadfastly to the true, will find his power to lay hold upon pleasures gain by will find his power to lay hold upon pleasures gain by every grasp.

It is to be understood that this truth applies to vastly more than the brief years of mortal life. To build character is slow work, but it is a work almost never, if ever, undone; the man who searches only for the good, or for the beauty which is the expression of the good, which is ever constant and unfailing, that man develops all his power toward the gain of true pleasure; and, as he grows in strength, the power which he gained is an eternal, indestructible force. It reaches out beyond this life into eternity. It wins for him a destiny worthy of his creaternity. eternity. It wins for him a destiny worthy of his crea-tion. We are not all to know the same measure of happiness in a life to come; we are not all to be moved in the same thrill by the chanting of seraphic choirs; we are not all to be swayed in swift emotions by the same hymning of angelic litanies. We may, if we be not shut off from happiness forever, each of us enjoy perfect happiness, but the capacity for hap-piness must vary in each and every one.

How tremendous, then, is the importance of our choice, How tremendous, then, is the importance of our choice, that we should choose for ourselves those joys which shall forever endure. The joys that are forever constant are those always pure, without taint of sin. God is the good; he who is pure will love that beauty which is the constant expression of the good, and thus, by his own choice, shall realize his highest happiness, a happiness prophesied in these sacred words: "Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God."

LAY SERMONS,

ITH how many of us is life one long series of robberies? We rob ourselves; we rob society; we rob God of what we might do and be, yet which we not and are not. The great possibilities of life are allowed to slip by us without our grasping them. The simpler duties and obligations of every day's being are simpler duties and obligations of every day's being are lost sight of when they might be pregnant with grand results, results as far reaching as the eternal years. If we could only remember that, looked at from the high standpoint of actualities, there are no little things in life, how differently should we live. If a little, simple, trustful word from our lips, timely spoken, would be the means of saving a soul, is it a light thing that that word is not spoken, and the soul that might have been saved by it is lost forever? If a breaking heart might he healed by it is lost forever? If a breaking heart might be healed by a word of tender kindness and be led to look up to the everlasting Comforter, is it a thing of no moment that our lips are silent and the helpful word is unsaid? If by giving thirty minutes each day to study we are better fitted to help others, to lead their thoughts in the channels of great tritthe and we take the time and were the state. nels of great truths, and we take that time and devote it to selfish pleasure or idleness, are we not robbing God and our fellow-men of the service which we might have given them had our time and talents been properly em-

Our responsibilities are serious things to contemplate when we consider that we are not only responsible for what we are, but for all that we might have been and are not. How many unused talents there are to cry out against us. How many unimproved opportunities for do-ing good for which we must answer? Oh, life is a solemn thing when we consider that no man has a right to live for himself alone, and that it is his solemn duty to cultivate all of his powers to the greatest degree of which he is capable. Man is not the plaything of time, but he is the child of eternity and the measure of his responsibility is unending. Well might we tremble at the awful meaning of life had we not Christ for our Helper and our Guide. But if we lean upon Him we need not fear, for He is the source of all truth, all knowledge and all

Life is a school in which the man is being fitted, not for this world alone, but for the long, unending years of eternal being. Very truthful was the assertion of Browning:

"How divers persons witness in each man Three souls which make up one soul; What Does, what Knows, what Is, Three souls, one man."

And it has been urged that "the province of education is not limited to the first and second, to training the body and the brain; it should go deeper, reach the essential man; correct, develop and enrich the inmost self. . . . Then it should do more in the inner realm of character, of worship, of vision of truth, of communion with God."
Our aim should not be simply to educate ourselves so that we can make our way in this world and gather up riches and find high place and power, but our great desire should be to so educate ourselves that we can accomshould be to so educate ourselves that we can accom-plish the most good, can use all the powers and faculties that God has given us in helpfulness for others and the glory of our Father. "WORTH HER WEIGHT IN GOLD."

A GIRL WOULDN'T BE WORTH SO MUCH AT THAT RATE, AFTER ALL.

[Portland Oregonian:] A girl who is "worth her weight in gold" is worth comparatively little. There are several hundred millionaires in the United States who are worth their weight in gold several thousand times over, and there is many an American heiress who is worth more than the golden girl statue of Colorado, which is made of gold. The expression, "worth her weight in gold," when applied to a woman, is pretty, though trite, but it is specious.

a cubic foot, or $108 a cubic inch. If Mr. Rockefeller were worth his weight in gold, he would only possess a little nugget 6 i-3 inches square. Cornelius Vanderbilt, who was physically somewhat larger than Mr. Rockewho was physically somewhat larger than Mr. Accarefeller, would have owned a cube 7 1-2 inches square; Rusell Sage's block would measure 7 1-4 inches, and Mrs. Hetty Green's 6 3-4 inches. The value of these little cubes is insignificant in comparison with the actual wealth of these millionaires.

The richest man in America, who undoubtedly is Mr. Rockefeller, were he worth only his weight in gold, would have but $33,758. His actual wealth is estimated at $200,have but $33,750. His actual wealth is estimated at $200,-000,000. Cornelius Vanderbilt, who probably ranked next in point of wealth, would have had but $42,500, instead of his $150,000,000. Russell Sage, in place of his $80,-000,000, would be worth $40,000, and Mrs. Hetty Green, whose fortune is estimated at $50,000,000, would have

IRKSOME REGULATIONS THAT BEAR ON ROYALTY AND GUESTS ALIKE.

[London Mail:] The distinguished persons who attended last night's state concert at Buckingham Palace were required to observe a code of etiquette which has existed at court since the earliest days.

Some of the etiquette in force at royal balls and concerts is very curious. At state balls the appearance of the royal family is announced by the entrance of a number of gentlemen carrying long court sticks. The Princess of Wales, when present, heads the party, and, in accordance with precedence established hundreds of years ago, advances with a naive, faltering, hesitating step.

It was at one of the balls in the reign of James I that the custom originated. That monarch was so pleased at what he called the blending of timidity with childlike confidence which characterized the demeanor of his son's young wife as she entered the ballroom, that he decreed that this deportment should be constituted a part of the court etiquette.

The etiquette at royal balls is rather severe. All quadrilles and lancers are expected to be danced in a stately and ceremonious manner, and certain it is that in the earlier part of the evening all concerned comport them-selves with inimitable gravity, but as the night grows apace the rule is slightly relaxed.

At the royal concerts, which are attended by perso of superior position to those invited to the balls, the eti-quette is also rigidly enforced and never deviated from. me of it presses very hardly even on royalty itself. For instance, royal personages are expected to remain seated throughout the concert, a proceeding they must find extremely irksome, as the gilt chairs used on these occasions are not only very small, but, being placed with their backs to the orchestra, prevent their occupants from seeing what

On this point, for some reason to easy to explain, etiquette is more considerate with the guests, who are allowed to walk about, whisper, and even look at the pictures or adjourn to the refreshment-room.

The barrier which on these occasions is introduced to parate the audience from the singers is regarded by the latter with the deepest aversion, as indicating the existence of a social barrier between them of £20,000 a year, considers herself the equal of most of the guests who listen to her. But the bar is always fixed for a state concert, and is not likely to be removed.

One awful breach of etiquette is to ask a question of any royal personage who may condescend to address you. Neither must you make any remark without being first addressed. The person who so far forgets himself or herself as to keep his or her gloves on when spoken to is likely to receive a reprimand from the proper quarters later on, and similar treatment would be meted out to the ill-bred person who dared to quit the royal presence before being formally dismissed.

Curious though it may appear, there is one occasion when to cough becomes a matter of etiquette. Suppose, on the occasion of a state ball, the Prince of Wales retires to his smoking-room for a whiff. A royal servant occasions is expected to scratch the door, a member of the royal family to shake the handle, but all other persons are enjoined to produce at intervals a gentle, ad-monitory cough, which is not always audible.

Even royalty itself is not always acquainted with its wn customs. When the Queen accompanied Louis Philown customs. When the Queen accompanied Louis Philippe to Eton the visitors' book was produced. The French King, as etiquette demanded he should, signed his name at the top of the page. But etiquette intervened, and as it does not allow Her Majesty to sign her name under any other, she had to turn over the all-but-empty page and write her name on the top of the next one

The ease with which the Queen extricated herself from this contretemps so upset the customary self-possession of the Duke of Wellington that he signed his name in the book "Weggrington."

AN ESSAY ON "POETRY."

[Kansas City Journal:] Here is a Georgia boy's com-position on "Poetry:" "A poem is a thing which has rhymes at the last end. A poem also has feet, but some poems don't stand steady on 'em. Poets mostly has long hair, because times is hard, and it's cheaper to let it grow. Poets used to live in garrets, on a crust of bread—when the baker would credit 'em. Now they live on the ground floor, where they can escape easy when the bailiff is after 'em. My father says poetry makes the world better, but my mother says it ain't the kind he writes. Poets have a Maturally, a singer like Adelina Patti, with an income down so's they can't come back."

FASHIONS IN FRANCE.

THE KINDS OF GOWNS TO BE SEEN AT TROU-VILLE THIS FALL.

Paris Correspondence New York Tribune.

The colors and patterns associated with cashmere shawls will be used in many different ways. During the summer shirt waits have been finished with four-in-hand ties of this silk, and decidedly pretty are cravats and scarfs of the same, which are beginning to appear on the Rue de la Paix. Bands of this cashmere silk, and in some cases wool, are used to trim colored serges and wools. Something new is a trimming of white silk with scalloped edge bordered by a cashmere design, the latter headed by a fine black braiding. This trimming is about five inches deep, and may be used on a gown ruffled or in the form of shingles. A blouse made of it has the sleeves and body covered with the stuff, and the rows arranged so that the points lie alternately. In this case the stuff was not ruffled, but was put on straight. Another way this trimming is used is on gowns of thin black crepe, white or light gray wool.

Gowns Worn at Trouville.

Here are descriptions of some pretty gowns that will be seen this autumn at Trouville: A deep red crepon is made on the princess model; the skirt is trimmed half way to the knees with clusters of deep tucks and embroidered ruffles of reepon. The embroidery is done in a shade of red even darker, and there are three ruffles, separated by as many clusters of tucks. The tucks are fully an inch and a quarter deep. The upper part of the costume is trimmed in the same way; an embroidered ruffle falls from the bust, and above and below it are three shingles taken in the stuff. The sleeves are arranged in shingles from shoulder to wrist. On one side of the bust is a large chou of black tulle, and a small yoke is made of pink satin, embroidered with black lace figures.

The latest addition to tunics is to have them fastened behind in some ornamental fashion. Most popular, too, are the gowns with unlined guimpes, and a large proportion of the gowns seen in the Casino at Trouville or at dinner time in the smart restaurants in Paris are made in this way. The following gown contains both these features: The body of it is of blue silk; the skirt is covered with silk ruffles, edged with thick ruching of narrow black lace; the princess tunic, much shorter behind than in front, is of Luxeuil lace, and is closed behind with straps of narrow black velvet and diamond buttons. The lace, unlined, is used for guimpe and long sleeves and about the shoulders. Covering the joining of the guimpe and dress are three rows of blue mousseline de soie ruffles. A second gown that closes in the back is an admiral blue crepon, embroidered with small, conventionalized fleur de lis; the closing in the back is made of white ribbon arranged as a lacing or lattice work; the underskirt of this dress shows only as a shaped ruffle of blue silk, of the same tone as the crepon, covered with a yellow lace flounce. Yellow lace forms the unlined sleeves.

A superb gown of heavy white bengaline is oddly trimmed with five-inch entredeux of artistic guipure, through which two rows of black velvet ribbon are run. The gown is cut on the princess model, with a long, pointed train. The trimming is first used to make the choker, which is high and close. A band of trimming passes about the shoulders and down each side of the front of the gown to the bottom of the skirt, where it is fastened with a chou of black tulle. The edge of the train is finished with black tulle choux to the number of six. Two bands of the trimming encircle the skirt at equal distances, and on each of them, in the back, is a tulle chou. The sleeves are tight to the elbows and are finished with full lace ruffles in the pompadour style. This same model is being made in blue mousseline de soie, the sleeves and upper part of the bodice left unlined. In the case of the latter gown it is made in two pieces, the stuff being softly gathered at the waist, but there is no belt, and the trimming is put on in the same way as that of the bengaline, the long bands coming from the shoulders, giving a princess effect.

Jetted Laces in Favor.

Exceedingly effective is a gown of cream Cluny lace, with some of the figures picked out in black jet; the gown rests on a foundation of black mousseline de soie, which shows at the bottom in the form of the tiniest ruche under the lace edge. There are revers of turquoise blue velvet, embroidered with white lace and black jet, on the bodice; the sleeves and yoke are of the jetted Cluny lace, unlined. Jetted laces seem to be creeping into favor again. Among the Trouville gowns is a superb black lace, heavy with jet, and fastened on the side with sprays of big scarlet poppies. There seems to be a perfect craze for these big, loose poppies, which come in every color and shade, and look as if they were on the point of dropping in pieces.

A girlish house frock is prettily made of burnt orange crepon, mousseline de soie of the same color and yellow lace. The lace, a heavy guipure, makes a fitted bodice; over this is a little jacket of the yellow mousseline de soie, brought under the arms and draped upon the bust in front in a bow. A fichu that falls over the shoulders is edged with white lace, and appears as the top of the jacket. The long sleeves are of the unlined mousseline de soie, laid in tucks; many rows of narrow black velvet ribbon make the choker and the belt. The skirt is of crepon, slightly draped over an underskirt that shows as a white lace ruffle. The bottom of the skirt is trimmed with a dozen or more rows of the black velvet ribbon.

Many examples of the redingote are appearing among the autumn models. The redingote is often cut out considerably to show a good deal of the underdress, and may, in the skirt, be slashed to fall only in long tabs. A handsome redingote is of black cloth, made to wear over a skirt of accordion-pleated black mousseline de soie mounted over red silk. In this case the redingote is cut as a basque in front, and appears on the skirt in the form of long coatails in the back. It is trimmed with large revers that are double-breasted and show only a chemisette of ruffled red tulle. The revers are sufficiently deep to cover the top of the sleeves; the sleeves themselves are of accordion-pleated black stuff over red. This gown, together with several others of the same nature, would seem to indicate that cloth will again be considered one of the dressy fabrics. However, as has been stated in previous letters, silk and velvet combinations will be much more worn than they were last season.

Spanish Cloak a Fad of the Hour.

There is any amount of pretty forms for mantles and long wraps. The success of the moment is the toreador cloak. It is shaped exactly as are the mantles worn by the Spanish toreadors, and is worn with one end thrown over the shoulders. The material used for it is a fine soft cloth, and there is no trimming save a fine line of galloon about the edge. Some of the long coats in vogue are as dressy as possible. In one of them a foundation of rose satin is cut to fall straight from the shoulder to the bottom of the dress, and is covered with strips of black dotted tulle and entredeux of black Chantilly. The garment fits snugly to the figure, but is fluffy at the bottom with flounces of pink and black tulle; about the shoulder is a Capuchin hood of black lace, lined with pink brocade. A gray satin, brocaded in velvet of the same color, makes a magnificent carriage coat for the autumn. It is not cut to fit, but to slightly define the figure. The loose sleeves turn up with huge cuffs of sable, and the Capuchin cape about the shoulders turns up with a band of fur.

What the Correct Figure is Like.

The fashionable figure seems to be as silhoutte as ever, and waist lines are disregarded in the effort to get a general slender effect. Corsets are beginning to be an expensive necessity, and women who have hitherto contented themselves with a ready-made article of moderate price are now rushing to the high-priced places, for only there can they get a corset fit to wear under the new gowns. There is some justice in the big prices that are charged, for the best whalebone has to be used, and the most careful fitting and workmanship are required. The latest corsets now have two garter straps, one in front and one on the side, more to keep the corset well down in place than to hold the stocking up. The chemise is, of course, tabooed, and a well-fitting corset cover protects the corset. A dainty little garment for this purpose is made of strips of colored silk and white lace entredeux. An elaborate petticoat is also an impossibility. It is doubtful if many petticoats, beyond a short, thin underskirt, are worn now, but with the autumn thicker underskirts will be a necessity. At a place on the Rue de la Paix they are making these of satin, as close as possible to the figure, and trimmed with one shaped ruffle, narrow in front and quite deep in the back. Over these the skirts hang beautifully, and, as it is not the fashion to lift the dress now, the plainness of a petticoat makes no difference. At this shop they also show "knickers" of satin, made dainty with silk ruffles.

Capt. E. Ross Smith of the One Hundred and Fiftyninth Indiana Volunteers, who, it is said, had the distinction of being the youngest captain in the United States service during the Spanish-American war, has again been honored with a captaincy in the United States service. He was only 19 years old when he took his company to the field.

A CHARMING WINTER HAT.

This is a charming winter hat, an artistic combination of fawn and white, created by the famous millinery house of S. Koch & Sons, of New York City. The wide, straight brim is flecked with chenille pelka dots in a lighter tone of fawn, and the rather high crown is swathed with velvet of a harmonizing shade. There is a huge bow of rich, soft silk on the left side, held in place by a sparkling rhinestone buckle, and from the center of the silk springs four exquisite fancy wings that give an appearance of great style and elegance to the hat.

VERY PICTURESQUE

A STUNNING PARISIAN MODEL

The popular use of tsrings for both hats and bonets this winter is exemplified in this stunning Parisian model. The flaring crescent brim that frames the face so bewitchingly is faced with orchid purple chenille thickly sewn with iridescent spangles of violet and dahlia tints. Resting against the hair and rising in a half circle is pale wisteria velvet showing a star of brilliants. A long ostrich plume of the same wisteria shade curls about the crown, its tip falling forward to supply a further contrast with the orchid brim. The whole is a marvel of

THE UNIQUE TEA.

By a Special Contributor.

Each season there are a variety of house teas which make

Each season there are a variety of house teas which make up the winter's diversion.

Among these are the Unique, for so it is called by its patrons, whose chief charm and novelty are the three pretty girls who act as hostesses for the occasion.

The first table is presided over by a brunette, the second by a blonde, the third is graced by a young woman with brown hair and eyes. This grouping naturally shows three different styles, and to enhance this device each one chooses a color best suited to herself, not only in the costume she wears, but for the table she so charmingly represents. So that the brunette may adopt pale yellow or deep orange, the blonde a bright blue or one of green, or even better, the blonde a bright blue or one of green, or even better, the new tone in violet, while the third, if she pleases, can select an attractive shade in pink, but in any of these colors a variety of tints can be used, provided they are all on the same hue. If a good selection is made, a fine result is sure to be obtained.

In giving an affair of this sort the best place for the purpose is a large dining room, and where, if space admits, three tables can be placed at equal distances apart. Between all these there should be a wide passageway for the coming and going of the guests in taking a cup of tea. Each table should be prettily equipped in the colors chosen by the hostesses, and for a floral adornment there can be roses, violets and carnations, making a choice array. Cen-ter and corner pieces with green leaves can also be added. If possible, also, a picturesque background like that of a tall screen can be given in which the selected colors should be faithfully portrayed. For refreshments sandwiches of different kinds, small cakes and confections serve well with

But this tea, like all other entertainments of the kind, has its share in the always-on-hand prize. In this case the hostess who is fortunate enough to pour the most cups of tea naturally secures the first prize. Or, the man willing to deluge himself in the drinking of many cups of tea

To give a tone to the feast, each table may be equipped with a waitress, whose cap, decorated by bows and long ends, shows the tint of the hostess' favorite color. To the maid the count is given, the name called, the victor being crowned by the hostess with a wreath of ivy sent in by one of the guests for the occasion. But even in the pouring of this delightful beverage there should be a limit, the time not being over an hour and a half at the longest, for the fun is sure to wane if the drinking of tea is steadily kept up. After the souvenirs are given, music and dancing can follow as the correct finish.

This pretty entertainment is more enjoyable if only a certain number are invited, like that of a small dancing set, where the guests are generally in couples. The prizes given may be simple in character, and yet a new-fangled notion has its artistic side if rightly chosen.

MRS. OLIVE BELL BUNCE.

PHOTOGRAPHING THE ADMIRAL,

A WASHINGTON WOMAN'S GREAT FEAT OF NEWS-PAPER WORK JUST ACCOMPLISHED.

[Harper's Bazar:] A splendid example of the energy of women journalists is given in the recent work of Frances Benjamin Johnston, the Washington photographer. Miss Johnston has accomplished recently almost as novel and important a feat of newsgathering as the pursuit of a fly-ing column. She went from Washington to Naples for Dewey, and succeeded in getting a set of portraits of the admiral as well as an exhausting a set of portraits of the admiral as well as an exhaustive series of pictures of life aboard his flagship.

was in July that Miss Johnston had a proposition from the manager of a New York newspaper syndicate to go in search of Admiral Dewey with her camera. She accepted it, and within forty-eight hours was on her way to Paris. When she left America the admiral's plans were reported as somewhat unsettled. Arriving on the other side, Miss Johnston found no reflection of the over-whelming interest in the hero which prevails here, and it

When she learned that he was to be at Naples on a Sunday—the 6th of August—she took train from Paris, and after twenty-four hours of steady traveling reached her destination in the evening. She lost no time, but went immediately out to the Olympia, where she presented her to the admiral and met a most cardial recention. herself to the admiral, and met a most cordial reception. Possibly some measure of it was due to the fact that Miss Johnston took with her on her journey a letter of introduction from Gov. Roosevelt, who is one of Admiral Dewey's warmest friends. At all events, she found the admiral the modest, courteous gentleman who is described admiral the modest, courteous gentieman who is described in terms of admiration by every traveling American who has met him by chance or design during his homeward voyage. She had no difficulty in obtaining permission to photograph the admiral, and every one and everything about the ship. At 8 o'clock the following morning she began her work. From Naples Miss Johnston followed the Olympia to Leghera, where she completed has mission the Olympia to Leghorn, where she completed her mission. She was able to show the admiral the excellent result of his own appearance before the :amera, and to obtain his approval of it before she shipped it to America. It is all a piece of energetic work that does creat to men as well a piece of ene

GROTESQUE ENGLISH JEWELRY.

A glance at the shop windows of the leading London jewelers seems to indicate a growing taste for the grotesque among the fashionables of the largest city in the world. It is an exaggeration of a taste for the odd that brings about the designing of such queer and outlandish jewelry. The whole animal kingdom is ransacked for queer conceits to astonish the public, even though they do not delight it with beauty. Here is an ape, for instance, clinging to a gold bough set with rubies. His tail and one fot suspend the

FROCK FOR A SMALL GIRL.

Party and home evening frocks for little girls will be otable for their simplicity this season. The long-necked, short-sleeved frock pictured here is a hortensia pink silk crepe, having deep hem around the bottom of the skirt, which is frilled into a belt of shirred silk of exactly the same rosy tint. The little bodice is full and child-like with short puffed sleeves; but the whole is made noticeable by its ruffled and scalloped bertha which is of embroidered muslin, edged with Valenciennes lace. The hat ugly beast, whose body is set with brilliants, and eyes shine with all the greeness of two emeralds, while in the other forefoot he holds a little watch set with diamonds. This may be striking, but it is certainly not beautiful, any more than this other design of a trotting poodle, the front part of whose body is set with diamonds, while the rest of the ugly

Even the barnyard is invaded that the ladies at the routs and balls may wear the facsimile of a pullet looking for a worm, as a brooch. Is this any hint at the early hours that these ladies keep? But such are the latest follies of the "smart set" in London. Will they be imported to the United States by our imitative sisters of fashion?

CHICAGO'S SCHOOL FOR INVALID CHILDREN.

[Indianapolis Journal:] In connection with the University of Chicago a new school for the care and training of defective children is to be opened this fall. It is to be known as the Chicago Physiological School, and its educational work is to be connected with the department of psychology and pedagogy of the university.

The school is designed both as a home and a school for children who, either from illness or infirmity, cannot keep up with average children, and all such under 15 years of age will be admitted. Treatment of the pupils will be as much from a medical as an educational standpoint; many leading neurologists will give their attention, and owing to its peculiar advantage it is expected that cases requiring treatment will be sent from all over the country; indeed, the school is already assured of a large number of pupils. It is said that only one, the New York Physiological School of New York City, will approach this institution for excellence of treatment.

It must not be supposed that this school is in any sense a charity; in fact, considering the staff of physicians, composed of leading neurologists, and its corps of teachers experienced in teaching this class of children, it is impossible that it should be. Boarding pupils will pay for tuition from $500 to $1000, according to the circumstances

ILLINOIS NEW BIRD CAW.

[New York Mail and Express:] This fall the Illirois Audubon Society has the biggest task before it that it ever undertook, and time alone can tell what the outcome will be. The society, though only two years old, has many members and has done good work. Last year, largely through its efforts, a law was passed by the Illinois Legislature which makes the possession of any harmless bird, but in order that punishment might be inflicted the person must be caught in the act of killing. For possession there was no penalty.

Now the society is bracing itself for a campaign which will affect every woman who wears a bird on her hat and every shopkeeper who sells one. They are looking with some trepidation on the task, even though upheld by the law. If every bird-wearing woman were fined, the coffers of the Chicago city government would be largely reenforced as a consequence of the good work.

It is predicted that the dealers who offer this bird plumage for sale in defiance of law and the women who wear it as defiantly will say that the feather-covered skin of a bird does not constitute a dead bird in the eyes

HORSESHOE MAGIC,

IT EXISTED THOUSANDS OF YEARS BEFORE HORSESHOES WERE THOUGHT OF.

[St. Paul's Magazine:] Horseshoe magic is a subject which seems to be of perennial interest, mainly because it touches that little substratum of superstitious beliefs, which is inherent in most of us; though being a materialist age, and having put away from ourselves childish things, we none of us confess to it. As a matter of fact, however, we are always, either literally or metaphorically, turning over our money when we are now more our money when w turning over our money when we see a new moon or pick-ing up a rusty horseshoe as a harbinger of luck. But the point that never seems to be reached in these magazine discussions is the circumstance that, initially and intrinsically, horseshoe magic has nothing to do with horse-shoes. It existed long before horses were ever shod, and it has left traces of its presence in places where he have never been known.

In comparatively modern times, the horseshoe over the door-nailed to the lintel with the points uppermost, be it noted—has been chiefly regarded as a protection against witchcraft, a belief which has survived in its modified "luck-bringing" form to the present day. But the horse-shoe-shaped mark has been a mystic symbol from immemorial days, and all that modern superstition has done has been to fit it to the horseshoe. I have seen the mark, sometimes painted and sometimes cut, on ancient shrines and temples in the interior of China; it has been in use for many centuries in India; it is to be found in the Aztec ruins, and on the stone work of buried cities discovered recently by Dr. Schlichter in the region now known

It has been found incised on the sacred Churinga stones of the tribes of Central Australia, and painted on the bodies of such of the tribesmen as have gone through the religious mysteries peculiar to these aboriginal survivors.

Messrs. Spencer and Gillen tried last year to induce the tribal priests to expound the horseshoe mystery to them, but it was either too sacred or too obscure, and they learned nothing save that the mark was an indispensable part of their mystic rites. The horseshoe mark is found also in British Guiana, in the region of the Amazon, in Georgie and Illies in Zuleberdie the theorem. goddess Mut in Upper Egypt, and on innumerable dolmens, kists and bowlers in the British Isles; but always with the points uppermost. In so far, therefore, as antiquity confers respectability, horseshoe magic is pre-eminently respectable. The only awkward thing about it is that we do not know what terrible mysteries it may have originally signified, or to what pagan rites we may be unwittingly committing ourselves when we nail the rusty symbol over our lintels.

[Kansas City Journal:] Whatever the views of the people of Columbia as to the policy of expansion, or as to the qualifications of Gen. Otis for successfully handling the campaign in the Philippines, there is but one opinio in Missouri's Athens as to the general's charming daughter, Miss Mary Otis—who left there Monday, after nearly a month's visit with her kinspeople, Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Rollins—and that is a most complimentary and favorable

THE ROMANCE OF SOME HOME-MADE CANDY. A STORY FOR GIRLS.

By a Special Contributor.

'M AWFUL sorry for Miss Sanders," remarked Mrs. Abijah Smith, "even if she is prouder than sin. I s'pose she can't help that, though. All the Sanderses was that way. Poverty and pride ain't good bedfellows, however."

"That's true as the gospel," returned Mrs. White, with whom Mrs. Smith was spending the afternoon. "Husband was saying only yesterday that Miss Sanders must find it pretty hard hocing. But she's got so much pride that she'd die before she'd have anybody suspect she needed help. It's too bad she's that way. Folks would be glad to help her if she'd let them."

"Good land! Don't attempt to give her anything!" cried Mrs. Smith in alarm, "or she'll treat you as she did me."

"How was that?"

"Well, the other day I happened to run in while she was eating her dinner. She was awful upset, but I made out I didn't notice anything, though it did make me feel bad when I see she hadn't nothing on the table but tea and a few crackers. A couple of days later, I run over again with few crackers. A couple of days later, I run over again with a custard pie I just made and I says to her, says I: 'Miss Sanders, I just finished baking and I brought over one of my custard pies for you to try. Miss Lowe gave me a new receipt.' She took it as nice as you please, though I was dreadful afraid she wouldn't, and I was tickled to pieces, but I didn't let on. That was on Thursday, and lo and behold, my name ain't Almiry Smith, if M:ss Sanders didn't come over on Saturday with the elegantest raised cake you. ever saw. The poor dear just made me take it, though she must have starved a week to make up for it."

Addie White, who had been studying her lessons for the next day, overheard this conversation, and it made a deep impression upon her. "Poor Miss Sanders," she sighed pityingly, "I wish I could help her."

A few days later Addie paid Miss Sanders a visit. "Next

Friday I shall be 12 years old, and I'm going to have a birthday party after school," she told her eagerly, "and I thought it would be just fine if you would make us some of your elegant cream candy. We'll need a lot of it, you know. There's going to be about a dozen to the party, and your candy is so good that everybody will want all they can get. Will you make me some?'

Miss Sanders hesitated and flushed. Addie was shrewd enough to guess that she was thinking of the expense comphiance with the request involved. "Please say you will," she urged. "Mother says you can come over to our house in the morning and make the candy, while she is doing her baking. Our kitchen is lots bigger than yours, and everything is handy, and there'll be only one mess to clean up."

Miss Sanders looked at her rather suspiciously. "Did your mother plan all that?" she asked solemnly.

"No'm, I thought of it myself," returned Addie. "Mother

"No m, I thought of it myself," returned addle. "mother didn't want me to ask you, at first, because she said it would be too much work for you."

"Oh, no! I like it," answered Miss Sanders, all her suspicions vanishing. "Fill come over then, Friday morning, picions vanishing. "I'll come over ther and make you all the candy you want."

Miss Sanders kept her word, and the delectable sweet-meats disappeared down the throats of the Goshen young people with remarkable rapidity. Miss King, Addie's teacher, complimented Miss Sanders on her skill in candy-making, and showed that she meant what she said by eating a generous quantity, much to the old lady's delight.

Miss Lewis, the postmistress, whom Rob Brown irrever-ently called "the old curiosity shop," stared wonderingly when Addie brought a little box addressed to "Mr. Albert Evans, Springfield, Mass.," to the postoffice next day, and mailed it. She would have been still more astonished had she seen the contents of a letter which Addie sent to the same address, which read thus:

"Dear Uncle: There's the loveliest old lady lives here, but she's as poor as poor can be and she's just as proud as she's poor, because her folks were rich once, but they're all dead and she's the only one of the family that's left and she's got no money and there ain't anything she can do. she makes the finest cream candy you ever ate and I'm sending some she made for my birthday party, for you to try and see if you don't think so too. I've been thinking that Springfield folks must eat lots of candy and why can't that Springheid tolks must eat lots of candy and why can't they eat Miss Sanders's as well as anybody else's? If I have her make some and send it to you, will you put it in your store to sell? Please do, uncle, for she's awful poor and I feel so sorry for her. Don't tell anybody about this; it must be a secret between you and me. Write and tell me how many pounds you want to begin with and how much you will pay for it. Your loving niece,

"Bless her dear heart!" exclaimed the head of the great firm of Evans & Co., when he had finished reading this epistle. "That girl is always thinking of some scheme to help other people. She certainly has a great head for business, too."

Miss Sanders was mending a rent in an apron one pleasant afternoon when Addie put in an appearance, her face

"Oh. Miss Sanders, something nice has happened to you!"

she exclaimed, coming at once to the point. "To me!" echoed Miss Sanders in amazement.

nothing very pleasant ever comes my way."

"Well, you just listen and see," returned Addie gayly, drawing a letter from her pocket. "It's all because of that candy you made for my party. You know I've got an uncle fin Springfield? He's just lovely, and of course I had to send him some of my birthday candy. This letter is from him. He wants to know whether 'the person who made that delicious, old-fashioned cream candy'—that's just ex-actly what he said, interpolated Addie, looking up from the letter and nodding her head emphatically, as she saw her listener's eyes open very wide in astonishment—'would be willing to give him the sale of it.' He says he is sure that willing to give him the sale of it. He says he is sure that he can sell a great deal, because there are many people who will pay a good price for pure, home-made candy. He'd like twenty-five pounds to start on, to see if it takes as well as he expects, and he'll pay 30 cents a pound for it, and he sent the money for it. There now!" concluded Addie, triumphantly, "ain't that nice?"

Miss Sanders gasped. The tears came to her eyes, but her heart bounded with thankfulness. "Mercy on me! I never heard of such a thing!" she incredulously exclaimed. "Don't folks in the city know how to make cream candy?"

"I s'pose they do," answered Addie, "but not as good as yours. Nobody can make it like you, no matter how hard they try. Everybody says so. You'll make the candy for uncle, won't you?'

"Why, yes, especially as he's paid for it already, at a good price, too," returned Miss Sanders. "But does your mother know anything about this?" she asked abruptly, a faint color coming into her pale cheeks.

"Why, no! She was over to Miss Smith's when father why, no: Sale was over to miss Smitrs when father brought me the letter, and I ran right over here the minute I read it," answered Addie, a trifle uneasily. She was afraid her secret would be guessed. The old lady looked much relieved at her reply. "I thought perhaps it was your mother's doings, and I couldn't be beholden," she said apologetically. "I'll start on the candy the first thing in the morning." apologetically. the morning."

"And I'll come in and help you after school. I want to see how you'll get along."

"Thank you, dearie. I hope I'll have good luck. I'm not used to making so much at one time."

III.

Deacon Brown's eyes almost fell out of his head at Miss Sanders's orders for sugar and other articles. In view of her meager purchases heretofore, he had an idea that she was "daft," a suspicion which her flushed cheeks and excited manner did not allay.

"It's a good thing I got a plenty of confectioners' sugar only last week," he remarked with pride. "You've about cleaned me out as 'tis. I don't generally get so much at one time, but it's fortunit I did. Best grade there is,

Early next morning Miss Sanders went to work on the andy. She watched her kettles anxiously, but luck favored her. Everything turned out just as it should, though all her pots and pans were pressed into service. While she was in the midst of her work Mrs. Marsh, the village gossip, put in an appearance.
"My land, but don't it smell good in here!" she exclaimed, sniffling audibly. "Why, you ain't making candy, are you?" she asked, with the most intense curiosity.

"Yes, I am," returned Miss Sanders.
"Do tell. What is it all for?"
"To eat."

Mrs. Marsh, though taken back by these curt answers, did not despair of getting more information, and continued to display the most lively curiosity. Finally, finding that all her efforts at "pumping" were in vain she went off in high Addie, when she called after school, found Miss Sanders Addie, when she called after school, found miss Sanders flushed but happy over her "beautiful luck." Of course Addie tasted the candy, and pronounced it the best she had ever eaten. Then she set to work, under Miss Sanders's direction, and the candy was daintily wrapped, weighed and packed. Nailing up the box was the hardest part of the work. Addie pounded the nails with the hammer, while Miss Sanders held them in position. Addie hit her thumbs several times, and Miss Sanders's fingers had more than one narrow escape, but the task was finally accomplished.

Miss Sanders was very happy over the result of her day's work. She had labored like a Trojan, and she was roughly tired out.

"Pll just be on needles and pins till I find out how the rill just be on needles and pins till I find out how the candy suits, and if your uncle will want any more," she remarked, anxiously. But even Addie did not suspect how eagerly the old lady prayed that Springfield folks would find her candy to their liking and she would be kept busy supplying the demand. Few Goshen people had any idea how far along on the road to the poorhouse Miss Sanders really was

After the cooking utensils had been washed and the kitchen tidied, Addie went home with a light heart, and wrote her uncle a letter which that gentleman cherished as

"Another letter from Uncle Albert!" announced Addie, rushing in upon Miss Sanders about two weeks later. "Good

"Your face tells that," answered the old lady, beaming. "But what does he say?"

"He says the candy sold twice as fast as he expected, and he wants you to make 100 pounds this time, and send it as soon as you can!" was the gleeful reply.

"Land of mercy!" ejaculated Miss San listening with breathless eagerness.

"And he's going to send you a barrel of sugar and a case of flavoring extracts, at the wholesale rate," continued Addie, "and he'll take the price off what he'll owe you. He mays that will be cheaper and better than buying in small ots, for he expects to have a demand for the candy right

Orders for the candy, which Uncle Albert judiciously advertised as "Cupid Cream Candy," continued to come so fast that she was obliged to make regular weekly shipments, and the demand is still growing.

As the dread of the poorhouse passed away, Miss Sanders came her old cheerful self, and even treated the inquisbecame her old cheerful self, and even treated the industrial title Mrs. Marsh with the utmost cordiality, while Addie is allowed to have all the candy she wants at any time, and she and Miss Sanders are the very best of friends.

PLAYING POETRY AS A GAME.

ILLUSTRATION OF THE WAY TO MANAGE A GOOD SORT OF IMPROMPTU AMUSEMENT.

By a Special Contributor.

Four, eight or twelve people can "play poetry" most successfully. If the party numbers a larger multiple of four, it can still be played if the leader keeps a tight rein over the stanzas, and does not let the amateur poets move about and mix up the order of the rhymes.

Notice is given out that the stanzas to be written will be quatrains. That is, the first and third lines will consist of eight syllables each; the second and fourth lines will consist of six syllables each. The company will pair off for the composition. The authors of the first and third lines of each stanza will sit side by side; the authors of the second and fourth lines will also sit side by side. The authors of the first lines will whisper to their partners the word with which their first lines end as soon as they have composed them; the authors of the second lines will do the same. Each person will count his line mentally, to be sure he has eight syllables if he is a first or third line rhymer, and six syllables if he is a second or fourth line rhymer. Closer poetic measurement than that of counting syllables is not possible in "playing poetry," and this fact often adds to the fun when a difficult rhyme must be matched.

Each thymer must get his line ready in the mind as quickly as possible. When the ball is set rolling by the first line being repeated by the leader, each one follows speedily in his order, and sometimes a very amusing if disjointed story is told by the chance piecing together of the lines.

Quite young boys and girls are often very successful in this game, and particularly enjoy playing it with their elders. Suppose, for example, that a party of players number twelve people. Suppose the mother leads off, telling her rhyming partner, a boy, that her first line of eight syllables ends with "gold." The father follows, telling his partner, a cirl that his line ands with "bright". For the second a girl, that his line ends with "bright." For the second stanza the aunt leads, whispering to her partner that her word is "earl." The eldest girl tells her partner that the second line of six syllables ends with "breeze."

For the third stanza the High School principal leads, telling the girl next him that his word is "sea." The boy who takes the second line tells the girl who takes the fourth and last line that his word is "golf." After a few minutes thinking allowed those who must match rhymes, the mother asks if all are ready, and when they all say "Yes," she recites her line and each recites in turn. The result is sure to be funnier than this:

How lovely are the curls of gold, When April moons are bright. The tramp ate all that he could hold, And wished his love good night.

And then arose the noble earl, There wasn't any breeze. She was a silly, giggling girl, You never saw such trees.

Across the land, across the sea, He was first-class at golf; They wondered what the truth could be, And then the girl ran off!

SOME OF THE UNITED STATES COINS THAT ARE EAGERY SOUGHT AFTER.

By a Special Contributor.

The demand for 1-cent pieces is so great that the Phila-delphia mint is compelled to turn out nearly four million per month to keep up the supply.

There are, at present, something like one billion pennies

If you want to exchange a $100 bill for pennies, you would get ten good, large bags full of coppers.

Nickel and copper coins have no mint marks, neither have coins issued at the Philadelphia mint. Collectors often pay high prices for coins bearing certain mint marks, which otherwise would not have been worth more than their face

The first United States cents struck for circulation bear the date 1793. They are of six varieties, and are valued at $2.50 to $6.25.

Of United States silver coins, the most valuable is the dollar of 1804. Its value to collectors is $1000. No other dollars are worth more than about $25. Fourteen of these 1804 dollars are known to exist.

More rare are the New York doubloons, coined in 1787, of which only five are known to exist. On one side of this Miss Sanders was more than busy after that. She hired rare and curious coin is a picture of the sun rising over a

The $5 gold piece of 1822 is a rare coin. At one time only two were said to be in existence, one in the Philadal-phia mint, the other in Boston, but a third was picked up in a New York money-changer's shop a few years ago.

"I was afraid at first that it might be a counterfeit,"

The man was so delighted to secure it that before leaving the shop was so delighted to secure it that before leaving the shop he bought several other coins which he didn't want. In Japan coins are generally of iron, and in Siam they are chiefly of porcelain. Whale's teeth form the coinage of the Fiji Islands. CACTI IN A BOTTLE,

WILL GROW WITHOUT AIR OR WATER AND FLOUR-ISH FOR YEARS AFTER BEING SEALED.

By a Special Contributor.

A new method of growing cacti has been discovered in the botanical gardens of Berlin. It is so simple and easy that no one need be without at least one fine cactus in the sitting-room or parlor. All that is required is a shapely bottle, a little rich earth and a few cactus seeds that can be bought of any florist for a few cents. Bottles in which creme de menthe or some of the other cordials usually come are well adapted to this purpose on account of the clearness of the glass and the grace of their shape. Having secured the bottle, cleanse it thoroughly and then put earth in it until the bottom is covered to a height of about an inch. Sprinkle this earth well, almost soaking wet, and then throw in three or four cactus seeds. Close the bottle snugly with a tight-fitting cork and seal it close with sealing wax. Tie a strong cord around the neck of the bottle and hang it in a window that the sun reaches for at least several hours every day. In cold weather the bottle must not be exposed to the air. The living-room, bottle must not be exposed to the air. The living-room, with a constant temperature of 70 deg. or more, suits the experiment admirably. Then the entire process of growth can be watched with no small interest. The opening and rooting of the seeds, and the gradual development of the plants will follow, almost as if by magic. Soon the cacti will be of such size that you can astonish your friends by a sight of them, and they will hardly believe you when you tell them that these plants are growing without any care or water. That they will so flourish for water is averaging the state of th or water. That they will so flourish for years is proven by this picture of a bottled cactus grown in the manner described at the Berlin Botanical Gardens, the bottle having been sealed up just five years ago.

EVE'S APPLE TREE.

The botanical curiosities of the island of Ceylon are replete with varied interest. One of them is "the forbidden fruit," or "Eve's apple tree." Its native name is Diwi Kaduru, Kaduru signifying "forbidden," and Diwi "tigers." The flower of this extraordinary production is said to emit a fine scent.

The color of the fruit, which hangs from the branches in a very peculiar and striking manner, is very beautiful, being orange on the outside, and a deep crimson within. The fruit itself presents the appearance of having had a piece bitten out of it. This circumstance, together with the fact of its being a deadly poison, led the Mohammedans on their first discovery of Ceylon, which they assigned as the site of Paradise, to represent it as the forbidden fruit of the Garden of Eden, for although the finest and most tempting in appearance of any, it had been impressed as the tempting in appearance of any, it had been impressed, such was their idea, with the mark of Eve's having bitten it, to warn men from meddling with a substance possessing such noxious properties.

A DOLL'S GYMNASIUM.

Did you ever see a doll gymnasium? Well, you can have one if your brother will help you. All that is needed is the common pocketknife and a little soft wood. Any boy can whittle out the bars shown in the diagrams, and set them for his sister. Take an ordinary cigar box lid, or any flat piece of board five or six inches square. Bore two holes in it, about four inches apart, and glue the whittled ends of the two uprights into them. Then put the horizontal piece in place by fixing its ends in the uprights, and you have a good horizontal bar for the dolls to practice on. The parallel bars are made in similar fashion, merely two horisontal bars, a little lower than the single one.

the swinging rings, make your uprights longer than in the other designs, and tie on two mosquito bar rings with "The admiral thanked me over and over again. He is twine.

Now, if you fix the doll's hands to the rings she will do all kinds of antics, after a little push, but don't be too rough or dolly will lose her arms. To make a doll swing, the uprights are made still longer, two little hooks are screwed into the horizontal bar, and then two pieces of strong twine are run down through the ends of bits of wood or cane, which keep dolly from falling out, while the bottom or seat of the swing is formed of a single light bit of board or pasteboard. The twine is knotted under the seat, and now pasteroard. The twine is knotted under the seat, and now dolly may swing safely as long as her mamma wishes. There is a chance for brothers and sisters to play together nicely, especially if the boys will not play too hard for the health of the dolls.

MARY PROCTOR IN A STAR ROLE.

[Woman's Home Companion:] One of the youngest and most successful of the women who have adopted astronomy as a profession is Miss Mary Proctor, by birth an Englishwoman, but by adoption an American. She is the daughter of Prof. Richard Proctor, whose death in 1888 was a severe blow to science

From her earliest years the little girl loved to gaze at the stars, and nothing gave her so much pleasure as when her father allowed her to catch a glimpse of the worlds in space through his big telescope. Prof. Proctor encouraged the child's embryo talent; she became his constant com-panion, and as she grew older his loving and faithful as-

Although unused to public speaking, the young girl acquitted herself admirably, her success being immediate. These lectures paved the way to a number of other engagements. At the present writing Mary Proctor's position is assured. She speaks before scientific societies, schools and in private houses. Her talks teem with instructive details, and are not too technical to interest even the unlearned. She has already delivered over two hun-dred and fifty lectures. This industrious young woman is, besides, a prolific writer, and is a contributor to a number of periodicals, both scientific and popular. Miss Proctor has written a book, entitled "Starland," which has had a large sale.

. A FABLE FOR THE VAIN.

A vain, silly lamb met a gay young fox, He bowed with a "How de do?" She made sheep's eyes at the swell young chap, Which is just what a lamb would do. He asked her to drive in his fine new cart, Of course she could not say nay; For the rig was neat, and he looked so smart, And her new hat came that day.

As they rode along through the cool green woods Such flattering things he said, Till the poor lamb's head was completely turned, And she blushed a rosy red.

"You're really most charming," the fox remarked, "As you are, and yet I'd prefer—"
He paused to consider; the lamb cried out,
"And how would you like me, sir?"

The villainous fox smacked his smiling lips, As he said, with a wicked wink, "I'd like you boiled for dinner, my dear, "Next day-lamb stew, I think!"

The lamb turned pale and tried to flee, She couldn't escape, of course; And old Mother Fox had her nicely served, With gravy and fine mint sauce.

The moral is plain as the nose t your face,

To flattery lend no ear; flatterer's always a dangerous chap, E'en though he won't boil you, my dear!

INTERESTING ROMANCE WOUND ABOUT AN ANCIENT INSTRUMENT.

From the Chicago Chronicle.

ALENTINE HAMMAN and his violin are known to every resident, every man and every chick within a score of miles of the little village of Millwood, Ind. No barn raising of the summer, no harvest home of the autumn, no snow-attended merrymaking of the winter is complete without the attendance of Valentine and his violin. Hamman is himself a maker of violins and has an interested history, but to the antiquary and the connoisseur his rare-toned old instrument possesses in its own story even a higher claim to attention.

Those learned in such matters profess that the marks upon the violin indicate that it was made about the mid-Gle of the sixteenth century in the little German village whose inlaid picture still graces the back of the ancient instrument. The sounding-board is of pear wood and the carved figure surmounting the neck is found only in the oldest violins known. Around the sides of the instrument appears a quaint inscription in monkish Latin and old Roman characters, of which a literal translation is:

I lived in the forest; I was cut by the ax; Alive, I was silent; Dead, I sing sweetly.

The name of Michael Sanner found no conspicuous place in the story of the war of the American revolution, yet he died a captain in the Continental army and was for a number of years chief body servant to Gen. Washington. It was Michael Sanner who brought to America 1776 this violin, his chief possession other than youth and a stout heart. He was a raw German lad, but had seen domestic service in noble houses in his own country and found little difficulty in entering that of the Com-

In this capacity he became the instrument of successfully balking the plot and securing the capture of two British officers who had elaborated a plan for the forcible carrying off of Washington himself. For this service he was commissioned a captain and as such served through the war.

Hamman, himself now a very old man, inherited the violin from his mother, who was Capt. Sanner's youngest daughter. He naturally regards it as a priceless heirloom, and, indeed, its intrinsic value must be large, for its pure tones seem to grow mellower with age, its ancient sound-ing-board to swell more resonantly as it sings of the forest where once it lived.

Sanner came to America during the rebellious days of 76, but he had served the nobility in his mother country in the capacity of body servant to such an extent that he easily won the attention of Washington. He was an ex-pert horseman and a violinist of rare ability. The general did not hesitate to install him in his corps of servants as chief, and it was while he served in this capacity that he distinguished himself as a brave man and won the title of captain for stealing a horse.

As near as can be gleaned, the incident occurred December 4, 1777, at the time of Gon. Howe's headquarters opposite the home of Lydia Darrah, in Philadel-Many will remember that Mrs. Darrah learned that two British officers of Howe's staff, who had engaged rooms at her home, to hold private meetings in, were planning to surprise Washington on the morning of the 4th, and thereby crush his army. Being loyal, she in-formed an American named Craig. That morning Michael was up carlier than usual, and, having groomed the horses, he strayed beyond the picket lines to a little log cabir where he had often gone before to get a glass of milk from the hand of the only daughter of the widow who lived there. The greased-paper windows of the little cabin looked brighter than usual. As he drew near the door a mixture of voices greeted his ear, and creeping close to the hole from which the latch-string ran he peeped in, and to his surprise there sat two British soldiers of Howe's staff devouring a meal.

The neighing of a horse just then attracted his attention. Proceeding to the place from which the noise came he discovered one of them—a handsome black. He mounted it and made a dash past the hut, just as the door of the place opened and the Britishers rushed out, sending a volley of oaths and bullets after him, one of the latter volley of oaths and bullets after him, one of the latter plowing its way through the front of the old violin, which Michael always carried in a large pocket in his ulster. His race for camp was short, and dashing up to the gen-eral's headquarters he told him his story and presented the horse to him. He was promoted for this deed, and Capt. Sanner did himself proud in the battle that fol-lowed.

During the terrible winter that followed the terrible Valley Forge affair, Michael made secret visits to the where he had learned to love the girl of the cabin. On these occasions Michael would play upon the violin the most tender melodies, and the tears that welled up in the maiden's eyes were jewels to him which he anished by some droll remark, and thus he wooed her.

The exciting events that followed until the close of the war necessitated the absence of Michael from his sweetheart, and, though he heard but rarely from her, he still remained true, and when he finally got his honor-able discharge he made all haste to the cabin, taking with him his complement of wealth, the old violin and a horse When at last he reached the place he bethought himself of the beard he had grown since he last visited the home, and wondered if she would know and receive him. idly, yet joyfully, he approached the door, drew the latch-string, and stood before the astonished mother and daughter, but they gave him no glad welcome as he had hoped for. Gray hairs had shown themselves above the mother's brow, and a sad, expectant look assumed the place where smiles were seen in time gone by.

its blood for the great cause. They gave a sigh of disappointment, as they had doubtless done many times before, in anticipation of the opening door revealing him for whom many tears had been shed, but they invited him in, and as he seated himself he began to tell them who he was, but they were hard to convince. He became almost desperate until the thought of the old violin seized him. After the girl had mentioned many little incidents to see if he remembered them she spoke of the old violin, telling him that if he was really the Michael of the stormy days just passed he would recall the characters that were engraved upon the rim of it, and which he had told her many times were Latin. As another proof she told him that her Capt. Michael had given her a card on which was written a facsimile of the characters and the translation, which, if she produced, he would duplicate from memory. She did so, and as she watched him write the characters she knew it was he who wrote the card, but to further convince her he drew the old violin from his old cloak, and the proof was positive, and ere the week had passed the old, old story was again told.

DE LINTON WING'S STARTLING ANNOUNCEMENTS IN THE LONDON TIMES.

[Albany Press Knickerbocker:] Some of the nabobs of the present-day advertising world who thing they are "the only pebbles on the beach" ought to take a trip down to Poughkeepsie and listen to the advertising narratives an old man there may relate to them. And the old man can substantiate his narratives with facts and proofs, and is not a mere yarn spinner like many of his degenerate successors. His name if De Linton Wing, and years ago he won for himself the tile of "progenitor of liberal advertising" by his extensive advertising of a famous brand of flour of which he was the proprietor—the Julian of Mr. Wing's greatest advertising feats was the insertion in the London Times, much to the surprise of the slow-going Britons, of a full-page advertisement of his famous brand of flour. It was claimed as a joke that Mr. Wing, who alone had the secret and the patent for the manufacture of the Julian Mills flour, introduced in the ingredients a moistening of alcohol and hops that gave pungency upon which many a family was mildly exhilarated every morning at breakfast, and he had as a part of his business accounts a letter from Lord Palmer-ston, Prime Minister of England, in which the latter ex-presses the thanks of Queen Victoria and her Ministry for bags of his flour, because, as the Minister said, of its elevating effects at each meal.

In the advertisement in the London Times Mr. Wing had such striking lines as these: "Julian Mills see the Queen;" "Palmerston gets his Julian cakes early and saves England's honor by reason of the daring spirit they infuse in him." In the middle of the page was a wood cut—a most terrible innovation for the London Times—of Mr. Wing seated between the Queen and Lord Palmerst who are both begging him to come to England and live at Windsor. To this Mr. Wing responds: "I am an Ameri-

One of Mr. Wing's greatest enterprises was during the great celebration of 1858, over the Atlantic cable. Albany turned out in great procession, at the head of which was the great wagon of D. L. Wing, made entirely of flour barrels. Sixteen flour barrels served as wheels, and thousands of barrel staves formed an awning over the body of the wagon, on which fifty young ladies in bakers' dress were conducting a mimic bakery of the Julian cakes. Thousands of Albanians were gratuitously served with bread that day from the Julian Mills flour, and at the home of nearly every poor family in the ward in which Mr. Wing lived were left that night a barrel of flour and a photograph of Wing and Queen Victoria.

WIRELESS TELEGRAPHY

From a Special Correspondent.

EW YORK, Sept. 29.—Great as has been the pleasure of the city of New York and its vast number of visitors in the main event of today, the monster naval parade, it has not been alone in absorbing public attention. Several side issues of importance have helped to make the day notable, and will take their place in the history of the great week, which has been as a magnifi-cent climax to the most wonderful eighteen months in the history of the United States. Chiefest of these side events has been the demonstration of the entire feasibility of wireless telegraphy by its young inventor, Signor Guglielmo Marconi.

For three days Mr. Marconi has bee nquartered on the steamship Ponce, of the New York and Porto Rico Steamsteamsnip ronce, or the New 10th and rotto kico Steamship Line, engaged in installing the powerful electric batteries and special instruments which go to make up the equipment of his invention. Few people have had opportunity to inspect his work during this time, and the marked reticence which is one of the characteristics of the man who has given to science a new wonder-a reticence which appears to be partly a natural trait and partly business prudence, and is entirely courteous and free from secretive suggestion—has resulted in little being known to the general public of his work of preparation.

It had been expected that the first trial of the system launching messages through the air without would have been made on Wednesday last, but the New York Herald, under whose auspices the experiments were made, with a view to wiring the progress of the interna-tional yacht races next week, had not succeeded in perfecting the necessary special arrangements for a connec-tion on shore. Today, however, all was in readiness, and after a brief delay, while the steamship Ponce vering for her position at the head of the line of the merchant marine, a flash of electricity darted through the air, still quivering with the sound of a five-minute ova-tion of whistles to the hero of the day, and a single spark of electricity received under the hand of the impatientlywaiting inventor announced that communication had b opened, and that on shore all was in readiness to receive opened, and that on shore all was in readiness to receive and send messages. Certain signals had been agreed upon, and the shore end was prepared to use the continental code in wiring, as more familiar to Mr. Marconi and his assistants than the more frequently used Morse method. The magic spark had announced that all was prepared, and the first message sent by wireless telegraphy in the United States followed instantly.

"S.S. Ponce." "V. V. V."

"M. M. Yes; here."
"M. Std. bi a Mo."

Of which the interpretation is: "Steamship Ponce.
Are you there?" "Message received perfectly. Yes; here."
"All right. Stand by a moment."

A brief delay ensued, after which communication was reopened and continued fininterrupted during the after-noon, twenty messages in all being sent and received. On board was stationed Lieut. John Blish, of the navy, under orders from Rear-Admiral Bradford, Chief of the Bureau of Equipment, to closely watch all experiments on the part of the United States navy. The third message dis-patched was by Lieut. Blish to his chief, as follows:

"Bureau Equipment, Washington, D. C.: Steamship Ponce under way in naval parade via Navesink Light

are a complete success. "Lieutenant United States Navy."

The time consumed in sending this message and re-ceiving the return signal from shore—"M. M." "Message received perfectly," was three minutes and ten seconds; ceiving the return signal from snore—"m. m." "message received perfectly," was three minutes and ten seconds; a time not rapid from the point of view of telegraphing by wire, but little short of marvelous for a message launched into space without guide or direction, and magically snatched from the air at a given place, accurately. Mr. Marconi expressed himself as entirely satisfied with the result of the day. He said: "Everything is to my satisfaction, and as I expected. We are ready to report the yacht races as they progress." Lieut. Blish could scarcely contain his enthusiasm. He expressed entire pleasure in the results of his inspection. "Mr. Marconi knows exactly what he is doing. He has passed the stage of experiments. I prophesy that his invention will cause a revolution in naval methods of signaling; that in a short time all the navies in the world will have in use his system of telegraphing without wires, with private codes and complete cipher equipment. Mr. Marconi has told me that by individualizing his machines it is possible to communicate between two points without the message being elsewhere received. Without withing the accuracy. cate between two points without the message being elsewhere received. Without wishing to say too much, I believe his invention to be one of the wonders of the cen-

The special equipments on board the steamship are a powerful battery, and transmitters and receivers of unique upper deck, where his headquarters is located, an insulated wire runs direct to the point of a whip, which, surmounting a sixtyfoot spar attached vertically to the foremast of the shi launched, to a point 140 feet above the instrument from which it is sent; Mr. Marconi being the direct authority by which I am able to state that without such an elevation of at least 135 feet his system in infeasible. The entire apparatus, while astonishingly simple in detail, has an appearance of greatest durability. It was managed by the broncho-breaker inventor with an ease and confidence that puts at rest all ing a vacation.

In appearance Mr. Marconi is young, various estimates placing his age from 28 to 32, with a strong probability that the smaller estimate is still too farge, and he is moderately tall and slight, and in manner quiet and re-tiring. His head is the head of a thinker and worker. His English is excellent, he being of English descent on his mother's side; and though talking little, his conversation is cultivated and refined, and his personality and manner entirely pleasing. I had the pleasure of sitting on his right hand at a luncheon where he was a guest of honor, and especially enjoyed the modest grace with which he received the many compliments paid him and the toasts to his success. The luncheon was served on board of the steamship Ponce during her trial trip, she being the first steamship constructed in the United States as the direct result of the Spanish-American war, to fill the need of in-States and Porto Rico. It was opened with "soup a la Dewey," punctured with "entrees a la Ponce," and concluded with "biscuit a la Marconi." It was the first occasion upon which the young inventor had been entertained socially in America. He expressed himself as gratified with his reception in this country, and responded to all good wishes with a quiet repose that left an impression of strength and confidence.

When questioned a little on his specialty, he stated that his invention was covered by sixty-seven patents, in this and other countries; that part of his process had been published, but that certain details were still secret; that tall buildings or elevations were not a hindrance to transmission, but a help rather, and that the secret and most intricate part of his apparatus was the receiver, upon it depending the deflection of the electric current from the air where it was at large to the instrument where it should be received and its message recorded. During the course of the yacht races the value of his system will be put to practical tests, and before this brief account of the young electrician and his marvelous application of the principals of his science can appear in the columns of The Times, his success or fallure in America will be known to the world. That it will be a success is little doubted by those who, during the past few days, have had an opportunity to examine, even superficially, his instruments and his ANNE RHODES.

THE QUAINT FOXES OF JAPAN.

In Japan, with its quaint, gentle people and its quainter, beliefs, even the foxes are not the same as they are in other countries. Here a fox is a plaything, a crea-ture to be harried and torn to pieces by dogs for sport. In Japan it is well to address a fox by the most honorable titles, to treat him kindly, place food for him, and be very glad when he goes. For in Japan foxes have great power, and it is not well to offend them. Many are the tales the little people whisper—whisper for fear the foxes will hear and take offense—about the deeds of Inari

They are popularly supposed to take up their abode with those whom they fancy—and, alas! also with those whom they do not fancy. And sometimes it is hard to decide which is the happier. For the foxes must be fed. And as there are always many in a family, and they do not visit singly, much rice must be consumed for them. Good luck comes from their arrival, however, but it is liable to be changed into the direct ill fortune at any moment. For the foxes are exceedingly sensitive, and a word carelessly spoken, nay, even a thought sometimes, will serve to send them off in a huff, and then all sorts of misfortunes will follow. When a man is seized with a fit in Japan they say "he is afflicted with foxes", or "he has made an enemy of the foxes."

Only half of the good done by foxes is genuine. A story Only half of the good done by foxes is genuine. A story is told of a woman who kept a little shop where rice was sold. Every night a tall woman entered the shop, bought some rice, laid two coins down upon the counter and left without saying a word. The woman would place the coins in a drawer and think no more of them. One day the woman entered the shop, bought her rice, but as she turned her back the shopkeeper saw a long white tail hanging below her dress. She cried out, and the woman hanging below her dress. She cried out, and the woman disappeared. Rushing to the drawer where she had placed her money, she found some coins and some dried leaves. Half of the money she had received was good; the other half had been bewitched and had turned back to dry

Sometimes houses will be shunned by the villager because it is supposed that foxes have taken up their abodes therein. Families supposed to be afflicted with the friendship of the foxes are rather left alone by the rest of the peasants, as it is never certain when the unwelcome guests will transfer their affections—and their preser others. And the villagers do not care to place temptation in their way. Families not having foxes are not allowed to marry into those having them, as when the foxes at-tach themselves to a family it includes in its affections all its members, even to those most remote. One of the most famous families in Japan claims its supremacy to be due to the good influence of the foxes, who have taken up their abode in that family.

All over Japan you will see images of the foxes—old gray foxes, with their noses chipped and their ears broken off; older foxes still, with a growth of moss on their backs; sly, alert foxes, with noses perked smartly in air; great foxes and little foxes, sages and clowns, all kinds land of the wistaria and the fan, and also showing in what respect the fox is held.

all other animals has been considered to exert great in-fluence and power. All nations have legends of which the cunning and intelligence of the fox is the theme.

Stephen Van Rensselaer, a New York broker, and wellknown society man, joined a wild West show as a broncho-breaker. He says that it is his method of enjoy Immense Grain Crop.

EVER in all the history of the great grain belts of California, with their wonderful yields of cereals, has any one section been favored with such an immense crop in any one season as has been San Luis Obispo and the contiguous territory this year. The greatest crop in the history of the State was grown this season in San Luis Obispo county and the immediate adjoining territory. Nothing like it has ever been known before. The San Luis Obispo Tribune says:

"Warehouses are already filled to overflowing; the Southern Pacific Company and the Pacific Coast Railway Com-pany are erecting additional buildings to accommodate the tremendous demands being made upon them both for storage purposes and for their own convenience.

"There is not an acre of land in this section that was sown in grain that has not returned over twenty sacks, and the number of acres where only twenty sacks have been secured can be counted on one hand.

"The average yield per acre will run about forty sacks. In some places it has run as high as seventy-five and a third sacks to the acre.

"There are mountains of grain already at the warehous of the Pacific Coast Railway in this city. Over forty thousand sacks of grain, mostly barley, are already now thousand sacks of grain, mostly barry, are the sacks are coming in at the rate of 3000 sacks per day. The large main storage house is nearly filled, and almost every available foot of space on the adjoining platforms are occupied by sacks of grain.
"While the remaining space in this building is being taken up, a force of men are unloading cars at the big shed which has heretofore been used for storing passenger coaches. Over forty thousand sacks will be placed in that structure.

"When all the available space has been utilized, roofs will be placed over the platforms which have already been erected, and additional room will thus be obtained.

"This will undoubtedly be made necessary as orders have already been received for room for storing of 40,000 sacks. "The grain is arriving in all kinds of cars, any kind of a car that can be loaded with the grain. It comes on flat a car that can be loaded with the grain. It comes on flat cars, box cars, coal cars and every other kind of car.

"Down at Nipomo the same conditions prevail. There is more grain there than there are accommodations for, and some of it is being sent here for temporary storage. Over twenty thousand sacks are lying on the ground there.

"And so the reports come from all sections of the county.

J. W. CHASE, proprietor of the Arlington Creamery, near J. Riverside, has arranged for the erection of a first-class creamery near West Riverside. The Riverside Enterprise

Mr. Chase is an old-time butter-maker, and his marked success with the Arlington Creamery insures the same with the new one, though he will hereafter have two to look after. "This move will be of marked benefit to the West Side, enabling the ranchers to have a steady and profitable market for their hay; and besides it is another move in the right direction toward supplying our people with home product and keeping our money at home.

"The Riverside Land and Irrigating Company is backing the project and intends to put in fifty cows at the beginning,

A Water Heater.

A WATER heater, for which great things are claimed, has been invented by T. Pattison, a San Luis Obispo man. The San Luis Obispo Breeze says:

"C. A. Barlow and T. Pattison went to San Francisco this morning with a sample of the new water heater upon which Mr. Pattison recently secured a patent from the United States government.

"Mr. Barlow has a one-fourth interest in the patent and the men went to the northern city to consider propositions for the manufacture and distribution of the new device. Several offers have been made, but it is as yet a matter of conjecture as to which one will be accepted.

"The new heater is a marvel in its line and although the manufacture has not been commenced, many applications have been made by persons who desire to handle it. It is the intention of Messrs. Pattison and Barlow to make the heaters in the East on the largest scale and to have their manufacture conducted at San Francisco to supply the

"The gas burners which are attached to the heater will consume sixty feet an hour. According to the price of gas in San Francisco thirty gallons of water, or enough for a bath, can be heated in ten minutes at a cost of r r-2 cents. This entails the burning of ten feet of gas.

"When applied to a coal or wood stove, the heater will act as a substitute for the old water back. It will take the position of the first joint of the stove pipe, and to the observer cannot be told from that section of the flue.

"The secret of the success of the heater is the interior arrangement of the cylinder. It is so arranged with coils and disks that all the heat generated by the stove or the burning gas passes over the water several times, yet it is so quickly done that the water is heated in a few seconds. After once passing through the heater the water comes out steaming hot. When attached to a tank on a stove the arrangement permits the water to circulate and recirculate

"Chief Moore of the United States Patent Office, who has held that position for the last forty years, said that the Pattison-Barlow device was the best one which had been entered at that office since he took charge.

"The San Francisco gas people have intimated a good proposition to Messrs. Pattison and Barlow. They sent an agent to this city a few days ago to investigate the utility of the heater, and their offer will be among those considered by the—ewners of the patent."

Electric Power Project.

AS A RESULT of the labors of Prof. C. G. Baldwin, who Acquired power rights on Mission Creek, eighteen miles east of Redlands, about five years ago, a company has been formed, known as the Lake View Valley Power Company. in which several Pasadena citizens are interested. Pasadena News says:

"The capital stock is $200,000, of which $75,000 is taken in Pasadena by the following gentlemen: Dr. Norman Bridge, Rev. E. L. Conger, Isaac Bailey, A. I. Gammon, C. A. Leavens and E. B. Mapel, who will be its manager. Other stockholders are as follows: W. F. Botsford, C. H. Howland, F. H. Rindge, George I. Cochran, C. J. Baldwin and James McFadden.

"The company intends to develop 1000-horse power by turning the water of Mill Creek and its tributaries over a precipice with 2100 feet fall. At the bottom of this abyss transformers will be placed and the power converted into electricity and conducted over a thirty-mile circuit through Lake View and Perris. His proposes to furnish this power to land-owners for the purpose of pumping their irrigating water. It is a unique scheme to use water to pump water, but it is hailed with delight by the people of that fertile valley. for it is 30 per cent, cheaper than the that fertile valley, for it is 30 per cent. cheaper than the power now used. "The recent dry seasons have set these farmers to work and as a result a hundred wells have been sunk and several thousands of inches of water developed. It has been demonthousands of inches of water developed. It has been demonstrated that an inexhaustible supply of water underlies all that valley, and all that is needed to make it bloom like the rose is the cheap power that is now promised.

"The promoters of this enterprise are known as success-

"The promoters of this enterprise are known as successful business men, men of integrity and good citizens and worthy of success which they will no doubt attain. While they are getting interest on their investment they can rightly be looked upon as benefactors to their fellow-men, for through their efforts a suffering section of our land will be brought to a high state of cultivation so that it can compute with any other in accounts. compete with any other in agricultural products."

The Biggest Lemon Grove.

E MORY E. SMITH, writing in the San Francisco Chronicle, describes the biggest lemon grove in the world, at Chula Vista, near San Diego. Following is an extract from the article:

"The forty-two miles of territory of which Chula Vista is a part, was acquired by Frank A. Kimball from one F. L. A. Rioche, a Frenchman, June 16, 1868, at a cost of $30,000. Water was scarce, and the country was given over to roving bands of cattle and sheep. Early in 1869 Mr. Kimball secured twelve lemon trees from the North, paying $2.50 each for them, and this was the foundation of the great lemon industry of San Diego county.

"In May of the same year he paid W. D. Carlton of Tia Juana $800 for a lot of small seedlings of lemons, oranges and limes. These were planted to orchard in 1871, but all are now dead excepting some fifteen or twenty trees. Several hundred were given to the nighbors, but as they had

are now dead excepting some fifteen or twenty trees. Several hundred were given to the nighbors, but as they had to be waitered from wells nearly all perished.

"The San Diego Land and Town Company was organized in 1882 to develop the estate. Work on the great Sweetwater dam and irrigation system was begun November 24, 1886. April 14, 1888, the practical completion of the dam and pipe system was celebrated.

"Commercial development of the lemon industry began in 1887, when Thomas Williams planted a grove, its success being made possible by the advent of piped water.
"There is now in the Chula Vista colony 4600 acres in orchard, of which 3000 acres are lemons, the balance being devoted to oranges, walnuts and pumelos.

"The Land and Town Company has 1000 acres in lemons, of which 300 acres are in full bearing; 200 acres in oranges, 150 in pumelos and 100 in walnuts. There are about 300 small growers who own groves of frem five to ten agree each.

"The Sweetwater dam, which is eight miles distant, is the life-giving fountain of Chula Vista. It has a capacity bon coils on the inside, so that the water runs through sixty-five feet of the heated coil in thirty seconds.

"When given a test yesterday in Mr. Pattison's store water flowing through a tank at the rate of one gallon a minute was raised from a temperature of 60 deg. to .162 deg. in thirty seconds. "In March last, when it became apparent that no more rain would fall, three pumping plants were established in the dry bed of the Sweetwater River—one above and two the dry bed of the Sweetwater River—one above and two below the dam. Each plant was supplied with two strings of wells, twenty to twenty-four wells on a string. No. 1 developed, at a depth of fifty feet, a capacity of 2,500,000 gallons per day; No. 2, 1,750,000 gallons, and No. 3, in the old river channel in the bed of the dam, 1,000,000 gallons. The latter flow was secured at a depth of twenty-three foot.

"This gives a per diem flow of over 5,000,000 gallons. This immense volume of water is pumped directly into the 36-inch mains. It is proposed to abandon No. 3 when the dam fills with water next winter, but Nos. 1 and 2 will be kept in repair for future emergencies. Oil is used for fuel.

"There is a fall of about ninety feet from the dam to the higher orchards. The water is distributed through seventy miles of pipes, ranging from thirty-six to four inches in diameter, not including small service pipes. There are 1050 water taps on the system. An acre foot is allowed for the season's run (an acre of water twelve inches deep.) Some of the growers have private reservoirs, holding from 50,000 to several million gallons; these are allowed to fill up, the grove is then irrigated all at once, a considerable saving of labor being effected.

"The season for the use of water begins in May and lasts The season for the use of water begins in may at tasts until September, from three to five irrigations being given. The usual method pursued is to plow from one to three furrows on each side of a row of trees, and allow small streams of water to run down them slowly until the ground is thoroughly saturated. The basin system is resorted to where the ground is naturally uneven or is poorly graded. When the ground is even and the water supply sufficient one man can irrigate ten acres in two or three days. After irrigation the ground is cultivated two ways as coon as it is sufficiently dry, which will be in three or four cays. All water is served through meters at a cost to the consumer water is served through meters at a cost to the consumer of a cents per 1000 gallons.

"The planting of the Land and Town Company's great 1000-acre lemon orchard was begun in 1890, in which year 170 acres were set. The acreage has since been annually increased. The varieties chiefly planted have been the Lisbon, Eureka and Villa Franca. The improved type of the Villa Franca has, withal, proved the most satisfactory. It is of fine form, practically seedless, and produces heavily in summer, when the fruit is in greatest demand.

The trees are now being worked on California sweet stock, which has proved as good, if not better, than anything that has been tried. The trees budded on Florida stock look distressed. Quite small trees are used for planting." They are usually set from twenty-four to twenty-

"Plowing is done in January, the ground being stirred from six to eight inches in depth. A three-share gangplow is used. In the older groves from seventy-five to one thousand pounds of citrus-fruit fertilizer is applied annually per acre. It is immediately plowed under. The land receives in all from ten to twelve cultivations during

"In pruning, experience has taught that an open low head is best, and the entire lemon grove, as well as most of those in Southern California, are being pruned over to conform to that type. The heavy pruning is done when the trees are dormant, and the second dressing when they are

The diameters of the rings in common use are two and a quarter inches, two and a half inches and two and five-eighths inches. One man can pick from twenty to forty boxes ter inches, two and a half inches and two and hypersum inches. One man can pick from twenty to forty boxes per day. "The Land and Town Company's packing-house is a large brick structure, with a floor space 150x100 feet. It is located in National City, a few rods from the beach, between the tracks of the Santa Fe and the National City and Otay Railroad Company's tracks. The building is raised from the ground, so that ventilation may be perfect, as this is conducive to the proper curing of the fruit. The capacity of the warehouse is one and a half cars perday. There are two other packing-houses in Chula Vista to handle the output of the small growers; a good many lem-

In winter the boxes are allowed to remain undisturbe weeks, with sorting, but in summer about ten days is sufficient to complete the sweating and coloring process.

"Washing and brushing is only resorted to in extreme cases, as the process lessens the keeping qualities of the fruit, but all of the lemons when taken from the sweat boxes are wiped clean and sorted into three grades, each man disposing of from twenty-five to forty boxes per day. The fruit is now allowed to stand for a few days and is then wrapped and packed for shipment, from twenty-five to thirty boxes being considered a good day's work for a packer. The labor of picking, wiping, sorting and packing costs from 16 cents to 17 cents and the box, labels and wrappers

"Boston is the favorite market for Chula Vista oranges, but the lemons are shipped to the Northwest and Middle-west States, a few cars finding their way to San Francisco and the East.

"But alas, what of the culls, the bruised, split, thorned, under and over-sized lemons, though of the same sunnygolden hue and nurtured by the same roots and broad leaves? They are victims of man's fancy and their end is ignoble. They will never enrich the cut-glass punch bowl, whet the small boy's picnic appetite, nor flavor the juicy pie, but go in a motley mass to the citric acid factory, adjoining the big packing-house. Five dollars a ton is their pie, but go in a motiey mass to the citric acid lactory, ad-joining the big packing-house. Five dollars a ton is their rated value and when they reappear it is in the form of lemon oil and clear glassy acid crystals. Did you ever taste citric acid? Well, go and get a lump of alum and a green persimmon and chew hard, and you will have the prototype of the spirit of the lemon."

Coal at Santa Barbara.

WHILE working in a water tunnel recently, near Santa Barbara, known as the Whitehead (tunnel, the mer W Hills working in a water tunier teachty, and the men ran into a pocket of what is said to be anthracite coal. The Santa Barbara News says:

"The specimen showed was of a fine rich quality, harder

by far than the coal usually used about here

That may result from this find cannot certainly be told at this time. There is no knowing what a workable mine may be found back in the mountains. Several persons, ever, have found coal here in small quantities, but no ever located a big coal mine upon this wes coast. Still the tunnel has produced a specimen of a very

"It would, however, be but a half fortunate thing if this tunnel should develop coal rather than water. Montecito can afford to buy coal, but it can't buy water. Perhaps the tunnel will furnish both."

Underground Specimens.

THE Redlands Facts tells of some interesting specimens that were brought up by the drill in boring a well near San Bernardino. The Facts says:

"Mention has been made in several exchanges of the striking of a large cedar tree or log, at a depth of 280 feet, in putting down a well on the Oaxley place, northeast from San Bernardino. Curious and compartively rare things are often brought to the surface in the core of a drill driven deep into the earth and rock in pursuit of water, minerals, etc. From this vicinity none have been produced, which excel in interest, perhaps, some specimens brought to this office a few days since, which came from a depth of from 115 to 130 feet in a well, recently sunk by O. Roberts of El Casco, about two miles west of that place and one-half mile east of the Moreno railroad turnoff. From a depth of eighty-four feet a petrifaction was brought up which closely resembles the tooth of a quadruped known in paleontology as an iguanodon. At a depth of 115 feet the roots, bark and cones of a tree were discovered, all in a fairly natural condition. Another petrifaction came from a depth of 135 feet and is of the forearm or leg of a quadruped, and corresponds to the lower part of the ulna, or lower part of the fibula in the human. At the depth at which water was struck, 150 feet, the first flow was of a brownish color, and contained particles of vegetable matter and traces of oil. After a few hours' discharge, however, all impurities disappeared and the water coming from this well is now perfectly pure and clear. Such an odd collection from well might excite more speculation, were it not for the fact that all wells in this valley, so far as we know, are sunk wholly in drift matter, brought down from the mountain ranges and is of undetermined depth in many places."

E VERY few months some enterprising citizen of Southern California gets up a new wave motor. That hundreds of these inventions have proved failures during the past few years does not seem to discourage the inventors. The on of the latest al invention a kind, for which much is claimed, is from the Land of Sun-

"The problem of harnessing the ocean waves, of saving and applying to the wheels of progress some part of that incalculable energy which is daily wasted on every seacoast—a power so vast that a tiny fraction of it conserved and directed would suffice to drive the machinery of every industry on earth, is so important that it will not go un selved for want of effort.

"Many inventions, designed to utilize this vast power, have been tried; and some have fallen but little short of

ess. Yet so glittering a reward as awaits the success ful wave motor will bring it, if it is within human power and ingenuity. The chief difficulties have been, first, how to control the force of the waves so as to produce a steady and even power suitable for mechanical purposes; second to provide against storms; third, to devise an automatic ptation to the tide, high or low; and fourth, to protect

"Messrs. H. T. Hollingsworth, A. Lee Perley and A. R. Hamilton of Los Angeles, Cal., inventors of the Pacific Wave Motor, have been granted a patent on their invention which is arousing decided public interest, and believes that it has solved these knotty problems. The inventors have profited by the mistakes or shotcomings of other motors, and are confident that they have overcome all these

"The plans of this wave motor consist principally of a wharf, floats, displacement hydraulic pumps, and a water-wheel. The wharf is constructed so that the floats are located where the best average waves or ground swells are obtainable, which is out just beyond where the waves begin to break. There are two floats, 20x16 feet each, fastened together in tandem by heavy rails sixty feet long. An open space is left between the two floats so that a double action is received from each wave. The float is connected with a 12-inch displacement hydraulic pump by means of cables passing up through the wharf and running over pulley wheels and fastened to the plunger. As the float rises with the waves a counter-weight, which is connected with the end of the plunger, keeps the cable tight and at the same time pulls the plunger out ready to be forced in again as the float lowers.

"Each float is loaded to the weight of twenty-five tons "Each float is loaded to the weight of twenty-five tons. This produces a pressure of 440 pounds to the square inch in the pumps, forcing the water into a receiver containing air. This, being compressed to the same pressure, forms a cushion and produces a perfectly steady stream of water which is forced upon a waterwheel. From there the water drops into a supply tank, where a pipe leading direct to the pumps, furnishes the pumps with a supply of water. Thus the same water is used over and over; and as fresh water is used over and over; and as fresh water is used in the pumps, as would be water is used it does not rust out the pumps as would be the case with salt water.

"The pipe leading from the receiver to the waterwheel s provided with a throttle valve which can be gauged to govern the action of the floats, so that they cannot lower faster than the water is released from the receiver, than giving perfect control of the floats in case of storms and waves; because the floats will be allowed to drop only at the rate of a certain number of feet per minute, according to how high and fast the waves are coming in. As the swells vary from three to eight per minute, it is de-clared that this throttle valve will govern and produce a perfectly steady power from the intermittent motion of the "Many wave motors are able to work only when the tide is at a certain height. This motor claims to have over-come that feature by making the hydraulic pumps twenty feet long, which allows the plunger to work at all tides, feet long, which allows the plunger to work at an trues, high or low.

"The plan adopted by this wave motor in guiding the floats is quite simple. A traveler carried on an arm from the deck of the float runs on a heavy steel guide cable-bridged out about a foot from the piles, thus forming a spring to take up the force of each blow and protect the piles and floats completely. This arm is also provided with a traveler at the other end and allows the float to take its natural sway backward and forward. There is also a long guy cable, connected with the floats, and anchored one hundred cable, connected with the floats, and anchored one hundred or more feet from the floats, to relieve all strain from the

"The floats are ballasted with water and provided with walves by which they can be filled or emptied in a very short time, also partitions are constructed within the floats to keep the water from moving when the float is in motion. "Engineers who have investigated and figured out the working capacity of the motor, say that a little more than one-horse power can be developed for every foot of ocean frontage used, and that the cost to build and maintain a large plant will not exceed the cost of a regular steam

"Fuel is the greatest item of cost in generating po but a wave motor has the advantage, because its fuel is furnished by the wave motion free of cost."

San Diego County Raisins.

THERE are about fifteen thousand acres of grape vines in Cajon Valley of San Diego county, most of which are dried for raisins, although some are made into brandy. During the past two weeks grape picking has been in full swing. The San Diego Sun says:

"About five hundred pickers are employed, according to

Mr. Hill, manager of the Bostonia Store. Of these, 125 are employed on the Boston ranch. Indian help is used almost exclusively, and the average wages paid are 75 cents and

"But grape picking is hard work, and so much difficulty has been experienced in getting help that an advance is likely to be given another year. The picking season will last a good two weeks, possibly fifteen working days, so, counting provisions, about $7000 will be paid out for labor in the valley within the next fortnight.

"After an interval of a week or more, if the sun continues to shine, stacking and raisin packing will begin and in a short time the crop will be moving. According to unani-mous opinion the quality of the fruit this year is unsurpassed, but the quantity, owing to the drought, is short. Manager Nichols of Boston ranch and others estimate the crop at from one-half to three-fifths that of a full year, although it is turning out much better than was at arst expected. The export crop of '97 was ninety-four cars, and of last year it is estimated at fifty-five cars. At an average of 3 1-2 cents, a very conservative price, the gross returns will be about $22,000."

Profitable Tailings.

S INCE the introduction of improved methods of extracting minerals, many refuse dumps of ore and tailings, iich were formerly considered worthless, are turning out to be bonanzas. The tailings of the celebrated Stonewall mine in San Diego county are now being worked. A correspondent of the Fruit World says:

"When the Stonewall mine was being operated the cyanide processes, if not quite unknown, were anyhow but rarely followed. Hence there was left behind as worthlers a vast pile of so-called tailings. Altogether, approximately, 75,000 tons. Two enterprising and experienced miners 75,000 tons. I'wo enterprising and experienced miners bought this pile from the bank alluded to, with privilege of use of buildings and grounds. Since last March they have been extracting gold from the tailings, employing about twenty men, paid from $2 to $3 per day, and furnishing labor to people cutting firewood under contract. Already 15,000 tons of tailings have thus been turned to account, and probably a whole year will be required to dispose of what is left. Of the two purchasers one is on the spot, and directs all the operations. He is a man in the full strength of life. He has been connected with work in mines ever since he was 11 years old, and has, by reading and testing, given himself a scientific education. His laboratory, where he has an assistant very much like himself, would not be out of place at a respectable college."
